200,000 WELCOME NIXON ON ARRIVAL IN BELGRADE

PRESIDENT NIXON flew into Yugoslavia Wednesday to a friendly but restrained welcome from 200,000 persons who lined a 15-mile motorcade route applauding and shouting, "Neex-on, Neex-on." The first American president to visit the communist nation, Nixon was mobbed twice when he stepped from his car and waded into the crowd. He shook hands and shouted in Serbo-Croatian, "Hvala Leppo" (thank you very much). Afterward, Nixon, beaming, called the welcome "magnificent" and "very heart-warming." The President arrived from Naples, Italy, where he presided earlier in the day over a high-level review of the post-Nasser outlook in the Middle East and warned of the "very great danger" that could result from the uncertain changeover in Egyptian leadership. The subject was expected to dominate Nixon's formal talks with Yugoslav President Tito, a close friend of Nasser and other Arab leaders, who now emerges as the undisputed leader of the nonaligned nations.

MILLIONS IN ARAB WORLD PAY TRIBUTE TO NASSER

THEY CAME TO CAIRO in millions Wednesday—the mighty and the Egyptian peasant stock into which he was born—to pay tribute to Gamal Abdel Nasser. His body lay in a wooden coffin encased in ice, as it will be until the state funeral Thursday. The temperature in Cairo was 95 degrees. Swathed in black and near collapse, Mrs. Tahia Nasser visited the tiny clinic at the Kubbeh palace, where her husband lay. With her were her three sons, two daughters and their husbands. She conferred for 11 minutes with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, who headed the list of foreign dignitaries. They were banned from viewing the body, under Moslem law, but signed a special book. Government officials said 17 heads of state, nine prime ministers, two vice presidents and scores of other ministers and official envoys would take part in the funeral. It was estimated as many as five million persons would take part in the funeral. Untold thousands swarmed into Cairo.

ARAB GUERRILLAS REPORT ATTACKS BY JORDANIAN ARMY

PALESTINIAN guerrillas said the Jordanian army launched heavy attacks Wednesday against guerrilla positions in northern Jordan under cover of mortar and machineguns and that the guerrillas were fighting back to repel what they called a serious breach of the cease-fire. Peace returned to Amman and Arab truce officials began moving the Jordanian army and guerrilla troops out of the capital city as part of a three-stage agreement signed in Cairo by King Hussein and guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat. Israel watched developments closely. The third stage of the peace plan calls for the guerrillas to take up positions along the border with Israel and Premier Golda Meir said such a plan was unacceptable. The implied threat was an Israeli strike at the new guerilla bases.

BRITISH FREE GIRL GUERRILLA IN DEAL FOR HOSTAGES

THE BRITISH government Wednesday freed Leila Khaled, the girl guerilla who tried to hijack an Israeli airliner, and flew her to West Germany enroute to Cairo. The British government said West Germany and Switzerland were also releasing six other Arab commandos held for attacks on airliners to fulfill their part of the bargain for the safe release of all hostages aboard three jetliners hijacked to Jordan. Miss Khaled, 24, was captured when she and an American tried to hi-jack an El Al Israel airlines Boeing 708 over the North Sea on Sept. 4. The attempt was foiled by security guards aboard the plane who shot and killed her male acomplice.

FBI'S HOOVER CONDEMNS MURDERS OF POLICEMEN

FBI DIRECTOR J. Edgar Hoover Wednesday condemned a spreading wave of murders of policemen which he said threatens the nation's entire law enforcement system. "Only an aroused citizenry and swift and certain punishment by the courts can reduce felonious acts against police," Hoover said. "When a law enforcement officer dies at the hands of a killer, part of our system of law dies with him." In a statement contained in the FBI's monthly Law Enfrocement Bulletin, Hoover blamed a growing "lack of respect for the law" for causing the rising trend of murders of policemen. "The role of the policeman becomes increasingly dangerous," he said.

HOUSE VOTES $92 MILLION TAX TO GUARD AIRLINERS

THE HOUSE voted $92 million in higher air passenger taxes Wednesday to pay for a corps of 2,500 armed air marshals to guard against the "mounting danger" of airplane hijackings. Amid only scattered opposition that guards firing bullets might endanger passengers and the aircraft, the House sent the bill to the Senate on a 323-17 roll call vote. The measure would raise the 8 per cent passenger tax on domestic flights to 8½ per cent, and the $3 head tax on international passengers to $5. The Nixon administration requested the tax increase to pay for the air marshals.

RHODES ASKS NIXON TO MAKE AGNEW 'RESPONSIBLE'

JOSEPH RHODES JR., the only student member of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest, called on President Nixon Wednesday to "make the vice president responsible" and assume leadership in ending campus turmoil. Rhodes, 22, a black and a Junior Fellow at Harvard University, termed "regrettable" Vice President Spiro Agnew's criticism Tuesday of the commission's report. Agnew's critique, Rhodes told a news conference at Harvard, "takes place before the President has had a reasonable opportunity to consider the report of the commission." He said the effect of Agnew's statement "has been to convince many Americans not to take our report seriously." Agnew called the report, made public Saturday, "imprecise, contradictory and equivocal," and said it provided "more pablum for permissivists" by rationalizing student disruptions. "It's my opinion the vice president is acting independently of the President and by so doing is contributing to a most grave situation," Rhodes said. "I find it more regrettable that Agnew would attempt to limit the President's options by publicly condemning the report while the President is out of the country." He called on Nixon to "forcibly deny suport for political figures who attempt to divide us."

Lipof Wants Plan, If Any, Made Public

School Board Upset By Alderman's Drug Query

Members of the Newton School Committee and the School Department on Monday night expressed distress over a resolution submitted by an aldermen concerning the drug program in the local schools.

Alderman Michael Lipof has submitted to the Board of Aldermen a resolution requesting that the School Committee direct the Newton Superintendent of Schools to make public its plan of action to combat the drug situation "presently existing in our school system." The resolution will probably come up for board action on Monday night.

Superintendent Aaron Fink and School Committee Chairman Manuel Bechwith maintained on Monday night that Lipof had never asked to see the program or any plans for programs.

Lipof, who was present for the discussion at Monday night's School Committee meeting, replied that he had talked informally with the Superintendent about the school's role in the problem, following a PTA meeting. "He indicated that there is little the schools can do," Lipof said.

"That's a gross misquote," Fink responded.

Lipof also said he had spoken informally with two

City Organizes To Prevent Fire Here

Family fire drills and open house at all Fire Stations are among the things marking National Fire Prevention Week in Newton, according to Newton Chief Frederick A. Perkins Jr.

October 4 to 10 has been proclaimed by President Nixon, the Governor - General of Canada and in many other countries.

Cooperating in planning for Newton's observance are the Chamber of Commerce, merchants, and businesses, service and civic clubs, schools and youth groups, veterans', women's and social organizations. Other features will be exhibits, inspections and children's activities.

"Fire kills about a thousand persons each month in this country," says Chief Perkins. "Each year some 2,242 fires destroy $2.4 billion worth of property."

"The real tragedy of this," says the Chief, "is that much of the waste of life and property is avoidable. If the basic rules of fire safety were observed at home and on the job, the record would be far different.

"Fighting fires is the job of every citizen every day of the year. Fire hurts," concludes the local fire administrator.

Elaborating on his recent statement that he intends to continue as Mayor of Newton until his present term ends if he is elected to the State Senate, Basbas declared:

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

By JAMES G. COLBERT

Ted Kennedy Running Hard Even Though Seen Sure Winner

Senator Edward M. Kennedy sat back, talked about his campaign for reelection, the Democratic State ticket with which he is running, what the Nixon administration has been doing and what he believes it should be doing.

He expressed the conviction that the Democratic ticket is a strong one. Ted referred to Mayor White as "a candidate for Governor who understands the urban problems" and said that Robert H. Quinn "has done a good job as Attorney General."

"I feel comfortable running with them," Ted declared.

Although political experts are almost unanimous in their opinion that Senator Kennedy will be re-elected on Nov. 3, Ted is running as hard as if he were a "hungry" candidate. On the day before our interview, he had left his home at 5:45 in the morning and didn't return here until 11:30 at night.

Basbas Letter Tells Bad News

Property Holders' Bill; A Whopping $17-Million

Bills totalling $37 million have been received by Newton's property owners, who this year were assessed at a tax rate of $113.

The bills went into Newton's homes along with a letter from Mayor Monte G. Basbas.

The city needs $49,513,953 to operate this year and just under three-fourths of this comes from the real estate tax. The rest comes from state aid, personal property and motor vehicle excise taxes, water department income, local school income, city revenue and surplus accounts.

Payable November 1, the property tax monies will take care of a budget 42.71 per cent of which goes to run the city schools, 13.49 of which will finance the Public Works Department and 11.23 will pay police, fire, and other public safety expenditures, to name the largest budget items.

"Every possible step has been taken to prune the city's budget down to the bare bone," Mayor Basbas told the taxpayers. He cited the drop in state aid and the rise in state and county assessments as a factor in the tax rise along with the inflation, higher school costs, labor demands for higher wages and citizens' demands for more and better services.

His letter included a chart which demonstrated that compared to other municipalities of similar size, Newton tax picture is favorable.

Other breakdowns in Newton's budget this year are 5.75 per cent for all other general government services and 5.11 for debt services.

Summer Curriculum In Newton Improves With Less Expenses

In presenting a report on summer curriculum work by teachers in the school system, Dr. J. Bernard Everett, assistant superintendent for instruction, told the Newton School Committee on Monday night that though less money was spent than four or five years ago, a better job is being done.

There is far less curriculum writing, more in-service education of teachers and much more examination and selection of materials and discussion. Many more teachers work intensively for a brief period of time, Dr. Everett said.

A total of 143 teachers were involved in summer curriculum activities in addition to 10 central staff coordinators and specialists, Dr. Everett noted in a report. The largest number were employed for no more than a week. They were engaged either in an intensive training program or orientation to a new position.

Those who were engaged in planning new programs, writing units, or in revision of existing materials generally worked for 2, 3, or 4 weeks.

Teachers developed new technical-vocational courses as electives for the regular high school student. New units in English were produced for use in the junior high schools. Course materials in junior high school social studies were revised, based upon a year's experience with them. The high school course in American History was rewritten and new teaching materials were selected.

New courses in ecology were developed for the two high schools. Agreements were reached by department representatives from each of the junior high schools on what should be covered at each grade level in science and mathematics, according to the report.

In science, social studies and mathematics, new junior high school teachers were given a week of intensive help from experienced teachers. Teacher specialists in science and mathematics in the elementary schools had a week of specialized preparation for their jobs. A significant number of experienced teachers explored new teaching methods and exchanged ideas for a week or more.

The report on summer curriculum activities also noted that for periods ranging from one to four weeks, different groups of teachers dealt with such needs as reviewing materials and updating the guide in Drug Education, reviewing the past year and planning for the opening of school at Murray Road, planning for a closer involvement with the community in Day-Harvard Project, and planning a program and collecting instructional materials for a group of alientated students at South High School.

Dr. Everett also reported that a committee is currently working on a proposal for a summer school in 1971 which would combine in-service education for teachers, the development of curriculum materials and a worthwhile summer experience for a substantial number of Newton children.

In other action the School Committee agreed by a sense of the meeting that as a result of the threatened fuel oil shortage in the area this winter the school administration should be authorized to consolidate the use of school buildings after school hours and to warn prospective users of these buildings that the shortage of oil may necessitate reduced use or even cancellation of evening uses of school buildings.

The School Committee also heard a letter from Samuel Weisenstadt in which he protested what he termed "an unrealistic increase in fees for adult education classes."

Weisenstadt maintained that fees had increased 100 per cent in some cases and 200 per cent in others.

Supt. Aaron Fink responded saying the same $50,000 for the cost of adult education programs had been budgeted this year as last year, but rising costs had necessitated some fee increase. However, he said in most cases it was not as large as Mr. Weisenstadt had indicated. A particular course to which he had referred had gone up that much, Fink said, because it had previously received state aid but no longer did.

The School Committee agreed to give the matter consideration when next year's budget comes under study.

Dr. Filler Is Speaker In Ecuador

Dr. Robert Filler of 70 Burdean Rd., Newton, was one of two staff members of The Children's Hospital Center in Boston who were guest lecturers at a meeting of the Pan American Medical Association held recently in Guayaquil, Ecuador.

Their topics included several areas of research which the two physicians have been studying for the past few years. Between trem, five medical papers were presented.

The surgeons' Ecuadorian stay lasted six days. During that time they also treated some ailing members of Guayaquil's population.

"Drug Talk-In" For Teens First Meeting On Monday

A "Drug Talk-in For Teenagers" sponsored by the Newton Mental Health Center will meet on Mondays, Oct. 5, 9 and 26 at 3:00 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, corner of Walnut St. and Newtonville Ave. which will be conducted by staff members of the Newton Mental Health Center, Mrs. Sandra Kuten, Acting Head Psychiatric Social Worker with the Newton Court Clinic and Mr. Irwin Hoogheen, Attendance Officer of the Newton School System.

In response to a questionnaire on drugs formulated by the Newton Mental Health Center and distributed to the high school students, the overwhelming reply indicated a need and desire for student discussion and participation in an effort to understand and overcome this societal problem. This is a group issue rather than an individual issue and demands programs involving many groups of people working together.

This is just a beginning and will take the form of small exploratory workshops in which students can openly discuss the problem in addition to helping formulate and develop further programs involving parents primarily, and then teachers and adults in the community.

The original planning for this program was done by Dr. William Stone, Director, Dr. Haskell Cohen, Chief Psychologist, and Mrs. Diantha Eisendrath, Head Social Worker, all of the Newton Mental Health Center, in cooperation with Dr. Hilda D. Perlitsh and Jeremy C. Cobb, M.S., consultants in Group Dynamics. These sessions are open to all high school students in Newton free of charge.

Your Dollar Will Help

Boston Patrolman Walter A. Schroeder was buried this week. He died after being shot in the back during a $26,000 holdup last week of the Brighton branch of the State Street Bank and Trust Company.

His shooting was cold and cruel, his death wanton and unnecessary. Unfortunately, those obvious facts cannot bring him back to life.

On the day he was buried the newspapers published an old picture of Officer Schroeder breathing life back into the still body of a baby rescued from a fire. That was a routine action performed in the line of duty by a conscientious police officer.

Eloquent tributes were paid to Patrolman Schroeder, his valor and his devotion to duty. Many flags were flown at half staff. His funeral was a striking spectacle.

But today his widow and his nine fatherless children face a bleak future. Nothing and nobody can replace Walter A. Schroeder in the home where he once knew happiness and from which he is gone forever.

One Boston newspaper and the State Street Bank and Trust Company are raising funds to help the Schroeder family and to lighten the burden it must carry and lessen the hardship it is sure to know.

Generous, great-hearted people are doing much. Your dollar also can help to make the future a little better and brighter for the Schroeder family. Will you help just a little by sending a modest contribution?

If you will, please mail your donation to Robert J. Reynolds, Norfolk County Trust Company, 390 Washington street, Dedham Centre, Mass. Make out checks or money orders to: Schroeder Memorial Fund. You will know increased happiness for the gift you make.

Railroad's Twilight

To see one of those giant steam locomotives which pulled luxuriously-appointed parlor and sleeping cars or long strings of noisy freight cars over ribbons of steel in another era you have to go to a museum.

Those monarchs of the rails, which helped build this country's 19th and early 20th century progress as they inspired many a small boy to wish to become an engineer when he grew up, are as obsolete today as the horse car on big city streets.

In Europe today nationalized railways are knowing a renaissance to meet an ever-growing public demand. France has about completed plans for turbine-powered trains with top accommodations to link Paris and Lyon. They'll travel at 180 miles an hour. They'll run every half hour.

In the United States inter-city passenger trains have dwindled from 20,000 in 1929 to 370 today. Those "name" trains that are left offer little by way of prestige and less in dedication to passenger service and comfort. France runs 850 long-run trains daily. West Germany boasts 527 intercity distance runs. England, with 1,000 intercity runs a day, plans an improved deluxe service at 150-miles-an-hour on a London-Birmingham-Manchester line and one of 180-MPH from London to Liverpool.

At the same time, despite the fact Europeans have seen the use of private automobiles doubled and tripled in the last decade, rail commuter service has kept pace with the railroad's long-run progress.

American railroads almost without exception, make no secret of their desire to drop all passenger service — both long-run and commuter — to retain only the profitable freight traffic.

Going into the last decades of the 20th Century we've ceded our claims to top rang in the field of rail transport. Gradually the American flag is disappearing from the world's oceans.

Our railroads and our ships helped win two World Wars.

Are we making a mistake by allowing these basic transportation means go by default? There is good reason to believe it is a tremendous blunder.

Handwriting Indictment

The Internal Revenue Service has a complaint.

One of the big problems with which it has been wrestling, it appears, is the terrible handwriting it has been encountering in taxpayers' returns. The poor writing of too many among us is so bad that it is delaying the processing of taxpayer remittances.

Hundreds of checks it has been receiving at its Andover Service Center are so poorly written there's a real and present danger they will be credited to the wrong persons.

It's a matter of efficiency with the IRS. Its officials aren't trying to revive a Spencerian Age of beautiful script. Every year the masters of that beautiful, eye-pleasing art seem to be disappearing—leaving few, if any, to carry it on.

In other years the IRS found reason to protest that many of its clients—and they include a major segment of the adult community—weren't' very good in the simple procedure of adding subtracting and multiplying. It urged taxpapers to check and re-check their arithmetic.

Possibly it may at some future date have something to say about taxpayers' reading capacities, thus completing the entire three-R range. Or has it done so already by announcing every year how really simple its "instructions'" are to understand?

As our schools continue to forge ahead in their late-20th century surge of progress, one hears less and less about mundane pursuits as 'readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic.'

Maybe in the back of some inventor's mind these days there's a light-weight portable typewriter Johnny can pack in his flamboyantly-decorated lunch box. It would not only be a lift to speeding the IRS processing procedures. It would be a big help to those frustrated folk who never could come close to imitating that old Spencerian penmanship.

But the fact is the children today do not get the educational training they should in such fundamentals as handwriting, spelling and arithmetic.

THEY NEED HELP!

- POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS - (Continued from page 1)

Ted has added an innovation to his campaign. He holds what he describes as "Town Meetings" to which he tries to draw as much of a cross section of the community as possible.

After a brief opening statement, he answers questions from the audience. He walks through the gathering with a hand microphone, stimulating discussion by reversing the roles and putting questions to the people who came out to see and hear him.

He tells his listeners about the bills pending before the U.S. Senate and asks them how they think their money should be spent.

"It results in a good interchange and is better than a straight political talk," Ted reports. "I find the people are happier with it, and it informs me as to which matters are of the greatest urgency to them. This campaign is an educational experience for me. I'm gaining a better understanding of what is on the people's mind.

Ted points out that he has taken strong positions on issues during the past eight years. He asserts that he is able to develop and explain his stands at the "Town Meetings" and make the people understand better why he took those positions.

The question he has been asked most often at recent sessions has been the threatened oil shortage as it relates to homes, schools, housing developments and some utilities.

"I also get asked about the interest rates, the cost of living, the higher unemployment, the whole economy issue," he related.

"The senior citizens are very much concerned about the increases in social security benefits and the limitations on what they can earn while they're getting social security," Ted continued.

"I am asked frequently about drugs and what the federal government is doing to help local communities meet the drug problem."

Ted observed that what the national government is doing to assist the cities and towns in that area "is very little."

He said the Nixon administration's drug program only includes law enforcement, voicing the belief that it also should provide for rehabilitation, research and education.

He is the co-sponsor of bills now pending before the Senate which would meet this need, and he hopes they will be enacted into law before this year's session of Congress comes to an end.

In the partnership of business and the state, federal and local governments for meeting the pollution problem the poorest partner, in Ted's opinion, has been the federal government.

"It has not made the resources available to them to develop a comprehensive program," Ted states. "For example, under the Federal Highway Act the federal government has spent $50 Billion at a ratio of 90 per cent by the federal government to 10 per cent for the state and city and town governments."

"We have spent about $1 Billion to fight pollution, and we also have a formula which limits federal participation to 40 or 50 per cent. We have less resources and a poorer formula for pollution. I think this has to be changed."'

On the matter of federal spending, Ted cites that Congress overrode Presidential vetoes and added money to the funds President Nixon had requested for health and education.

Despite that, he stresses, Congress actually cut $6.4 Billion from the overall appropriations requested by President Nixon.

Ted Kennedy is campaigning as if his reelection were in doubt. He comes back to Massachusetts whenever he can get away from Washington. He works at factory gates, goes through plants shaking hands with the employees, speaks at service club luncheons and holds his so-called Town Meetings.

Yet, there is no way he can hope to equal the massive margin by which he won reelection in 1964 when he was hospitalized with a broken back and unable to campaign.

The circumstances are completely different. A great Democratic tide was running across the nation in 1964, generated by the Presidential fight between Lyndon Johnson and Barry Goldwater.

Less than a year had elapsed since the assassination of Ted's late, great brother, John F. Kennedy. Public sympathy for Ted was strong, and it was increased by his own misfortune in suffering a broken back in a plane crash.

All the polls, however, indicate that Ted Kennedy is still popular enough so that he not only will win reelection but should generate some strength to other members of the Democratic State ticket.

Virtually no political pundit concedes Josiah Spaulding any chance of defeating Senator Kennedy in their contest. But Ted is taking nothing whatever for granted.

McGlennon Is Confident He Will Defeat Father Drinan

Father Robert F. Drinan achieved nation-wide attention when he scored an upset victory over Congressman Philip J. Philbin in the recent Democratic primary.

Representative John McGlennon of Concord was given no glaring headlines when he won the Republican nomination for Congress in the Philbin district.

But McGlennon is outspoken in his belief that he will defeat Father Drinan when the election returns are tabulated on the night of Nov. 3.

"I am absolutely convinced I can win," he declares even though he is referred to by many people as "the candidate who is running against Father Drinan."

McGlennon chooses his words carefully as he talks about his own campaign and that of Father Drinan. The realization that he is running against a Catholic priest is always with him.

He makes the point that Father Drinan, who was nominated as the peace candidate for Congress in the third district, has changed his position on the war in Vietnam during the campaign.

"Originally, he was for an immediate withdrawal of all our troops from Vietnam," McGlennon declares. "Apparently, he realized that was not feasible because he endorsed the Hatfield-McGovern Amendment which provided for the withdrawal of all troops by July 1, 1971.

"Prior to its defeat, the Hatfield-McGovern Amendment was changed in the U.S. Senate to provide that all troops must be withdrawn from Vietnam by Dec. 31, 1971. Father Drinan appears to have endorsed that change. I have consistently advocated that date as a reasonable deadline for all troop withdrawals. I think Father Drinan and I both are for a speedy peace in Southeast Asia," McGlennon asserted.

McGlennon maintained that the only area of disagreement on the war between him and Father Drinan centers on the question of who should be responsible for the withdrawal of our men from Vietnam.

"I feel firmly that we must retain a high degree of flexibility with our troop withdrawal program and that this can be accomplished only if the program is under the President's direction.

"Father Drinan feels that the Congress should assume this responsibility," he stated.

Representative McGlennon went on to list the areas in which he believes he can be of greater service to the people of the third congressional district than can Father Drinan.

"Federal help will be needed to improve the economy in the third congressional district during the next two years,'" he said. "I can get that help. I do not believe Father Drinan can.

"I understand the problems of the average citizen in my district because they are also my problems. I must balance a budget, cope with any increases in the cost of living and make sure that my children live a wholesome life. Father Drinan has had no experience with those problems. I feel I am better equipped to help the people of the third district with their problems than he is.

"On other issues I feel that my four years of legislative experience in dealing with social and domestic problems on the state level would be of great value to me as a Congressman," he said.

LETTERS TO THE GRAPHIC

Explains Victory

Editor of The Graphic:

As the defeated candidates of the recent primary elections in Massachusetts ponder about their positions, and as the journalistic analyses appear in all major newspapers, it is hard for a volunteer (over thirty) of the Drinan campaign to appreciate the solely factual descriptions of the "Drinan Victory Upset of the Year", "Puzzling Primary Results," "4,836-Vote Shocker", "Vote Miracle", etc.

It seems to me that a true picture of the tremendous victory Father Drinan scored would have to include the 3500 volunteers who worked in total faith and devotion for their candidate, and most of whom were at the Drinan Headquarters on the evening of the election.

Most of the volunteers had worked for other candidates before. We had all taken part in peace demonstrations, but because of apathy and the unchanging attitude of our government we had become cynical and depressed. Our emotions were governed partly by fear.

It was that feeling that often prompted me to consider leaving this country, in order to provide a future for my children where they need not experience such emotions.

I felt especially depressed about this since once in my life I had lived under a government which created an atmosphere among its people which stifled democratic processes.

Eventaully it led to the fascistic Nazi government which was judged by the world during the Nurenberg trials at the end of the Second World War. The importance of those trials has been discussed enough.

The issues Father Drinan stressed in his campaign were therefore "my issues". They are the issues of all the 3500 volunteers and the issues of everybody. Until the victory of this primary election nothing much had changed.

But for me and for all the volunteers of the Drinan campaign, his victory has given us another glimpse of hope, not only for a change of leadership, but for a change in human understanding as well. .

I have never seen a group that size who shared one experience in such a joyous and exhilarating way. To me it was one of the few experiences in my life which I will never forget. It was not merely 3500 "individuals" who helped Father Drinan to his victory, nor was it a "Children's Crusade" as portrayed by the press.

About half of the volunteers were over 30, and sometimes, as in my case, whole families were involved. My children helped in their way to draw attention to the candidate. Many devoted college students were able to "communicate" again with their parents and not only communicate with them, but also convince them of the importance of their help in the campaign.

The victory of Father Drinan was a victory in more than one way, and surely more than a political victory.

Today it is clear that we will not rest on our laurels, but work for and produce an even bigger victory in the November election. It is now that we can all join forces if we believe in progress and democracy.

Sincerely yours,
Ingeborg Lieb

Coffee-House For Teens

Editor of The Graphic:

To my knowledge, Newton Centre is as thickly populated with teen-agers as any of the Newton villages. Therefore, why no coffee house for the teen-aged group?

Waban, the Highlands, Auburndale, Newton Corner - almost every section has its place for the youngsters to get together. Newton Centre, alone, has not been able to find any suitable gathering spot.

For almost two years, I have been attending monthly meetings at the Newton Community Center, trying to activate a meeting place for the young Newton Centre-ites. We had hoped that a church, the playground hut, a school - would be willing to open its doors to Newton Centre youth. Every plan has fallen through, due to what I feel is a complete lack of understanding as to the needs of our children.

It seems to me that an indoor gathering place for our teen-agers is far superior to just "hanging around" the playground or the streets. I am sure that most parents of teen-agers will agree with me on this matter.

If anyone has any suggestions, the Newton Community Center (or myself) would be most grateful to listen.

Let's try offering our "young adults" something more substantial than a lecture - let's show them that we really care!

Traffic Comm. Turned Down By State DPW

The State Department of Public Works this week rejected a request of the Newton Traffic Commission for traffic signals at the intersection of Beethoven Ave. & Beacon St. in Waban and requests for stop signs in Newton Highlands at Shady Hill Rd. and Stony Brae Rd. and in Newton Corner at Boyd and Jewett Sts.

According to the DPW report the two rear-end collisions listed for two years at the Beethoven Ave. corner were rear-end collisions which would not be prevented by signal controls. In addition it pointed to the fact that a guard is at the school crossing just up the street and that few pedestrians cross at the corner anyway.

Lack of accident data was also cited on the stop sign requests, as well as an engineer's report saying poor visibility does not exist.

Still under investigation by the DPW for the Traffic Commission are petitions to coordinate traffic signals at Crafts and Walnut and Crafts and California Sts.; install traffic signals at California and Bridge Sts.; stop signs at Albemarle Rd. and North St., Sargent and Park Sts., Sargent and Park Ave., and Surrey Rd. and Langdon St.; pedestrian signals at Beacon and Washington Sts.; and safety islands at River and Waltham Sts., River and Cherry Sts. and Beacon St. and Herrick Rd.

The Commission has asked that trucks be excluded on Farwell St., Winchester St. and Crescent St.

Quote of the Week

Students must discover the fact that they are already citizens of this troubled universe and country in crisis and decide to participate in the political system as fully as their duties and obligations will allow.

Poll Planned To Encourage 'Gal' Politicians

Republican and Democratic women leaders are making common cause in an attempt to lure more members of their sex into big-time politics.

Mrs. Elly M. Peterson, assistant chairman of the GOP national committee, and Mrs. Geri Joseph, who formerly held the same poisition with the Democrats, began last spring to look for a foundation that would finance the poll they believe should be made.

Once they find an angel, they will be ready to compile questions they believe should be asked.

Not Even Much Tokenism

Women now do far more of the nuts-and-bolts work than do men. But even though they comprise more than half the national population, they generally are forgotten when party endorsements are distributed and few are to be found in high political office.

There have been Jews on the Supreme Court bench, and there is a Negro there, but no woman ever has been named to this prestigious position. None has been chosen for the cabinet since President Dwight D. Eisenhower named Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby to head the then new Health, Education, and Welfare Department.

The 100 senators include one woman, and the 435-member House has 10 women members.

Why such a small representation?

It is hoped the poll will provide the answers.

Looking For Votes

Harriett Cipriani, deputy vice chairman of DNC, said the Democratic women's division first wrote to all female candidates in the 1968 convention, those who lost as well as the winners. The questionnaire asked if it had been difficult to raise campaign money, for example, and did men support them as the gentle sex has supported male candidates?

A professional poll attempt was launched because party leaders believed their first attempt was too amateurish in such a complicated field.

"Maybe we're urging women to run for public office and we will find out they couldn't care less," Mrs. Cipriani said. "And some simply prefer to vote for the male candidate."

If this hazard proves true, she said, "we must utiiize education to change their minds.

"We're not saying women would be better than men . . . but there should be more of them in Congress."

Newman House Lists Busy Summer Of Many Projects

Approximately thirty students from Newman House and the Boston Cathedral area attended a very successful social this past Saturday evening at the Cardinal Cushing Center for the Spanish Speaking.

Among those in attendance at this event were Miss Connie Yuchengco, a Junior at Newton College of the Sacred Heart; Miss Susan Clunts, a Senior in the School of Education at Simmons College; and Mr. Ronald Polansky who is doing graduate work in Philosophy at Boston College.

This event was one in a spectrum of programs which were begun at Newman House last June in a continuing effort to better serve the needs of our Newton young people.

Included among those who laid the groundwork for these programs and helped at various stages to carry them out, were Mr. James Callahan, Assistant Director of the Catholic Guild for All the Blind; Mr. Joseph Antonellis, a Theology student at Saint John's Seminary; and Mr. Fred Howland, who is studying at Boston College. Also present were Miss Mary Terry, Miss Mary Murphy and Mrs. Carol Ann Vento.

The programs evolved include the very well attended Junior-Senior Group which met on Tuesday evenings to discuss "The Role of Religion in the 70s" under the guidance of Professor Gerald Pierce, a member of the Faculty of Theology at Newton College of the Sacred Heart. Professor Pierce has degrees from Boston College as well as Harvard Divinity School. He is currently completing his doctoral work in Philosophy of Religion at Harvard Graduate School.

A comparable group of younger students, including many who have entered Newton High this Fall, participated in "Discussion and Experience" programs. Their meetings were interlaced with events such as a visit to Temple Mishkan Tefila where they were escorted on a tour of the Temple by Cantor Shelkan; also a visit to the Presbyterian Church at Newton Corner where they joined in a film discussion with members of the Teen Center sponsored by that Church.

Many of these same students joined the Newton-Spanish Center program, which is being sponsored by Our Lady Help of Christians Service Commission utilizing the facilities of Newman House.

This program, which first began three years ago, consists in a sharing of experiences by the members of these two diverse communities in an effort to achieve mutual respect and understanding among them. Included in their Summer activities, besides social encounters and serious discussions at Newman House and the Spanish Center in South Boston, was a boat trip on the Charles River and attendance at a ball game.

This program, which is intended to continue on a year round basis, is being coordinated by Mrs. Terry DeLuca Christopher, who is teaching at Warren Junior High and has long been involved in Newman House activities. She is being ably assisted by Miss Barbara Staszesky, a graduate of Newton High and now a Sophomore at Simmons College; Mr. William "Duke" Ellis who is entering graduate work at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst; and Miss Peggy Mills, a graduate of Our Lady's who is now a medical secretary.

Coordinating events for the Spanish Center are its youth Director, Mr. James Caradonio; and Miss Jan Gheringhelli, a social worker in the Boston Cathedral area who has her degree from Merrimack College.

In mid June representatives of Newman House met with the Rev. Mr. David Parachini, Executive Director of the Newton Youth Foundation, and with Mrs. Marion Kaufmann, Vice President of the Newton Youth Foundation Executive Board, to discuss areas of possible cooperation.

Out of this meeting developed the "New School of Latin American Studies," a student conducted study in political, economic and religious involvement of the United States in Latin America, with special concentration on the problems of Brazil.

This group, besides laying the groundwork for a continuing investigation of this subject in the Fall, invited to their meetings at Newman House Father William Reinhard, recently returned from Brazil where he was doing parish work in Sao Paulo; & also the Rev. David M. Pittle, a Presbyterian Minister who has been working in the literacy program conducted in poverty stricken Northern Brazil by the World Council of Churches.

Both speakers were deeply concerned about the effect of United States' economic and political policies on the poor in the areas in which they worked. In cooperation with Miss Marilyn Lynch of Our Lady's Christian Service Commission, some members of this study group attended sessions of the "Latin American Research Council" which meets regularly at Memorial Hall in Harvard University.

Among the students from Newton High and Our Ladys involved in this study-planning program at Newman House to date are: Melissa Leahy (group coordinator), Joe Reidy, Sue Mahoney, Diane Cardella, Charles McGlame, Sue Cleary, Paul DeMeo, Janet Lunny and John Miskella.

Another project, the groundwork for which was laid this Summer at Newman House in conjunction with the Newton Youth Foundation, is described as an "Introduction to Teen-Age Cultural Media." Programmed and conducted by students, this project is intended to guide members of the adult community through a variety of contemporary teen-age experiences, alternating these with adult-student dialogues as to their meaning for today's young people.

Student participants in planning this program are Charlene McGlame and Joe Reidy of the Newman House Student Board, and Cathy Monahan and Bob Boiteau who are both very active in the "Beginning".

Among those not already mentioned who attended programs at Newman House this Summer were Junior High students Beth Andersen, Kelly Brinton, Lynn Conquest, Theresa Martin, Brian Reidy, Ned O'Halloran, Patricia Capello, John Carleo, Lenny DeLuca, Stephen Bibbo, Kevin Donovan, Billy Egan, Eileen Tosney, Kerry McGlame, Donna Carleo and Christine Bresnahan.

Information on these programs and the other activities now being scheduled for the Fall can be obtained by calling the Newman House office at 969-5840.

Educators Predict Continuing Campus Disturbances This Fall

By DAVID ALWARD and CAROL ANN ROSS

Student protests, which paralyzed many U.S. colleges last spring, will continue to be a conspicuous part of campus life this fall. That is the prediction of an overwhelming majority of educators and students interviewed by a team of UPI reporters at 72 colleges in 31 states.

"The Vietnam War is still in progress, the environment is still being polluted, racism is still rampant - what's changed?" said a Princeton senior.

Most college administrators voiced hope that protests will remain peaceful during the new academic year instead of exploding in violence and disruption as some did after the U.S. invasion of Cambodia last April. But there was an underlying tone of uncertainty and anxiety.

"I simply don't know what to expect," said Dr. Wilbur Moulton, dean of students at Southern Illinois University, which was shut down by student demonstrations last May. "I'm convinced that national and international affairs, principally the Indochina War, will be the main determining factor."

"If there's any heating up of the war in Vietnam, or if American forces re-invade Cambodia, there'll be hell to pay," said another Eastern educator who insisted on anonymity.

Educators Watched

Students said chances of avoiding violence depend on how college administrators and public officials respond to peaceful protests. If student dissatisfaction is ignored or is met with heavy-handed repression, they said, there is likely to be serious trouble.

A third unpredictable element is the outcome of the November elections.

"A lot of students are trying to 'work through the system' by campaigning for political candidates," said a Stanford University official. "If their candidates don't win, it's hard to tell what might happen."

Many students agree. They said wholesale defeat of peace candidates in November would accentuate the feeling of powerlessness that animates much student protest, and would strengthen the position of campus radicals who contend it's futile to seek change through the electoral system.

Other findings of the nationwide survey:

There is growing pressure on college administrators from state legislatures, boards of regents, alumni and local authorities to take a hard line in dealing with campus unrest. Growing hostility toward student activists among large segments of the population may contribute to confrontations.

Radical student activity, formerly centered in big name schools of the East and the Far West, is spreading to many formerly conservative schools.

Radical organizations such as Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) are splintered into numerous ideological factions. Their full-time membership is very small - on many campuses, only a fraction of 1 per cent of the student body - but when they have a popular issue to exploit, their influence vastly exceeds their numbers.

Many students and educators expect extreme groups to put less emphasis this year on promoting mass confrontations and to make greater use of hit-and-run guerrilla tactics such as bombings and arson.

Black students are leery of joining whites in protests because they fear they would take the brunt of any retaliation.

"When they start shooting, they'll get us first," said a radical black. They intend to focus their own activity on elimination of government and university policies they consider racist.

The ambivalent attitude of many college administrations toward the chances for campus peace was typified by President Robert White of Kent State University at Kent, Ohio, where four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen in May.

White said he is "hopeful" of a trouble-free year, but added in the next breath that the university has taken stringent precautions to maintain "security" on the campus.

Robert Perrin, vice president of Michigan State University, said. "We know of no outstanding issues that would provide any excuses for violent activity this fall." But he also added quickly that "it would be foolish for anyone to try to predict what will happen."

Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, said colleges reflect the world around them. "There will be no peace on campus unless there is a more reasonable amount of peace in the world," he said.

Sunday Services At 1st Church Of Christ Scientist

This is a theme of the Lesson-Sermon on "Unreality" to be presented at all Christian Science church services Sunday.

One of the Bible verses is from Proverbs: "Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven."

The supporting commentary from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, will include this insight: "To ascertain our progress, we must learn where our affections are placed and whom we acknowledge and obey as God."

Services held at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 391 Walnut St., Newtonville, begin at 10:45 a.m. Everyone is welcome.

Beauty Care Today

By Edgar of RONALD COIFFEURS

(Brown-eyed Brunette)

Are you a brown-eyed brunette with your eyes open to new make-up suggestions?

If it is a subtle, appraising look you want, use neutral colors. Shadow under the brow with an off-white tone that has a taupy cast. Shade all the way down to taupe at the eyelid and matching mascara completes the look.

If it is the unusual that catches your eye, you will probably favor those big round pink-tinted glasses. Behind them, white shadow is brushed along the brow bone. Gray-brown liner appears at the fold. Upper and lower lids are lined in gray-brown and black.

For an irresistible appeal, try brilliant turquoise eye shadow. Wear it daringly on the brow bone. Place taupe shadow on the lid below. Mascara lower lashes. Make upper lashes thick and black.

This year for the first time, the Temple will have a unique booth under the capable management of Mrs. Nathan Fleishman and Mrs. Stephen Sklar. Old and new items will be available. Hand crafted beaded jewelry will be a welcome addition to the sale, and will be supervised by Mrs. Dexter Segall.

Unlimited free parking is available, and a delightful "home style" commissary is on the premises.

Woman Candidate To Rock Congress

By CAROLYN A. BOWERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tornadoes are rare on Capitol Hill, but a watch has been called for next January. Most observers predict the impending storm will take its shape in feminine form.

They say it will hit in the guise of a vociferous congressional hopeful named Bella Abzug, a lawyer, 49, referred to by her supporters as the "Wonder Woman."

"I plan to shake Congress up or there wouldn't be any reason for me to go," Mrs. Abzug said in an interview. "I believe in a new style of politics — activism and leadership.

"Anybody can make a speech but the people want someone who will understand their problems, organize, fight and stay with them and not wait for them to write a letter.

"I'm an activist. I really believe in the role of leadership. I don't just talk about it."

Mrs. Abzug, a practicing attorney since 1947, is a founder and member of both the New York State and National executive committees of the New Democratic Coalition, a reform democratic organization.

She began her congressional bid with a hard hitting Democratic primary campaign in Manhattan's conglomerate 19th district. Campaigning against the war and for total equality for women, she beat incumbent Leonard Farbstein, 67, for the nomination by a vote of 17,341 to 14,642, thus ending liberal Farbstein's 14-year tenure in the House of Representatives.

The 19th district is heavily Democratic so that the primary victory is considered tantamount to election, which means the house will get its first women's liberation spokesman.

However, Mrs. Abzug — the wife of a stockbroker and the mother of two teenage daughters — does not associate herself with the radical side of the women's "lib" movement.

"I'm very sober in my approach to women's liberation," she said. "I'm not interested in replacing men, but I do think they can be changed a little.

"Women should be able to lead full lives and realize their total capacity, which society does not fully allow. Women are not encouraged to reach the levels men are allowed to reach.

"I will take the cause of women — America's oppressed majority — to the halls of Congress.

I will fight in Washington against the discrimination that condemns most women to low-paying jobs, gives women welfare instead of income, keeps them out of the professions, denies them day care facilities, miseducates their children, gives third rate health care to black, Puerto Rican and poor women, and forces them to risk their lives by submitting to illegal abortions."

Mrs. Abzug, national legislative director of Women Srike for Peace, said that the Vietnam war and "archaic" congressional rules will be her first targets.

An outspoken opponent of the war, she believes America is going in the direction of militarism.

"The Pentagon is still running the country," she said. "People want jobs and decent housing, but they can't get them because all the money is being used for the war.

"The war is robbing us of our maternal resources."

Of congressional rules, she said, the "archaic" rules don't allow Congress to represent the people. The committee system is an impossibility, she said.

"I will join the small but growing group of men and women in Congress challenging the outmoded seniority system and insisting that Congress represent the reality of American life."

In November, Mrs. Abzug will run against the radio broadcaster, Barry Farber, the Republican Liberal candidate. Both are outspoken but Mrs. Abzug's booming voice puts her points across with piledriver punch. Her campaign literature tells you that "This Woman's Place Is in The House . . . the House of Representatives."

How To Help Executive Who Loses His Job

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

The usual spring isn't in Joe Executive's walk this night as he opens the door to his mortgaged mansion.

It's the kind of home a $45,000 a year corporation official deserves. Bath with each bedroom, crystal chandelier in the dining room, a den for him, a sewing room for the wife, a music room for the kids and a family room that isn't to be believed. His castle.

"Honey, what's wrong," asks his wife who's spent the day running up all the charge accounts with back-to-school purchases for the offspring, four dears, all in expensive private schools.

"It's all over," whines Joe. "The company merger went through. And my job went with it. Forty-eight isn't the right age to be looking for a job with my kind of salary."

Consultant Gives Advice

In this era of mergers, corporate take-overs and economic slowdown, other Joe Executives are experiencing similar shocks.

It may be even a worse shock for their wives, says a Chicago management consultant. Frank R. Beaudine, partner in the firm of Anthony Eastman Associates, said:

"The wife's reaction may have a lot to do with when - and for how much - he goes back to work again."

"Don't feel that his dislocation means the end of the world," Beaudine said. "Do your best to assure him of your confidence that he'll land on his feet again.

"And don't let him delay more than a day or so his search for a new job."

Some Hit The Bottle

Some executives hit the bottle and sink in self-pity. Others rationalize that this unplanned leisure is the perfect time to take a vacation. Not good, according to Beaudine.

And don't worry too much about money. Final settlements to executives usually are quite generous. "It's better to cut back spending, even dip into savings than to panic over lack of a paycheck," Beaudine said.

This expert makes his living recruiting executives.

Something else: his own hurt pride will make hubby reluctant to seek help when it's nearest at hand - with the businessmen he's known and worked with throughout his career.

"Cajole him into seeking help from them," Beaudine said. "They're his best source of leads back into a successful career."

Serve Hot Apple-Spice-Up To Cheer Up A Chilly Day

By PATRICIA S. FROMBERGER
Norfolk County Extension Service

Those close companions, the three musketeers of the apples, apple juice, and applesauce — are championing the cause of eating pleasure right now.

That's because they're all especially abundant and reasonably priced, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service.

Take that renowned taste - pleaser, apple juice. "Drinking an apple" is a delicious way to enjoy a healthful "Apple a Day." Apple juice combines well with other fruit juices, like orange or cranberry, to make refreshing, nutritious appetizers, or serve it all by itself — and let the apple goodness shine through.

Ever wonder about the difference between apple juice and apple cider? Cider sold in groceries and juice are exactly the same — a pasteurized product that may be cloudy or clear, depending upon the manufacturing process used.

Hard cider, available in liquor stores, has been fermented to make an alcholic beverage.

Nobody says apple juice has to be served cold. On chilly, rainy autumn days, there's nothing like HOT APPLE SPICE-UP to make home the coziest place to be. To prepare combine one quart apple juice, one two - inch stick cinnamon, broken, four whole cloves, ½ cup sugar. Simmer, covered, for ten minutes. Strain. Serve hot in mugs. Makes four to six servings.

Symphony Launches Drive For Subscrptions Today

The Newton Symphony launches its subscription drive today. The 1970-71 season, the symphony's fifth, promises to be an especially auspicious one in both programming and concert performance.

November 15 marks the date set for the first concert, a salute to Beethoven in celebration of the bicentennial year of the composer's birth.

Michel Sasson, music director of the symphony has again selected a singular program. Mr. Sasson will conduct Beethoven's Wellington Seige, often referred to as the Battle Symphony, a work which enjoyed the greatest popularity during Beethoven's lifetime but a work which is seldom if ever performed in modern concert halls.

In contrast to the Battle Symphony, Denes Zsigmondy, Budapest born violinist, will perform two delicately beautiful Romances for violin and orchestra by Beethoven.

The Romance No. 1 in G., despite its quitet beauty and appeal the world over, will actually receive its Boston premiere at this concert. The Symphony No. 7 in A is also scheduled for performance.

Other highlights of the season will be a concert February 28 with famed composer-conductor Gunther Schuller sharing the podium with Mr. Sasson and a concert May 16 featuring vocalists Pamel Gore and David Ervitts in premieres of songs of Gustav Mahler.

Last season the reserved seats for the series of Sunday evening concerts at Meadowbrook Jr. High School sold out within three weeks. Subscribers of last season will receive subscription renewal forms in the mail this week. Others interested in the concerts may call 244-0011 for ticket information. Forms for subscription will be sent upon request.

Housing Is Theme Of Round Table Seminar

Newton bankers, realtors and housing experts discussed low and moderate income housing programs in a round table seminar sponsored by Fair Housing, September 22, at the Grace Episcopal Church.

Clarifying mortgage and housing programs were Max Wexler, former Executive Director of the Newton Housing Authority, now consultant in housing; Bob McKay, Executive Director of Citizens Housing and Planning Associaton; Stan Gibson, Massachusetts Housing and Finance Association; Marc Slotnick, Executive Director, NCDF; and Tom Sanders, Director of Equal Opportunity, HUD.

Keith Willoughby, vice president, Newton Savings Bank, termed the seminar successful in its "recognition of the extent of the problem and willingness to do something about it." The Newton Savings Bank has pioneered in providing home mortgages for low income families.

Lewis Songer of the Newton Chamber of Commerce identified community attitudes as vital to the solution of the city's housing problems.

Tom Sanders, HUD's representative, faulted the federal organization for not having "told the story of programs available to the people who need the services" but pointed to the recent establishment of area offices as a step toward bringing programs closer to the people.

Mrs. Tammy Bliss as moderator kept the focus on concrete solutions to Newton's housing problems. Questions about legislation were answered in depth by Bob McKay, while financial programs were explained by Willoughby and John Stevens of Newton Savings and Paul Shakespeare, secretary, Newton Bankers Association.

Other community leaders attending were Al Edmonds, Massachusetts Department of Community Affairs; Mrs. Dorothy Sparrow, Newton Coalition; Jim Miller, Housing Authority, Mel Cline, Newton broker, and Fair Housing officers and general membership.

Mrs. Judy Beram and Mrs. Nancy Strong, program chairmen, were applauded for their efforts in scheduling the seminar.

Jim Doolin Stars As Newton High Wraps Up Everett In Opener 20-0

By BOB WORDEN

The Newton High football team chalked up their third consecutive opening day victory over Everett, as Newton Quarterback Jim Doolin sprinted for two touchdowns and passed for another, as the Tigers dumped Everett 20 to 0.

Hard running half backs Mark Lennon and Chuck Pendergast paced the Tigers in the opening series of plays, bringing the ball from the 37 to the 7 yard line, where Doolin scored on a bootleg, to cap a 63 yard drive to pay dirt.

Pendergast made a 40 yard return of an Everett second quarter punt, to set the stage for Newton's second touchdown. Doolin, five plays later, scored on a quarterback sneak, from three yards out. Mark Lennon added two extra points to the ledger on an end sweep, to give Newton a 14 point advantage at half time.

Both teams played a sloppy fourth quarter. Everett's quarterback Gary Moore 14 points down, was forced to use his aerial attack. And he soon found out who Guzzi's Guerillas were, as they stole five of his errant fourth quarter passes. On the day, Pendergast and Lennon intercepted a pair, while Jimmy Fay and John Hoover had one apiece.

Doolin hit Pendergast on his first pass completion of the day, Chuck was off like a streak of white lightning, as he trampled 40 yards for a touchdown. Ken Haywood's point after went wide, to round out the scoring.

Taking a look at how Newton's future opponents did in their inaugural, Thanksgiving Day rival Brookline walked past Weymouth No. 34 to 13, Quincy bombed Weymouth So. 66 to 14, Arlington whitewashed Somerville 23 to 0. In other games Medford was shutout by Boston Latin 27 to 0, Waltham beat Malden 20 to 6 and Newton South shellacked Rindge 42 to 0. Brockton, tuned up for the big game against Newton next week, by beating New Bedford 34 to 0.

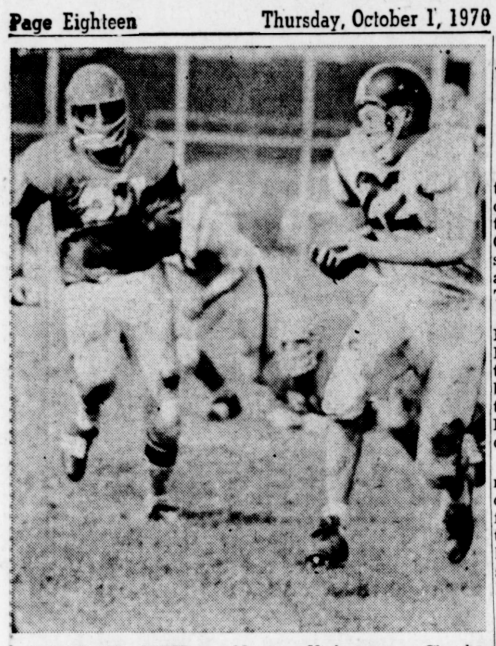

Starting time for next week's game at Dickinson is 1:30 p.m. Brockton who is favored by almost everyone to win it all, will be a severe test for the Tigers but this reporter predicts an upset victory for the Black and Orange as Newton Coaches will prepare their squad better.

The citizens from the shoe city have ten starters returning plus seven lettermen.

Newton's remaining schedule:

All home games at Dickinson Stadium.

Rejuvenated Newton South Grid Squad Blanks Rindge Tech 42-0

By Lewis Freedman

A rejuvenated Newton South football eleven displayed more pep than it has for three years, last Saturday, in crushing Rindge Tech, 42-0 behind an earth - shattering ground game and a thundering defense.

Coming off the two leanest years in its history (a combined 1-14-1 mark) South exhibited the form that made it a winner for its first seven seasons under coach George Winkler.

Coach Winkler knew his defense was sound. And that, in fact, was an understatement. It was impregnably ferocious, literally devouring Tech quarterback Gary Fratto, the man who beat them last year. The beefy defensive line and linebacking corps of Reldman, Cooper, Levine, Celli, Kojoyian, Dave Dolitka, Len Adelman and Joe Delucca made Rindges offensive life impossible.

The offense was a question mark, as regular quarterback Rich Lerner was sidelined with a back injury and left half Dave Leyton was suffering from cracked ribs suffered in a scrimmage against Walpole.

But Winkler need never have worried. Juniors Ron Izen and Dave Lelchook stepped into starting roles and sparked the offense.

South ran all over Tech with Izen directing the attack and handing off to his bull backfield the Lions rolled to a 28-0 half-time lead and never let up.

Staulo banged out 118 yards on 15 carries and Haimes blasted away for 92 yards on only six attempts for respective averages of 7.8 and 15.3.

Haimes tallied the first TD in the first quarter on an eight - yard scamper. Staulo came back with a 12-yard run and then Lelchook went over for six points on another eight - yarder. He followed that with a short burst up the middle for the extra points. Haimes notched his second score on a 25-yard run and Izen rushed it over to cap the first half scoring.

The fifth touchdown was Staulos second — on a beautiful 38-yard run, with Ezen again going over for the conversion.

Staulo's brother John then got into the act in the last quarter by scoring the final touchdown on a 20-yard pass from sub-quarterback Russ

After two seasons of absolute disaster it appears that Newton South has regained its winning football ways and has the potential to record its first winning season since 1967.

Newton High Tigers Take Brookline 4-1 In Soccer

The Newton High Varsity soccer team opened their season on Friday, as they put together an explosive offense with a tight defense, to glide past Brookline 4 to 1.

Tsochandartis broke ice first at 11:45 of the first period, as he converted in front on two quick passes from Steve Zimbel and Co-captain Emilio Mazola.

Timmy T. scored his second goal and the eventual winner at 5:25 of the second period. Playing the role of the opportunist he took advantage of a pin point pass from Mazzola, to open up a two goal margin.

Newton goalie Dick Chaisson made the defensive gem of the afternoon contest, when he made a brilliant diving save on Brookline's right outside, Joe Young, from point blank range.

Yung came right back at 3:10 as he sliced the Tigers cake to a one goal margin with an unassisted goal.

Bill Silver threaded the needle on a pass to Mazzola, and he fired the ball home to build the Tiger lead to a two goal advantage.

Co-Captain Mike Blauer headed in a loose rebound at 7:47 of the final stanza to ice a 4-1 victory for Newton.

Battle Of Unbeatens At Framingham Sunday

NAA Lions In 3rd Straight Win As Norwood Bows 22 - 12 In Rain

The Newton Athletic Association Lions swept to their third straight league victory by beating the Norwood Bluedevils 22-12 on a rain soaked turf at Norwood High School Sunday.

Norwood controlled the opening kickoff for three consecutive first downs to the Newton 25 before being halted. On Newton's first play, Rick Paglia swept the right end for nine yards. Rick then went four more yards off right tackle for a Newton first down at the 50.

This set the stage for right halfback Kevin Hobart's 50 yard touchdown run around the left end. Rick Paglia rushed the conversion. This marked the fourth straight game that the Lions scored on their first series of downs.

With time running out in the second period Norwood scored on a pass play. Their conversion attempts failed and Newton led 8-6 with 52 seconds in the half.

The ensuing kickoff was fielded by Kevin Hoban at the Newton 30. He promptly went to the right sideline and scooted 70 yards for the touchdown. The conversion attempt failed.

The third and final Newton tally came when Rick Paglia went off tackle 12 yards behind blocks by Dave Prince and Jack Ryan for the score. Hoban then rushed the conversion. Norwood scored their final touchdown in the final moments of the game.

In a last - minute switch, Captain, Dennis Cameron, was moved from middle guard to defensive end where he did an outstanding job. Linebacker Jim Vizakis led the team in tackles with 14 while counterpart Matt Sabetti had 11.

The Lions were without the service of star end Pete Toyias who was injured during a practice session this week. Pete will be out three to four weeks.

Newton is one of three teams without a loss and set the stage for a battle of unbeatens at Framingham next week. Dedham is the other undefeated team in the league. Framingham is coached by Ron Burton and will engage the Lions at Butterworth Park Framingham next Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

In other N.A.A. action the Pee Wee division opened its season with the Highland Huskies posting a 26-6 win over the Newton Centre Jets.

In the Jr. Midget division Newton Mustangs late rally failed as they lost to the Norwood Gold 8-6. Jim Rodman scored the only touchdown late in the game on a Quarterback sneak.

Smith, Aronson Boot South To 41 Soccer Win

Senior Dave Smith and junior Steve Aronson each booted two goals to propel the Newton South soccer team past Bedford, 4-1, in the Lions first match in the Dual County League.

South moved from the Suburban League, where it never experienced a winning season, to the Dual County League, this fall.

The victory, the Lions first opening day win in many years gives rise to new optimism. Both the offense and defense were strong as the backs provided good protection for 1969 second - team Suburban all-star goalie Dave Cohen. And Cohen was equal to the test of all other Bedford shots, but one.

Smith put the Lions in front, 1-0, in the first period on a 20-foot blast after a centering pass from Aronson. Aronson came back to put South two up in the 3rd quarter before Bedford narrowed the margin to 2-1. However, Smith and Aronson took over in the fourth period and finished off the opposition.

Rich Bogen, Rich Cyker, Tom Moore, Merrill Goldfarb, Alex Landy, Lee Grossman, and John Mitchell were the other starters in coach Nat Merrills opening day line-up.

South Harriers Run Into Ground In Westwood Duel

Newton Souths cross - country team did not fare as well as its soccer counterparts in its Dual County debut. The harriers were trampled by a deep Westwood squad, 20-41.

Covering the 2.6 mile home Mt. Ida Junior College course in 14:05, Charley Pottey, at least, made his Initial Dual County League appearance successful. Running in torrid 95 degree heat, Pottey demolished all competition, finishing 29 seconds ahead of the first enemy runner and recording his second best time on the home route.

His fastest effort was last fall in the seasons opening meet against Newton when he traversed the same 2.6 mile route in 13:59.

The other Lion harriers seemed to be more affected by the heat as a parade of six Westwood runners, led by Jim Kelleys 14:34, stampeded across the finish - line before Souths second placer, captain Mike LeBlanc in a disappointing 16:20. Junior Matt Williams was Newtons only other man in the top ten, occupying exactly that spot in 16:40.

Souths second showing in its new league was equally unimpressive. Acton - Boxboro destroyed the Lions, 19-40.

Pottey erased the old 2.2 mile course standard with an 11:14 timing, but was beaten by Howie Scribner, who recorded an 11:04 for the new record. The old mark was 11:28.

Except for Potteys defeat the pattern was similar to the first meet. LeBlanc crossed the line in seventh at 12:20, Williams moved up a notch to ninth, in 13:05 and sophomore Mike Burgess ran tenth in 13:08 as South again failed to place five men in the top ten.

Now 0-2 after two attempts Souths disappointing activity can in part be attributed to a series of regrettable losses. First, the team was hard-hit by graduation, but unexpected losses came in the form of 1969 number two man Dick Dickinson moving to Minnesota, number five man Steve Reef switching to private school and number eight man John Seeler not coming out.

Despite the presence of Pottey, a definite star, South will have troubles because it not only lacks depth, but is also missing a strong top five.

'Y' 500-Raceway Program To Open For Under-15s Oct. 13

Big - time auto racing on a miniature scale is the feature of a new YMCA program for youngsters up to age 15. The new program, which begins Tuesday, October 13, at the Newton YMCA is the YMCA Johnny Lightning 500 Raceway Program.

According to Paul Mercer, the Newton YMCA is one of more than 900 YMCA's around the country taking part in the new program. One of the key features is a miniature auto racing competition beginning at the local branch level and escalating up through city-wide, region-wide, and finally a National Championship.

The racing will be done on Johnny Lightning 500 Le Mans Raceway sets which have been donated free to the YMCA's by the manufacturer. The company is also furnishing all prizes, including the Grand Prize to the National Champion.

Grand Prize is an all - expense paid trip for the winner and his family to the 1971 Indianapolis Speedway 500 Mile Memorial Day Classic. Other prizes will be awarded to winners at every stage of the competition.

Interest in auto racing makes it the second most popular sport in America today, and probably number one among kids. So, it's only natural that the Y should cater to that interest.

The program is open to all Y members under the age of 15. Registration will begin immediately and the actual competition will begin Tuesday, October 13. There is no registration fee or other charges.

The competition will be in four states. First will come the branch competition; then the city-wide title. City-wide winners receive a prize and are eligible to compete against other city-wide winners for the Regional title. Regional competition will be a postal tournament.

All city-wide winners in the Northeast Region will race on the same day. Winning results will be mailed to National Council of YMCA headquarters in New York, where all results will be compared and a winner determined.

The region winners from the eight YMCA Regions will be brought together in a city to be announced sometime in May where they will race against each other to determine the 1971 YMCA National Johnny Lightning 500 Champion.

In addition to the Grand Prize, trophies will be presented to the winners and the local YMCA sponsoring them.

Bronze Star, Air Medal To Maj. McCauley

U.S. Air Force Major John T. McCauley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. McCauley of 51 Crestmont Road, Binghamton, N.Y., has been decorated with the Bronze Star Medal and his fourth award of the Air Medal, for service in Southeast Asia.

His wife, Alice, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Green of 499 Winchester St., Newton Highlands.

Major McCauley earned the Bronze Star for his performance as an aircraft maintenance officer at Headquarters, Seventh Air Force, Tan Son Nhut AB, Vietnam.

He received the Air Medal for his outstanding airmanship and courage on successful and important missions completed under hazardous conditions.

The major, a 1954 graduate of Binghamton North High School, received his B.S. degree in 1958 from Syracuse (N.Y.) University and was commissioned there through the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

He earned his M.S. degree in 1968 at the University of Colorado.

A Crackdown On Litterers

Litterbugs traveling the nation's highways this year may find the going costlier than they ever imagined.

Keep America Beautiful, Inc. says a study of anti-litter laws in 30 of the 50 states reveals that penalties for highway littering may take the form of stiff fines or imprisonment, or both.

Allen H. Seed Jr., executive vice president of the national litter-prevention organization, reports 11 of the states surveyed may impose maximum fines ranging from $100 to $500 on any person convicted of littering highways. In 15 of the 30 states the maximum fine is $100; in four others, $50. Terms of imprisonment may run from five days to one year.

Other penalties include suspension of driver's licenses and vehicle registrations, as well as confinement at labor, cleaning up rubbish and debris from highways and other public property.

"The best way to curb highway littering is for every motorist to stash his trash in a litterbag," observes Seed.

Belgium's Army Has 2 Divisions 35 Generals

If a Belgian soldiers isn't on vacation during the summer, he stands a good chance of being roped in for potato harvesting, strawberry picking or some construction work.

"The Belgian army must rank highest in the 'odd jobs' category among all forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO," an army spokesman said.

The role of Belgium's army as a social service agency has been one element in a national controversy swirling around the 75,000-man force. The controversy hit front pages when the army announced its troops were too busy with other summer jobs to move into Brussels central post office to help unclog a massive mail pile-up.

Chaotic Element

A Brussels newspaper, Het Laatste Nieuws, complained the Belgian army "is administratively the most chaotic element in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

With only two divisions, it has 35 generals. And while most of the arm is stationed in West Germany, two thirds of its officers hold desk jobs in Belgium.

The army's basic manpower of about 35,000 secondary school and university graduates who are required to give one year compulsary military service. But the draftees' one year under the colors incudes a 60-day vacation, which means army personnel managers have to do a lot of juggling to make sure they have enough soliders on hand for maneuvers periods.

Summer is the most difficult time. Many conscripts, particularly farm boys, take their holidays then. That's also when the farmers want soldiers for harvesting, when summer camps for children are in operation and when towns are having parades.

Conflicting Demands

An army spokesman said the army runs up to 30 per cent under strength during the summer months, and faced with the conflicting demands for its manpower, is trying to limit its involvement in odd job social work.

This summer the army announced firmly that its forces would not be available for picking strawberries.

"Concripts assisting the population now and then create a good image for the forces, but rows of soldiers gingerly picking strawberries is rather ludicrous," one office said.

A normal human being has 12 ribs on each side.

Newt. Teens Spend Summer At Hospital As Volunteers

Mrs. Irma Kellner, director of volunteers at New England Deaconess Hospital, presented a Certificate of Merit recently to Barbara J. Joanasson of Newton, in recognition of the time she volunteered at the Deaconess during the year.

Also receiving certificates were Deborah Rudolph and Nancy E. Ruden, Harland F. Bradley, Aimee S. Kaufman, Deborah A. Lilienthal, Elyssa Moore, Ellen J. Pearlstein, Ellen J. Richstein, Amy B. Feldman, Bruce Wyner and Faith M. Greenberg, all of Newton.

Miss Greenberg and Miss Rudolph attend Newton High, Mr. Bradley attends Christian High and the other volunteers attend Newton South.

Each student volunteered over 50 hours at the Deaconess during the summer months. Both Nancy Ruden and Barbara Jonasson have volunteered at the hospital for over a year.

Barbara is the only student volunteer who has given more than 600 hours to the hospital this year.

Other volunteer opportunities include working in the newly-opened gift shop, in the blood bank, with diversional therapy, the library and gift carts and at special clerical jobs.

Volunteers — students and adults, men and women — are needed at the Deaconess. If you're interested in giving some of your free time, just call NEDH at 734-7000 and ask for the volunteer office.

Volunteers For 'Rapping' And Drug Problems

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

Here's some balm for the black eye given "all" college students by the minority of them who toss rocks, set fires, take over buildings.

The balm is in the form of a survey of the 101 universities in the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

The survey showed that student commitment to projects of a social service nature will be at an all-time high on campus this fall.

Many campuses are setting up centralized offices to match up student volunteers with community needs. New courses, many of which call for community service as part of the course requirement, also are making the scene.

Talking is Popular

Rapping (talking) is one of the popular service areas. Students at Michigan State University ran a "rap" called The Raft.

Juvenile runaways find shelter or just rapping at He Raft.

At the University of Colorado, students run a "rapline" for people to call when they need help or just someone to listen.

At the University of New Mexico, students operate storefront drop-in centers where high school students come to chat and, hopefully, are rapped into going on to college.

University of Connecticut students expect to enrich the cultural lives of the inmates of correctional centers by taking performing artists and exhibits into the prisons.

They hope to interest prisoners in vocational or avocational opportunities in the arts while behind bars or later.

Drug Problem

The drug problem is being tackled by volunteers at the University of Montana. Offers to the public is an expanded course on drug abuse.

North Dakota State expects to conduct daylong drug problem workshops in eight communities.

Operation Outreach, a new student work-study and volunteer service program, was started at the University of Florida last winter. Students were placed in jobs in low-income areas.

Volunteers from the University's SAMSON (Student Action Manage for Socio-Economic Opportunity Network) also work in Outreach projects.

Finland Census

Finland's population is about 9 per cent Swedish.

Services For Holydays Set At Beth Avodah

Service for the Holydays of Rosh Hashanah will be held at 10:30 a.m. at Temple Beth Avodah, 45 Puddingstone Lane, Newton Center. On Oct. 2, the second day of Rosh Hashanah, Rabbi Edward M. Maline will conduct a contempory service.

It will be a creative service, and the young people of the Congregation will be invited to participate. Music and poetry will make this year's observance of the Jewish New Year especially significant to young and old alike.

In a discussion of the Service, Rabbi Maline has said, "During the coming High Holydays, I shall try to relate the ancient wisdom of our people to those concerns which torment and perplex us.

"If we approach our New Year observance with sincerity of heart, seriousness of purpose and strength of faith in who we are and in what we have the potential to become, we may discover those secrets of life which have enriched us in the past and which offer us the surest promise of a better tomorrow.'"

Women's Club Of Newtonville To Meet October 5

Guest of Honor will be Mrs. Frederic J. Christiansen, Sudbury, Twelfth District Director. Her hostess will be Mrs. Charles W. Laffin, past president of the Newtonville Club and the present publicity chairman of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Charlotte Barker, a most attractive Charm School instructor, will give hints on how to make the most of present wardrobes and how to choose a new one, her subject being "How to Make the Most of Yourself and Your Wardrobe."

The next board meeting will be October 19th and on this date the club will also have American Home Day.

The American Home Committee consisting of Mrs. Harry W. Abells, Mrs. Edmund Miller, Mrs. Edmund Anthony, Mrs. Morgan S. Hurley and Mrs. Charles W. Laffin have planned a luncheon and the program "My collection of Glass" by Mrs. George J. Brookhiser will be presented.

Local Educator Sees Critical Issues

Challenges Candidates For Declarations On Education

Calvin B. T. Lee, of Newton, acting president of Boston University, last week challenged political candidates of both parties to take stands on some of the critical issues facing private higher education in the state of Massachusetts.

Lee, addressing a dinner meeting sponsored by the Boston University Downtown Alumni Club, told the assembled BU graduates that universities, already beleaguered by student revolutionaries, have become political footballs, "a target of political candidates in both parties, as they seek a scapegoat for unrest in the country, for the financial problems of the state or the city, or for what is called the breakdown of morality in America."

Calling financing the most crucial trouble spot confronting private colleges and universities, Lee noted "that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is fifth in affluence among the states, and it is 49th in terms of expenditures per capita for higher education. I, therefore, challenge the candidates of both parties," said Lee, "to consider whether or not this isn't a disgraceful fact."

In this election year, Lee continued, "we have heard little, if anything, from the candidates about their positions regarding the future of higher education in this state — and in particular private higher education — so important a part of this Commonwealth. I challenge the candidates of both parties to speak to this issue."

Lee also noted the multi-million dollar expenditures of private educational institutions in the state. In 1968-1969, he said, private institutions put out $773 million in operating expenditures, plus another $90 million in plant expenditures. In addition, the Newton man pointed to the vast number of technology based business enterprises that have grown up around universities in the area. "I challenge the candidates of both parties," Lee said, "to consider the many values of higher education in this Commonwealth."

Lee hailed Massachusetts for its development of a dual system of higher education which includes both private and public institutions. Sixty-eight per cent of the students attending colleges and univertities in Massachusetts, he said, attend one of the state's 97 private institutions. This, said Lee, relieves the Commonwealth of a major share of the burden of educating its citizens.

"Massachusetts has the unique opportunity," said Lee, "if its 97 independent colleges are to be preserved, to provide a truly pluralistic and diversified system of higher education."

Illustrating the plight in which private institutions now find themselves, Lee cited a report of the Select Committee for the Study of Financial Problems of Private Institutions of Higher Education in Massachusetts. Lee claimed that the report, released last January, has received only scant public attention.

The committee report projects that private higher education in the state will face a collective deficit of some $50 million within five years, and two or three times that amount in 10 years. Federal funds are drying up, the report says, and many private institutions will be forced to cope with their declining financial fortunes by limiting student aid expenditures, continuing tuition increases, and reducing the quality of education.

Absorption of private institutions by the existing state system is no answer to this problem, according to Lee. Based on the experience in other states, such mergers merely increase the costs of education. The University of Buffalo, for example, when it was merged with the State University of New York in 1962, had trouble balancing its budget, but was operating on a relatively small endowment of $17 million.

Today, the state of New York pumps $45 million a year into the school for approximately the same number of students that were enrolled in 1962.

As one way to solve the financial difficulties of private higher education, Lee pointed to a recommendation of the Select Committee that the Commonwealth make direct grants to private institutions, based on a percentage of the cost of education at comparable state schools. Further, he said, the state might consider a scholarship program — such as exists in 22 other states in the U.S. — that would enable a student to attend the college of his choice, public or private.

In closing, Lee urged BU alumni to continue their financial support of the university, and to "work to bring about discussion by the candidates on the future of private higher education."

Political Highlights

McGlennon summed up his case by saying he considered the big issue of his contest with Father Drinan to be his legislative experience. He added that he is looking forward to a debate with Father Drinan, an encounter which should be an extremely interesting one.

Former Political Columnist Predicts His Own Election

In the past 30 years the Republicans not once have been able to elect a member of their party as State Auditor, and there is some doubt that they will be able to resume the ancient custom this autumn.

But as one political writer put it, Frank Bucci of Braintree, the Republican candidate for State Auditor, is "one of our own."

Bucci was formerly Boston City Hall and State House reporter and political columnist for the Boston Traveler.

He understood the workings of the State and City governments, and he dealt in facts which he carefully researched and developed.

A Seminarian for a period, Bucci was educated at St. Anthony's School in Boston's North End, the St. Francis Seminary in West Andover and St. Antony's College in Catskill, N.Y.

Bucci is a veteran of the Korean War, having served as a special agent with a counter-intelligence unit in Seoul. He studied law at night while working as a reporter and columnist for the Traveler.

He left the Traveler after passing the Bar and being admitted to the practise of law. He was serving as an Assistant District Attorney in Suffolk County under Garrett Byrne when he decided to run for State Auditor.

Candidate Bucci is active in civic and town affairs in Braintree. He is a Boy Scout counselor, a member of the Braintree Finance Committee, a member of the Sons of Italy and the Knights of Columbus.

Bucci says that well documented polls indicate he will be the first Republican in three decades to win election as State Auditor in Massachusetts. Time will tell whether he is being as realistic in his political appraisals of his own election chances as when he was writing columns.

Federal Court Ruling Means Baird Can't Run For Senate

Into every life a certain number of tear drops must fall, and it saddens us to report that the name of William R. Baird will not be on the ballot Nov. 3 as an independent candidate for the U.S. Senate.

A three-judge Federal Court did not have the good taste, sensitivity and judgment, to say nothing of graciousness, to set aside a law requiring him to obtain about 62,000 signatures of registered voters in order to run as an independent candidate for the Senate.

Apparently, the three jurists did not realize that Mr. Baird is a very important man because they ruled that he must comply with the law just like any ordinary person.

They also may have been unaware of the honor Mr. Baird was bestowing upon us in offering himself as a candidate for election to the U.S. Senate from Massachusetts since he is not a resident of our state.

Mr. Baird is an advocate of such things as legalized abortion, legalized sodomy and legalized homosexuality.

There are times when Mr. Baird is a bit too much such as when he gets himself arrested and then has his children picket the jail where he served part of his sentence.

But that is beside the point. It would have been interesting to see how many people share Mr. Baird's views on such subjects as sodomy, abortion and homosexuality. We doubt the number would be large. But now we may never know.

Tony Salatan To Present Kiddie's Program Oct. 18 principals, several teachers, and some students.

Supt. Fink explained, "At all the meetings at which I've spoken on the subject, I have said that what has been done nationally has not been effective if one measures drug education by drug use. We must take a more realistic and imaginative approach.

"The giving of mere information is not going to solve the problem. The School Department does not reject the idea of a plan or program. We have never hesitated to communicate to the public either our programs or our problems, of which we have many."

"I know that Newton has a group of students presently in training to help their younger brothers and sisters cope with the problem of drugs. I know that individual schools have had isolated incidents of excellent programs.

"I know that several schools have had qualified speakers on the subject, and I know that Newton teachers have had some kind of summer workshop of drug education . . . but all of these programs are seemingly without direction from the school system, and without a continuity from one grade level to another or from one school to another," Lipf said.

School Committeeman Richard Douglas maintained that a program has been in existence since 1967. He said that the Mayor, the School Department and the Police have worked together in an effort to find solutions to the problem.

"I am still unaware of any definite overall plan," Lipof added.

Committeeman Vincent Stanton noted, "We cannot escape wanting something that is a balm to our consciences. But the important thing is not that we have a package plan. That is a tremendous over - simplification. Woe to us if we have the greatest showpiece in the nation and the kids think we are charlatans. The big thing is our people who teach in Newton."

Fink declared, "I am not satisfied with the program in this school system. The people who are working with it aren't satisfied. For this reasn we have tried and are trying a variety of programs.

"Nobody yet knows the answers. We have to find new ways. The basic problem is dealing with the drug culture — with attitudes of kids. It might be helpful to have a program where kids deal with other kids; may be counseling is best. We're still looking."

The committee asked the School Department to furnish Lipof with all the written information on programs in the Newton schools "even though he has not asked for it," said Chairman Manuel Beckwith.

Beckwith summed up the situation saying that "we all recognize that there is a drug problem here as well as in every other community. We never do all we can do, but Mayor Basbas has effectively tried to do an intelligent job in combatting the use and abuse of drugs in the city.

"I havenever sat in on meetings where there has been a more intelligent approach. Maybe the parents aren't doing all they can. We know the School Department has a long way to go, but we'll do our part We'll hold our own or better.

"It is a great misfortune that this alderman has fired from the hip and created this stir, not because of the affront to the School Committee, but what effect did it have on the people who have been working hard whether they be teachers or police officers:"

There was no discussion at Monday night's meeting of any details of drug programs in the city's schools.

College Comes To Teacher in Pennsylvania

An updated version of a mobile classroom will soon take to the highways in Pennsylvania to bring graduate courses to teachers unable to come to the university.

The Pennsylvania State University will operate a van equiped with a central computer and 12 terminals to provide individual instruction for teachers.

The van will spend six to 10 weeks in local schoolyards. The first course to be offered will prepare regular classroom teachers to spot children with minor handicaps.

Using the mobile computer, teachers can schedule the course at their own convenience and complete it at their own pace.

Dr. Harold E. Mitzel, assistant dean for research in the university's College of Education, says it has been found teachers enjoy using the computer terminals.

"They appreciate the individualized instruction," he said, "and, when they don't understand something, they aren't embarrassed by having to ask questions in public."

Mitzel said the van will serve educators from both public and private schools and hopes to reach some 3,000 teachers over the next three years.

Spain Opens Educational Doors to All

Juan Espanol's educational opportunities might still trail those of Johnny Smith, but his chances of reaching college will increase a hundredfold with the coming fall term.

For the first time in Spain's history, this September all schools, including those run by the powerful Roman Catholic Church, will be forced to offer "compulsory and free" education.

Simultaneously, the two-tier system that effectively barred the poor from college will be erased.

"The new system will absolutely guarantee a university education for anyone with ability," an education ministry official said.

Previously, Spain ran two school networks. In one, children of middle and upper class families received college preparatory courses while the sons of poor families were restricted to an eight-year education in basic topics.

"Once he passed 10 years ole, the student from a poor family had no opportunity to advance," the official said.

An important section of the educational reform program bans private schools, traditional haunts of the rich, from charging fees for their services, but allows them to continue in operation.

"We have no desire to close these schools," the official said. "If they have financial problems, they can always ask for a government grant."

If these funds are released, he said, the private schools must accept government supervision and adopt a uniform curriculum.

To ensure the availability of the new advantages to the poor, the governmeent has set up a system of student subsidies and grants, and launched a major campaign against dropouts.

Under the subsidy system, both the student and his family will receive monthly allowances from the government. These, the official said, will equal the wages the youth might have earned by leaving school.

Radio, television, newspapers and posters constantly are p romoting the value of education. The nationwide program stresses that study is a patriotic duty and books create money.

"Study for Spain" posters adorn the nation's walls and television programs, show skits of a student day dreaming about fame and riches with his book turning into a fistful of pesetas.

There is little doubt among officials that such a program is needed. A recent survey os students who entered the school in 1950 showed only 3 out of every 100 completed college and only 27 reached secondary school.

Africa averages about 15.1 persons per square mile.

Press Agent to Battle Nation's Pollution Woes

The U.S. Department of the Interior, under fire because of the nation's pollution woes, has hired a press agent to spruce up its image.

Hollywood publicist Edward Shaw said he has been engaged to help the department "get into the concert promotion field."

The government, Shaw said, feels that "people will listen to a lecture or seminar on land pollution if it's given by a Hollywood celebrity."

Shaw said the government agency chose him "because I know a lot of celebrities. . . the department's own people didn't know many."

Shaw, in New York briefly before going to Washington for consultations with department officials, said the government personnel "are not press agents. They needed outside help. They weren't getting any good publicity."

Shaw's first assignment with the department is to coordinate its concert program, called the Johnny Horizon Program.

Forging Travelers' Checks Increasing Says Interpol

The forged Turkish banknote was grotesque. It looked more like an example of child art painted with diluted mud. But the 100-franc French banknote looked real enough.

A U.S. $100 bill in the collection seemed genuine until given a close look. The name under the picture was Franklin, but the reproduction was of Jefferson.

"This one was found in Sweden," the Interpol counterfeit specialist said, fingering the American bill. "The forger changed the designation $2 to $100, scratched out the name Jefferson and put in Franklin. It would probably not fool many Americans, but in Europe such a forgery can have a long life before being discovered, especially since it was once a genuine banknote."

We were in the counterfeit not section of the headquarters of the International Criminal Police Organization at Suburban Saint Cloud, overlooking the Bois de Boulogne and with a distant view of the Eiffel Tower.

"We have a collection of genuine and forged notes from 180 countries," the counterfeit specialist said. "Some of them are really primitive -- like the Turkish note -- but others would fool everyone but the experts. There are also some unintentional forgeries -- like these 2,000 - florin Dutch notes. A firm had them printed as a publicity gimmick, with the design just like the one on the 1,000-florin notes. Now, there's no such thing as a Dutch 2,000 florin note, but a number of them found their way into circulation."

Interpol officials are concerned at a recent rise in forged traveler's checks. "There is also a steady increase in counterfeit dollar bills, because of the international role of U.S. currency," one official said.

"It's interesting to note that several east European Communist countries—which are not among our 105 members -- cooperate with us in the fight against forged currency by supplying us with specimens of genuine notes."

In his wood-panelled office, Interpol Secretary-General Jean Nepote told UPI: "A lot of people have the wrong idea about us. We are not super James Bonds. Our work is simply a task of coordination. We cannot arrest anybody. That has to be done by national police forces.

"Without Interpol, however, the world would be a jungle. Interpol is indispensable to any national police force which considers itself organized. For instance, in 1968 a total of 934 criminals wanted by 28 countries were arrested and brought to justice through Interpol. Our organization gives a truly international service, despite its modest budget of about $800,000."

Member-countries, including developing nations, regularly send men for specialist courses at Saint Cloud, particularly in the forgery and narcotics sections, or in the archives department, which has comprehensive files on some 400,000 international criminals -- including drug traffickers -- and on 200,000 recorded thefts, narcotics seizes and other offenses.

A radio-station atop the building uses Morse code too transmit and receive information. Set up in 1923 with radio stations only in Paris and Zurich, the radio network has grown to 35 regional stations.

The Saint Cloud headquarters handles about 150,000 messages annually, including the transmission of international arrest warrants, graded "red" for wanted murder suspects and "green" for other criminals.

Japan Goes After E. Europe Trade

Teams of neatly dressed Japanese businessmen are becoming fixtures on Budapest's Lenin Korut, Prague's Wenceslas Square and Bucharest's Moulevard Magheru.

They are the shock troops of a determined invasion that is turning Communist eastern Europe into yet another rich market for Japan's exporters.

Japan's total trade with eastern Europe is still only about one fourth of its commerce with the Soviet Union, which is Japan's next door neighbor.

Japan sees in eastern Europe an expanding market for Japanese goods. The Communist consumer markets, so long depressed, are beginning to expand and Japan wants part of the business.

For the east Europeans, Japan has opened a back door to western technology. The Communist governments need western patents, processes and know-how if they are to modernize their industry so it can compete on western markets.

Because of political restrictions, east European trade with the United States has lagged. But Japan knows all the 20th century secrets and is willing to share them -- for a price.

Japanese exports so far have been mostly heavy machinery, although cars are winning a share of the east European market. Czechoslovakia, for instance, bought 3,000 Toyotas in 1969.

Poland is the most active Japanese trading partner, with $57.7 million worth of business in 1969.

East German-Japanese trade amounts to $36.8 million and Romania and Japan do $36.5 million annually. Hungary, which is doing a booming business in western Europe,

Sweden Has Problems With Its 'Raggare'

The Swedish government has come up with a unique answer to its problem children - the unabashed hell-raising "raggare" - by giving them a mansion away from public eye and ear.

The raggare, who thrive on loud automobiles and free love, have been a social problem in Sweden since the early 1950s. They number several thousand boys and girls in their late teens and early twenties who are out for a good time - nothing more.

Authorities hope the delapidated 25-room mansion 13 miles northeast of Stockholm will reduce public complaints about the youths' offensive behavior in such public domain as parking lots and campgrounds. The nearest neighbor is a half-mile away.

The term "raggare" has the American equivalent of boys in automobiles "picking up" girls walking along the street. Members wear long hair and leather clothing. They throw wild parties and drive souped-up cars with throbbing mufflers and loaded with chrome. The noise of their cars is bad enough to the general public but their tendency to make love indiscreetly in public places is a little too much even for liberal Sweden.

It's not uncommon for police to break up swinging sex and drinking parties in parking lots and campgrounds. The raggare also have gone on occasional hooligan rampages.

When Stockholn police went on strike in June, gangs of raggare roamed the streets and looted state-owned liquor stores. They insulted pedestrians and caused $30,000 worth of damage.

Stockholm police created a "raggare squad" in the wake of the outburst but shelved it when the government's child and youth welfare committee agreed to pay the rent on the mansion outside the capital.

Called Tegelhagen, the mansion was secured in large part through a 15-year effort by Olof Moller, 47, an advertising man who in his youth was a raggare-like rebel.

Moller said Tegelhagen would have a large parking area for the raggare cars and ample open space to keep engine revvings and blaring pop music from annoying anyone.

The mansion, deserted for 10 years, is in bad disrepair. Plaster is crumbling, wallpaper is in tatters, the windows are jammed.

It is a major renovation job, but Moller hopes the raggare will be able to build a love nest from the ragged interior.

Raggar come mostly from working class families and usually have completed their nine years of compulsory education. Many of the boys work as automobile mechanics. Most of them live at home and have no philosophy other than having a good time while they are young. They have no inclination to overthrow the establishment, but chaff under the general public's criticism of their behavior.

Moller and police hope the mansion will help ease the friction on both sides.

This Week's Best Buys

The sighto ff bountiful displays of ripe, juicy McIntosh apples on produce counters should be no surprise this week, says the Mass. Dept. of Agriculture. Our native orchards are producing heavily, and the harvest, though not yet at its peak, goes on at top speed. Growers will be picking apples in the Bay State for the next five or six weeks.

Some markets are offering Macs right now as low as three pounds for 39 cents. Cortlands, too, are appearing in good supply, as are Red Delicious. The "early" apples, Gravenstein, Green Delicious and Opalescent, have well passed their peak for this season.

Bosc pears are coming in from nearby orchards. Some specimens are prizewinners, though the bulk of the current harvest runs to small sizes.

Cranberries are starting to come in fresh from the bogs, a harbinger of Fall menus, and Thanksgiving.

Green and sweet peppers, broccoli and parsnips are in good to heavy supply, and priced accordingly. In moderate supply are native green beans, cabbage and sweet corn. Trellis tomatoes are in light to moderate supply, and will remain so until the first heavy frost.

Medium eggs are best buys this week, according to the MDA.

Native Cauliflower, the "queen of the cabbage family," has begun to appear, and the supply will become increasingly good as the October harvest proceeds.

New 2-Hour Art Workshop For Kiddies Due Oct. 20

The All Elementary Art Workshop which will meet for two hours Thursdays from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. will give children a chance to work uninterruptedly for as long as they wish in many different art media. (for example string and plaster of paris sculpture; mobiles; wood constructions; stitchery and wall hangings; enameling; clay; puppet making; cork; film-making; batique; tiedyeing; gadget and ginger printing etc.)

They may work with their brothers, sisters, or friends, alone or in small groups. They may chose one media or try several. And they may work at their own paces, choosing the materials that appeal to them, and leaving and coming at anytime within the two hour limit.

Specific requests for materials will be considered. For example a girl who wishes to learn stitchery may request this of the instructor; a boy may decide to spend to entire semester in woodworking, etc.

The class will be taught by Joanne Holland, an experienced art teacher of many years and a mother of three children. Mrs. Holland believes that meaningful learning about art is a shared experience between student and teacher. She and her assistant will work towards motivating the children and helping them to evaluate their own work objectively. She will help youngsters both as a resource and as a guide as each student explores. And she will try to help him relate his work on his own experience of the world around him.

This class will begin October 20, but advanced registration is strongly recommended. There will be a special Meet-the-teacher sessions on October 15 when children will be able to indicate their favorite choice of activities.

For further information please call 969-5906.

Police See Pressure From State Board on Pay Raise

The Newton Police Association through its president has criticized State Labor Mediator Robert Browning for advocating that Newton Police accept the city's latest contract offer.

John W. Quinn (not the Police Chief William Quinn and no relation thereto) association president, has called Browning's position one of "unwarranted pressure" and said that the mediator has "overstepped his funcion in collective bargaining . . ."

In addition a signed statement by him calls Mayor Monte G. Basbas unfair to organized labor for going along with "this pressure."

A ballot which must be signed by Association members and returned to the state conciliation department by Monday asked them to vote yes or no on the latest city contract.

The contract includes a $550 raise effective November 1 and a $600 raise retroactive to May 1, 1970. It also adds incentive pay for secondary education courses and fair distribution of extra work details.

It does not have the "four and two" work schedule which the Association has requested.

The Quinn statement charges that the "pressure" is involved in the fact that if the Newton officers do not vote to accept the contract, they may forfeit the offer for retroactive pay raises due to a state law precluding the city from giving such raises after a given year has ended.

"A vote of acceptance under these threats and conditions would not actually constitute acceptance, but rather a fear of retaliation for not accepting," Mr. Quinn believes.

'Affluence' Sicknesses Hit Blacks

South Africa's black population has begun to suffer from the white man's "diseases of affluence," according to Dr. Harry Seftel, senior physician at Johannesburg's Non-European Hospital.

Seftel told a medical meeting that Western communities throughout the world were experiencing diabetes, obesity, coronary heart disease and heart disease and high blood pressure "in epidemic proportions." "All are largely the result, he said, "of sloth and gluttony." And he added:

"We are witnessing the beginning of a similar epidemic in our urbanized semi-Westernized African population. Already diabetes appears to be as common among them as it is in whites.

"Obesity is very common — the fattest women in the world today are found in the African townships of Johannesburg. And when we study this first generation of Africans with heart attacks we find they have the same characteristics as the whites."

The insulin level in a person's body might be an important factor in causing these diseases, Seftel said, and unlike their rural counterparts, the urbanized African who suffered from any of the "sloth and gluttony" diseases also had high insulin levels.

"I believe," he said, "that the lower incidence of diabetes among Africanns is going to be a thing of the past, and this gives some idea of the public health problems facing this country with the emergence of the Westernized African."

Dick Williams, Ex-Sox Mgr., Speaks Mind

Editor's Note: While in Pittsburgh last week, Sports Editor Frank Wall met and talked with former Red Sox Manager Dick Williams, now a coach with the Montreal Expos in the National League. Here are some of his comments. Dick Williams is one of the finest gentleman we have met in sports, and he is one who calls a spade a spade. Naturally the biggest question on our mind, and everybody's, was what do you think of the Red Sox? He casually avoided the question for a while while asking about Reggie Smith and George Scott. When in Boston he criticized Scott, but his attitude has changed:

"George is a fine fielder and his hitting has improved. I look for him to have many good years ahead of him." Would he like to manage in the majors again? The answer was a yes, but he's looking for an offer and if it comes he would certainly take it. He still agrees nothing compares with the thrills he had with the Red Sox in 1967 and will never forget what happened. Then he finally came across with what we were hinting about.

"The trouble with the Red Sox now is that most of them are prima donnas and don't think of the team first out their own selves. They'll never be a winner again with this attitude." Williams thought that a new ball park wouldn't gain the Sox much in attendance. "Look what they draw now, and one of the reasons is that the fans buy their tickets far ahead for they fear they won't get a seat. With a big stadium it just might cut their attendance."

His idea of a good manager is somebody like Leo Durocher who doesn't take any sass from anybody and calls a spade a spade. He also had fine words for Danny Murtaugh and thinks the Pirates have a good shot at beating the Reds in a short series. "They have faltered in the second half of the year and their pitching has gone downhill, and they can be beaten," he added.

Williams talked of his Montreal team and the fine work that Gene Mauch is doing. "We have a bunch of castoffs but we are playing good fundamental baseball and we have some fine young pitchers. Mauch works hard and it has paid off."

Williams is respected by the Pirates players and the Montreal press think he's just fine. He likes coaching with Montreal, but one could sense that he would sure like to be back as a major league manager and maybe meet his old friends from the Bosox in a series or two. Williams agrees that the Boston fans were just great to him, and also mentions that Montreal has some pretty rabid rooters also. He reminisced about the 1967 season and could tell you almost every score of every game that year, and could reel off almost every key play that took place.

In comparing the two leagues he said "There isn't that much difference." We said that the National League had better hitting and he quickly added "Do you think that maybe the pitchers in the American League could be better?" He thought Mays was just great but also thought that the American League had some fine team players like Harmon Killebrew, Frank Howard and Al Kaline.

We told Williams that many of the Red Sox fans still wish that he was with the Bosox and that they wished he was still the manager. He said to thank the people of Boston.

In closing if we had a choice of a manager to pick for any team we would surely consider Dick Williams. In just one hour he impressed us as a man who had some pretty good qualities, namely: a guy who snoots from the hip; he knows his baseball, inside and out; doesn't dog it himself, and agrees that hard work pays off; and he knows his place. In many opinions, his place would seem to be as boss of the Red Sox and then we would see how many prima donna's would be put in their place.

Jaywalking, Public Drunks Moscow's Woes

By DAVID NAGY

"This is the most terrifying sight in Moscow," an automobile passenger remarked as the car nosed through a herd of persons jaywalking across a main boulevard - "Pedestrians converging on you from all sides."

Muscovite authorities and an increasing number of private citizens agree.

They are cranking up a major publicity campaign in the press that could lead to much stiffer legal action against one of Moscow's biggest public nuisances - the jaywalker and his traffic-snarling cousin, the public drunk.

"In Moscow during the first six months of this year, there were 760,000 cases of traffic violations by pedestrians," the trade union newspaper Trud lamented. "Of these, only 1,480 violators were subjected to fines."

Spirited Bravado

The statistics summed up a situation well known to every driver in the Soviet capital - the most humdrum short ride to the grocery store can hatch a hair-raising game of try-and-stop-me with some pedestrian or a mob of them.

Lone strollers or mothers with children threading their way across eight-lane boulevards are common sights, but Muscovites are especially fond of forming great phalanxes to bull across en masse between crossings or against a light.

Foreign drivers, especially those without diplomatic status, react timidly, often stopping in midstreet.

Russian drivers seem to relish the challenge, however. A Russian car will roar toward a crowd of jaywalking pedestrians. At the last second they will pirouette out of harm's way. It is a maneuver that seems to be admired by both sides with the mutual respect of matador for bull, and vice versa.

There is, admittedly, a temptation to jaywalk due to the sheer dimensions of Moscow's streets. Many of the main streets run six to ten lanes wide.

At one intersection near the Kremlin the expanse of pavement is several hundred yards across, and a breathtaking adventure it is to winkle through it, whether in a car or on foot.

Moscow authorities have provided admirably for pedestrian safety. Pedestrian crossings are marked boldly with huge white cross-stripes. There are more tunnel crossings under Moscow's thoroughfares than most western cities can boast, and many more uniformed militiamen directing traffic and traffic police than in London and New York.

The People's Campaign

Signs warning against jaywalking dot the streets and police in blue-and-yellow prowl cars bellow warnings through loudspeakers. But the distances to cover being what they are, Muscovites seemingly much prefer to cross over catch as catch can.

The current maximum fine for jaywalking is 50 kopecks (55 cents). The guilty one also risks a reprimand from a comrades' court, the disciplinary groups organized at places of work. But the discouragements obviously aren't enough.

Lately, letters to newspaper editors have been calling for fines of up to three rubles ($3.33) and for jail sentences for those who cause accidents.

Nikolai Atarov, a popular fiction writer, in one article urged a saturation public education campaign. The article was headlined: "Stop, Pedestrian!"

THE MIRACULOUS RICE

"If you want to convince someone to do it your way, just show him your way is better." That was the 4th Infantry Division civil affairs team's plan of attack when it came to convincing the Montagnards of Vietnam's Central Highlands to plant a new type of rice in their tiny fields. Part of the team's program for a better life for the Montagnard tribe was the introduction of a new type . . . dubbed "miracle rice" by the experts. The natives were unsure, but a few villagers volunteered to try the new crop. And are they glad they did! Recent harvest of the new crop has yielded almost 300 per cent more than the normal plantings did.

The civil affairs team is happy at the success of their "miracle" rice, and the Montagnards are happy over the prospet of future crops.

Men's Wear

The Oulook Is Rosy For Men's Knitwear

By PATRICK JOHNSON

It had to come — this boom in men's knitwear, because men (more than women) have always put comfort in top priority.

The collections this year reveal the expanded perspective of knitted wools in the male wardrobe with styles ranging from suits in sweater knits, handsomely tailored double knits, jumpsuits, coats, blazers, slacks, to the new "shrinks," body shirts and deep brushed mohair "whisker" sports sweaters.

By the turn of the century, knits will dominate men's fashions and may well be the only fabric that survives.

The knitted wool tailored suit has finally come to full practical realization. Designers have taken advantage of wool's resilient richness to create tailored suits with superb comfort and distinction. These suits move away from formality with a no sleeve jacket, called the "Free Suit" or the "Shirt Suit," and the sweater-suit takes still another step toward casual ease with its sweater-knit texture.

One of these new easygoing suits combines ribbed wool pants with a jacket in spaced ribs by Himalaya. Double-knit wools are giving a new fashion punch too the separate pants category, appearing in an explosion of lively patterns, including art deco, stripings and imaginative scrolls. Leader in the pants area is Dunlee Slacks who report that patterns are outselling solids 60 to 40 percent.

Sweaters

In sweaters, the body-fit is the new signal, manifested in shrunken-looking styles that appear like miniatures in the hand, but the accordion-stretch of the flexible wool ribs give them a free-motion, body conforming fit. These waist length "Shrink-Fits" may be tank-top style, or long-sleeved, with deep U-necks, often with fishtail ribs that hug the waist.

Sleeves are narrowed, with small armholes, sometimes with deep ribbing from waist to elbow eemphasizing the snugness.

Style by Alps comes in a tweedy orange and yellow waffle knit, sleeveless tank-top, and by Robert Bruce in a Fair Isle jacquard. The trend toward the lean fit is a strong one that also appears in Western sweater shirts, cartoon pullovers, and original tie-dyes like the links-stitch wool by Pendleton.

Belts are part and parcel of sweater - wearing, as knitted self-belts or as individualistic accessories, worn single, double or triple to emphasize the short, close-fitting pullovers. The self-belts bring the Norfolk jacket into prominence, and define the line of the longer pullovers and vests. One of the most popular in strong ribs carries the Puritan label.

In deep brushed mohair-and-wool or all-wool, these have a new furry texture of great richness that gives a flow and dimension to patterns such as argyles, stripes, and blanket plaids. Belted vest style by Lord Jeff deserves speciaal merit because the mohair is brushed to a texture as soft as mink.

The poncho has evolved into a full-fledged trend. Its fringe benefits have been adapted in fishtail pullovers, and tank tops, bordered with wool fringe varying from a foot long to just a couple of inches. The matching sports sweater scarf is very much on the scene, long and leaner, with fringe accentuating its length. Spirited designs include jacquad Indian head isolated on the front of a pullover, an all-over design of the peace symbol, Navajo blanket patterns, and colorful patchwork. Color follows through on the young inclination with a lively range of purples, pinks, copper, blue and green.

DDT Substitutes May Be Even Greater Killers

"Based on present knowledge . . . the incidence of poisonings of many may be expected to increase."

That warning about the danger of handling some of the bug killers being substituted for DDT and other long-lived pesticides was published by Agriculture Department experts last March.

Its significance was underlined by recent reports of several deaths from Parathion poisoning in North Carolina, where it had replaced DDT in tobacco fields.

The warning indicated, in effect, that campaigns to phase out many uses of persistent, environment-polluting pesticides may be producing increased risks of accidental poisonings, including deaths.

The shorter-lived, nonpolluting chemicals like Parathion are frequently much more poisonous. They are more dangerous to handle unless extreme care is used, experts said.

The Agriculture Department's warning came in a review of the economic outlook if DDT and other persistent organochlorine pesticides are replaced where substitutes are available - with nonpersistent chemicals.

The report noted some shifts in that direction had already been made. It added that shortlived chemicals could be substituted for about three-fourths of the organochlorines being used, (as of 1966,) to control crop pests.

But the department warned that many of the substitutes — mainly organophosphorous and carbamate chemicals — are poisonous to man and other warmbblooded animals.

"In contrast to the organochlorines (like DDT) the detrimental effects of these substitutes tend to be acute rather than chronic and they have causeed numerous poisonings, some fatal, in man," the department said.

Although some of them produce environmental pollution and danger to fish and wildlife, DDT and its cousins are considered relatively safe to handle by man, the report said.

The investigations did not cover all pesticide accidents, officiaals stresseed. But they noted that Parathion was involved in 132 of the 181 accidental pesticide deaths investigated in the 3½ year period.

Plaid cloth is believed to have originated in Egypt.

New Products For The Home

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

Browsing through the manufacturers' new product offerings turns up these items of interest too homeowners:

The latest in appliances —a handy, under-counter compactor that can compress a week's accumulation of trash and garbage for a family of four into a small, disposable bag. A miniature version of the compactors used in high-rise apartment buildings, the compressor will dispose of plastic and glass bottles, milk cartons, cans, paper products, aerosol cans and other garbage, grease and refuse in a water-risistant, polyethylene-lined Kraft bag. Housed in the drawer of a counter height, 15-inch wide cabinet, which can be freestanding or built-in, the compactor runs on a small electric motor, compressing waste to one-fourth original volume by means of a ram exerting 2,000 pounds of force. For safety, a key must be turned to operate the unit, and there is automatic shutoff if the drawer is opened. A deodorant spray is released on the waste each time the drawer is closed.

A new portable Osmotic attached to any faucet to. remove dissolved mineral salts, chemicals and other impurities from home water by means of reverse osmosis. Only 11 inches by 16 inches, the unit fits on sink area counters or can be hung from wall or cabinet. The purifier uses natural water pressure to force a portion of the incoming tap water through a porous film. Impurities which cannot pass through are flushed away through the sink's drain. No chemicals are added.

* * *

A new Rayguard device tto warn owners of color television sets of the potential of dangerous X-radiation from their sets. The device, a sensor unit which must be installed inside the set by a trained electronic repairman, and a meter to be set on a bracket at the rear, monitors high voltage parts of the set, providing a warning to the set owner when voltage exceeds levels set by the manufacturer of the television unit.

* * *

A floor wax that offers more than meets the eye. In addition to a gleaming shine, new Freewax promises to kill all crawling insects on contact, with absolute safety to people and pets. Marketed for use on wood, terrazo, asphalt, linoleum, rubber, vinyl and cork—also on window and door sills, baseboards, sink and pipe areas, even on kitchen cabinets or wherever food is stored.

Mechanic's Lingo Can Confuse Lady Drivers

By J. RICHARD JOHNSON

If an auto mechanic wants to check your bonnet, ladies, don't show him your new hat. He just wants to look under the hood of your auto.

And when he talks to you about your pot, don't be insulted. He's really referring to the car's carburetor.

These and other bewildering expressions are used by members of the automotive world, according to Zollie S. Frank, president of Z. Frank, Inc., Chicago, an auto sales firm.

"For example," Frank said, "where's the best place to go for a cream puff, a bagel or a beefer?"

"Certainly not to a restaurant — at least not if you want to keep your car running smoothly."

"Frank said the object is to turn a "bagel" (a poorly maintained car) into a "cream puff" (a clean car), and a "hot set up" (a high performance auto), one that will satisfy even a "beefer" (a complaining customer).

And speaking of customers, "baldies" aren't hairless drivers, Frank said. They're badly worn tires.

A "wind mill" refers to the radiator fan, and the "deck lid" is the lid of the trunk.

"Don't be afraid of a wrecker," Frank said. "A tow truck can often be a welcomed sight."

In addition to the above phrases and words, a list of auto mechanic terminology would include:

Mill, high performance engine; 4-6 or 8 banger, 4-6 or 8 cylinder engine; sins, tires; pots, pistons; cons, connecting rods; 4 on the floor, 4 speed transmission; posi, positration rear axle; clock, speedometer; spritzers, windshield washer.

Coffee Tips By Navy Chef

By ROBERT C. MILLER

The Wahiawa Naval Communications Station has parlayed a cup of coffee and a bowl of soup into the best of the Navy's big mess halls.

For the second time in three years the general mess at Wahiawa has won the Edward F. Ney Memorial Award for feeding more people ashore better than anyone else in the Navy. And one of the fringe benefits was the award of the "golden cup and saucer" for brewing the best cup of coffee in the Navy.

The station, located about 20 miles from Honolulu, serves an average 375 noon meals daily in its flower-decorated dining hall, provides ice cream 24 hours a day, has pretty girls ladling out the goodies, but never lets a woman close to a stove.

The foundation stones of Waiawa's success are its coffee and its bean soup.

Chief James L. Barnes of Nashville, Tenn., who has brewed enough coffee to float half the Navy, says the secret of a cup of good coffee is ltc—loving, tender care.

Coffee Do's, Dont's

"There are more don'ts than do's to making a good cup of coffee," Barnes explained.

"Never boil coffee. Never let it stand in the pot. Never brew it in a dirty pot. Use only glass or stainless steal containers. You can't make a good cup of coffee in an electric percolater. Never let the water stay married to the grounds more than six minutes.

Most important, the veteran food handler said, is to use the correct grind.

Temperature is also an important factor.

"The beer experts will tell you that 53 degrees is the best temperature to serve beer, but few people know that the ideal temperature too serve coffee is 155 degrees," Barnes explained. "And the water temperature in the pot should be between 195 and 205 degrees, and never boiling!"

The chief frowns on the use of aluminum coffee pots. "Too porous,"he said.

He also explained that ground coffee loses 35 percent of its flavor within 24 hours after the can is opened, and practically all the oils are gone from an opened can in three days.

Lt. Dana C. Chase, of Morris Plains, N.J., said the Navy had never used instant coffee because it lacks the quality of the whole bean.

James C. Coombes, who handles the civilian management at Wahiawa, said an extra half gallon of water is now added for every pound of coffee used as "The boys don't like it too strong.

"More and more of them are drinking milk and soft drinks," Coombes said, "but there aren't too many tea drinkers."

White, dry beans are used in the prize-winning Navy bean soup ladled out at Wahiawa, along with hamhocks, ham, onions, carrots, cabbage and garlic.

The most disappointed cook at Wahiawa is Tom Morris, of McConnelsville, Ohio, who developed the "first team" bean soup recipe especially for an annual "Navy Bean Soup" competition.

"But we never got a chance to show the world how good it was," Morris said, "as the competition was discontinued just when we had the trophy cinched."

"We serve the best food in the navy," Chase said matter of factly, "so we try to package it accordingly. This is a dining room, not a 'mess', and we serve food, now 'chow.'"

White Collar Workers Glut Job Mart

Dunstan Hayden, a former Benedictine monk trained as a specialist in educational technology, figures he has entered the job market at the wrong time.

"Everybody keeps saying that people are our most important resource but I feel like I'm being squandered." he said.

Hayden, 38, has been looking for three months. For him and for thousands of other panicky white collar and professional people, there are no jobs.

"Everywhere you go, you hear the same thing," he said. "There are no government grants this year and therefore we're not hiring."

His experience is being shared by an increasing number of professionals in the economic squeeze resulting from the administration's efforts to combat inflation.

A recent report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) showed that white collar unemployment rose in August to the highest level in nearly 10 years. BLS found 1,114,000 persons, or 2.7 per cent of the white collar labor force, out of work in August. A year ago, there were 873,000 jobless white collar workers -- 2.2 percent of the labor force.

Many of the newly unemployed are scientists and engineers who received their degrees in the post-Sputnik days when U.S. society was putting a premium on technological skill. Now, with cutbacks in government, defense and aerospace spending, the market for their services is glutted.

J. Paul Cali, a scientist with the U.S. Bureau of Standards, said he has been trying unsuccessfully for several months to find jobs for seven fellow scientists.

"These are all highly trained, educated, professional people. But there just isn't room for them any place right now," he said.

"It used to be that when we had an opening here we'd have to go out and hunt for someone to fill it. Now we have 15 applicants whenever there is an opening."

First Jobs Harder

One of the trade journals that serves the engineering community reported this month that the demand for engineers and scientists has hit a ten-year low. It published a lengthy article advising engineers on how too go about preparing for job hunting and interviewing. "The suddenness of the layoffs has left deep scars in the technological community." it said.

If things look bleak for men who've once had jobs, they're even worse for young professionals who are still trying to find a first job.

A 24-year-old college graduate with a Ph.D., a wife and baby daughter but without business or other training, explained his predicament succinctly.

He told an interviewer, one of a dozen he had seen: "If ever a man needs a job, I do. I have mouths to feed, but I don't have any of the ordinary skills that you or a dozen other employers want.

"I feel I have wasted years on my education while others of my age group were out learning how to make a living."

How to Adapt

According to Labor Department figures, more than 16 percent of the unemployed professionals have been out of work for 15 weeks or longer.

In Los Angeles, which has an especially large concentration of aerospace and defense contracting plants, thousands of engineers have used up their 26 weeks of unemployment benefits and still have no jobs in sight.

That means they no longer have income of any kind. For people used to living a comfortable, affluent, middleclass American life, this can be traumatic.

"You learn to get by -- finally," said a rocket engineer, formerly with a small research and development firm outside Washington. "First you cut back on a lot of the little things -- on entertaining, new clothes, special things for the kids.

"You put off getting a color television set, and that seems easy. Then you wonder about making the house payment, and panic hits."

In many cases, the only solution is for the wife to go to work - if she can find a job.

The teaching field was once a typical occupation for married women because it allowed a family to supplement its income while the husband was getting established.

But now it is glutted. Boston, for example, had 3,500 applicants for 350 teaching jobs. Milwaukee had 2,000 applicants for 700 jobs. Searsdale, N.Y., reported that it had Ph.D.'s applying to teach third-graders.

The advertising industry, an economic bellwether, last year reported its first drop in employment since 1961. It was due in part at least to large cutbacks in automobile and cigarette advertising and the general slowdown in the economy.

Jobs Cut In Half

The gloomy outlook for the white collar brigade and unemployed professionals became even gloomier this month with the cancellation of two Apollo moonshots. The space agency said 700 civil servants and 2,300 space contractor personnel will be discharged.

In the space industry, private corporations will be employing only 142,000 less than half the number employed three years ago.

Such figures help to explain the panic that is spreading among once relatively affluent people who never thought they would be among the ranks of the unemployed.

Mann Emp'sizes Importance Here Of Court Verdict

Representative Theodore D. Manns today drew attention to the importance of the recent decision of the Superior Court dealing with Assessment made on Newton for sewage disposal in the M.D.C. System.

"The decision," Rep. Mann pointed out, "may very well mean that Newton, in common with other communities of Greater Boston, will benefit by a reduction in the MDC assessment as a result of the decision."

"Our City Administration acted promptly on the advice it received from the Legislative Committee investigating the MDC apportionment of costs to forty-one cities and towns and now stands to benefit its taxpayers," Rep. Mann, who was a member of the Legislative Committee, reported.

"Our legislative investigation of the Deer Island MDC disposal system and allocation of costs, authorized in 1967, revealed that Newton was paying an additional twenty-five percent of costs because of the failure of the City of Boston to pay its 'fair share,'" Rep. Mann noted.

"When these facts were turned up," Mann added, "The Committee notified all the communities involved, and as a result of the action taken, last week's decision by Judge August C. Taveira in favor of communities such as Newton resulted. With this Court ruling Newton, along with other cities and towns, has taken a major step to assure of MDC sewage costs."

Arthur Fiedler, world famous conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra since 1930 is coming to Newton to conduct the Newton Symphony Orchestra in a Benefit Pops Concert on Dec. 13. The concert, which will be held at Boston College, is the first benefit concert given by the Orchestra.

Michel Sasson, violinist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1959, continues his active career as founder - conductor of the Newton Symphony Orchestra, which is beginning its fifth season.

In addition, Mr. Sasson is condutor of the Brockton Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Civic Orchestra.

Added to Mr. Sasson's many past laurels were Boston Music critics' acclaim for his orchestras' performance during last season.

This year, the Newton Symphony Benefit Pops Concert is being given in addition to the regular subscription series. Mr. Sasson is hopeful that the Benefit Concert will aid the Student Scholarship Fund, the Youth Concerts in Newton and support other orchestral activites.

It is hoped that many people in the Newton area will want to support and participate in the planning of this exciting event. Chairmen of the Benefit Concert are Mr. Dann Wyman and Mrs. Paul Rosman. Would anyone interested in helping in any way, please contact Mrs. Rosman at 969-4232.

County Government Is Target Of Basbas Ire

Newton Mayor Monte G. Basbas is less than overjoyed about an announcement by the State Tax Commission that Newton will receive $231,238 as its share of returns from the State's current tax proceeds.

In responding to the Commission's announcement, the Newton Chief Executive explained, "How can I feel any satisfaction toward such news, when I know full well that any income for our City from State sources is more than negated by the ridiculous and constantly worsening assessments levied on us by Middlesex County? How can we take any pleasure in receiving $231,000 from the State, when we have to pay over $2,000,000, or nearly ten times as much, to the County?"

In the nearly five years that he has been Mayor, Basbas has been waging a lone struggle against what he terms the, "irresponsible financial attitude of county government, which is accountable to no one for what it spends and yet has affected so seriously the burden of the taxpayer who must meet its constantly climbing assessments through the local property tax."

As president of the Massachusetts Mayors' Association, Basbas has met with success in rallying the cities and towns beside him in the struggle to provide relief for the taxpayer.

Earlier this year, a group from that Association, led by Basbas, sought support of the Governor in taking action toward increased accountability by the counties for their spending. Governor Sargent, much to the satisfaction of the municipal leaders, responded with legislation filed toward that end.

A candidate for the State Senate seat from the newly-created Newton-Watertown district, Basbas made special mention of the problem as it is faced by those two communities.

"Newton," he stated, "paid a tax of $1,756,680 to the county in 1969. Our tax in 1970 was supposed to be just $42,000 higher, or $1,798,152, according to the 'cherry sheet' we received in May of this year.

"Instead, the actual county tax bill came out to $2,073,673, a full $275,000 higher than the estimate we received just four months ago. This last-minute increase, typical of county taxation, is more than the entire amount that the State Tax Commission has announced we will receive."

He went on the state that, "the problem is no better in our neighbor, Watertown. They paid a county tax of $599,121 in 1969. Their tax in 1970 was t o have been $613,266, just $14,000 higher. When the actual bill came out, Watertown was hit with a $93,000 increase over what was expected. Their actual bill for 1970 is $707,233."

Basbas then focused on the figure that most directly affects the taxpayer. "When translated," he said, "all of this means that the county tax bill for 1970 has affected the local tax rate in Newton by approximately $6.00 per thousand, and in Watertown by approximately $7.00 per thousand. These assessments, along with their sudden, unexpected increases, have affected the pocketbook of every citizen who pays a property tax."

The State Senatorial candidate closed his comments by saying that, "I hope I have demonstrated why I cannot feel appreciative over the 'return' given us by the State. It is only a drop given back from the bloodletting of the taxpayers. Until the State Legislature imposes real controls on county spending and assessing, I fear the situation can only get worse."

This new car is the best reason not to buy a Volkswagen Beetle.

In a year when every car maker seems to be giving you one reason or another not to buy a Volkswagen Beetle, it might be a good idea to listen to the best reason:

Volkswagen's Super Beetle.

It has almost twice the luggage space as the Beetle of yesteryear.

It has a longer-lasting, more powerful engine.

It has a new suspension system for a smoother ride.

It has a flow-through ventilation system to bring in fresh air when the windows are closed.

The interior is, to be honest, much nicer.

The floor, for example, is fully carpeted.

In all, it has 89 things you could never find on a Beetle.

So of all the claims you'll hear this year by car makers that their cars are "better than a Beetle," there's only one car maker with 25 years experience in small cars to back it up.

Volkswagen.

Date Change In Time of Meeting

The Community Relations Commission has changed its meeting date to October 20, 8 p.m., Newton City Hall.

The prior date, October 14, was cancelled due to the religious holiday.

Plan--

ents and four teachers (one each in English, social studies, science and math), a guidance councilor and an administrator.

The basic goals of the clustering, according to Weeks Principal Socrates Lagios, are to create a structure and climate whereby the students and the faculty get to know each other better, "so we may develop a sense of community and to enable the faculty teaching the same students to meet and share knowledge and information about students in order to increase their awareness and understanding of the students, so that they might better motivate their students to learn more."

The present Castle Square proposal involves all the teachers in one of the ninth grade clusters. The group contains 95 students.

Lagios said the goal is to involve eventually all of the school's ninth graders but "we feel involving 95 students is a necessary second stage before all the students participate."

"The Castle Square - Weeks program points the way to another avenue to have an extended and meaningful out-of-school learning experience. A school becomes more of a school when it extends and utilizes its community resources. The student then sees his community as a resource center of ideas and involvement, and the school as an imaginative utilizer of community resources, "Lagios commented.

This year's plan calls for the division of the cluster of 95 students, which represents a cross - section of the ninth grade at Weeks, into four groups of 24 students each. Each of the four groups will spend six weeks of the academic year at the store - front school, located across the street from the Castle Square housing development.

As in last spring's program, students will commute on the MBTA each day to the Arlington St. station, a short walk from the store - front. They will be at Castle Square from 8:30 to 2:30 with a teacher with whom they have extensive contact at Weeks. MBTA fare will be paid out of the school's instructional account and will total $700 for the year, Lagios said.

Exchange visits between students at Castle Square and those at the Lincoln School were made last spring.

Lagios said a goal of this year's program is to "strengthen the collaboration and build Castle Square into a cooperative venture so that Weeks people might share the experience with Boston students."

During the pilot project last spring, Lagios reported, a typical day included the following activities: "a morning meeting in which daily plans were made, writing in journals, quiet periods for individual study and tutoring, small group trips to places like Chinatown or Haymarket, informal discussions with neighborhood residents, maintenance work such as planting a garden in the rear of the store, helping out at a day care center, lunch, experiments with mice, and a final meeting in which the chief topic was our relationship with and responsibility to the South End community".

As Supt. Aaron Fink summed up the program, the students who will occupy the storefront school will deal with the problems of the urban area, study the nature of the area and relate this to their program at Weeks.

Committeeman Vincent Stanton expressed the reservation that the environment was the critical factor and not the program. "The message is the medium, and it's not enough," he remarked.

Committeeman Alvin Mandell, who voted against approval of the program, said he was concerned "about the dilution of the educational program." He expressed the feeling that at this stage on the educational ladder greatest emphasis should be on subject matter.

Newton Couple At Dedication

radiology - will play a vital role in the Hospital's many research programs.

Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, General Director of Beth Israel, summarized its importance when he told the guests, "The Landers Research Radiology Unit is designed with one purpose in mind - to bring advances in medicine to the patient's bedside as quickly as possible.

"Let me give you an illustration. . . a few years ago, in an experimental x-ray unit such as this, a procedure was devised to visualize the lymph nodes. Among the pioneers was Dr. Morris Simon, who is here with us today.

"The development of this new technique, first through experimental studies on animals and then in man, ushered in a era of hope and of cure for many patients with Hodgkins Disease. It could not have been done without a procedure unit for experimental radiology. It will be repeated many times over with this new Landers Unit.

"Advances in open heart surgery, in brain surgery, in surgery of peptic ulcer, of peripheral vascular disease - all begin in this unit. And Dr. Rabkin continued, "the increasingly sophisticated X-ray diagnostic procedures that spread out to become standard all across the country - these, too, are born in such a unit."

Irving W. Rabb, hospital president, accepted the facility on behalf o fthe Officers and Trustees. "This dedication has significance far beyond the physical size of the unit itself - this is rather a symbol of the total love and commitment of two dedicated people, Fanny and Bernard Landers," Mr. Rabb said.

He recalled that Mr. and Mrs. Landers had given consistent support to Beth Israel Hospital over the years and that the new Landers suite, located on the third floor of the Slosberg-Landay Research Center, is but one manifestation of the couple's devotion.

Three years ago, a clinical X-ray unit for serving the Emergency Unit and Outpatient Department was dedicated to the Landers in appreciation of their commitment to the Hospital.

In response, Mr. Landers expressed the pleasure that he and Mrs. Landers felt in helping to provide the Hospital with a modern, experimental radiologic unit. "My wife and I are proud to be a part of the Beth Israel community and will continue to help it grow and develop," he said.

A Trustee of Beth Israel since 1960, Mr. Landers is a member of the Hospital's Finance and Public Relations Committee.

A generous contributor to the Development Campaign of 1960 and the Golden Anniversary Fund of 1966, Mr. Landers also served on the Personnel Practices Committee for several years.

A Life Member of the Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. Landers has been active in its programs for many years.

In addition to his long association with Beth Israel, Mr. Landers is prominent in a number of other community oranizations. A Trustee of both Temple Emmanuel and the Combined Jewish Philanthropies, he presently serves as a member of the CJP's Office and Finance Committee.

He is a past chairman of their Business Men's Council and the Chemicals and Plastics Division. He is also a past president of the Brighton-Brookline-Newton Jewish Community Center.

Basbas Calls For Program To Aid Educational Needs

Mayor Monte G. Basbas of Newton today called for forward - looking action to meet the need for modern educational programs and at the same time to relieve the real estate tax burden of the rent-payer and homeowner.

Declaring that he would sponsor and support legislation for a surcharge on the State Income Tax, Basbas declared, "The revenue derived from this surcharge is to be used exclusively to support the educational programs of our cities and towns."

Basbas further outlined several guidelines, among them:

1. Funds so collected would be distributed to cities and towns on the basis of an equitable predetermined formula through block grants;

2. Each school system through its own initiative and funding would be permitted to exceed the funds received from this source;

3. The direction and operation of individual school systems would remain within the local control of cities and towns and school districts.

In making the proposal, Mayor Basbas stated: "We have to get on with such a program without delay if we are not to fall too far behind in our educational programs throughout the state and if we are to bring much needed relief to the homeowner and rent-payer."

"There is no question in my mind that in a society as complex and technical as ours, there is an ever - increasing pressure to give our children the very best education we can so that they may cope with the problems of living in today's world.

"No child shall be deprived of educational opportunity because he happens to live in a depressed area where tax funds are inadequate because of economic conditions.

"On the other hand, in providing state funds, we do not want to straight - jacket those communities which can afford to carry on advance work in up-dating and enriching curricula.

"Obviously, this takes money — much more than most cities and towns in our state can afford. To bridge this problem, we must move — as I have long urged — in the direction of providing more state funds with which to support educational systems in all communities of the state.

"At present we are entirely too dependent on the local property tax which is at once proving inadequate as to funds being provided and is a heavy burden on the local homeowner and rent-payer. It is increasingly obvious that the revenue from this source is insufficient to meet the demands for education in today's complex society and other essential public services and facilities.

"The need to bring tax relief to the homeowner and rent-payer and the imperative need for continually improved educational programs in the state dictate a basic change in our means of raising funds for educational purposes. The idea of a tax being dedicated to a particular purpose is not new — witness the highway tax. Do we value automobiles more than our young people?" Basbas concluded.

Church Meeting Oct. 21 To Air Turnabout Work

Many Newton residents are aware and concerned about the drug problem here and have very little information on what is being done in the way of drug rehabilitation.

The Christian Service Commission of St. Philip Neri Church is sponsoring an evening to acquaint the community with the efforts of Project Turnabout which is a self-help drug addiction center serving Newton and other areas.

Project Turnabout has a residential treatment center, encounter therapy for non-residents and consultation services.

Mr. William McCue, Assistant Director of Project Turnabout, has been invited to speak and answer any questions that may arise.

The evening is scheduled for Wednesday, October 21 at eight p.m. at St. Philip Neri Parish Hall in the basement of the Church, Beacon Street, Waban (corner of Chestnut St. and Beacon St.). There is ample parking in the parking lot in the rear of the Church.

The public is cordially invited and refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Church Of Redeemer Announces Christmas Market November 11

Plans for the Christmas Market to be held at The Church of the Redeemer in Chestnut Hill, Wednesday, November 11th, are well under way.

The younger members of the parish are preparing two special "tables" to be planned and manned by a group of teen-age girls. One table, "Children's Shoppers," will offer crafts and Christmas presents made by the young ladies and priced for youngsters doing their Christmas shopping early. Another group of young parishioners have planned a "Junior Mess" table featuring favorite home-made cookies and the original recipes for sale.

For the more sophisticated shopper, there will be the "Flower Mart" with plants, flowers, and gardening accessories. The "Tread and Needle" table will offer hand-made articles - blankets, covers, needle point, hand-knits, and many other tempting Christmas presents.

For the woman who finds her days too full during this season, the Pantry Shelf will offer casseroles, desserts, rolls, and breads ready to go right from the freezer. "Arts and Crafts" will have hand-decorated wastebaskets, trays, tote bags and original gifts for the "hard to give to" person.

The "Books and Records" table will offer a great variety of new books and records for young and old. A new table, in keeping with the times, "Mod Squad", is designed for the "young at heart" - ponchos, belts, scarves, posters, and decorations all in the "mod" manner.

The Christmas Market will be held from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Morning coffee will be served and a hot lunch will be available from 12 o'clock until 2 p.m. For parents who want to do their shopping without the children, Mrs. Frederick T. Ernst and her committee are planning "Children's Divisions" in a special area of the Parish Hall.

Mrs. James W. Moss is the chairman and among the many workers are; Mrs. Robert H. Hopkins, Mrs. William H. Boardman, Mrs. Lovett C. Peters, Mrs. John P. Hubbell, Jr., Mrs. Donald Harding, Mrs. Preston T. Stephenson, Mrs. William U. Tripp, Jr., Mrs. Michael F. Wynne-Willson, Mrs. Bruce Seddon, Jr., Mrs. James T. Baldwin, Mrs. Elwyn G. Preston, and Mrs. Cyrus Brewer.

The Biggest Roast Beef in Boston

You'd better believe it.

And here's what keeps him honest. If he ever once carves you a slice of roast beef that weighs less than a pound and a half, you get a second slice free. And he's in deep trouble.

So he makes sure every juicy, succulent slice completely covers the big, oversize platter it's served on.

Here's what comes with your roast beef: a nice big salad, ice cold and crisp. A nice big baked potato with sour cream. Your choice of vegetables. And a golden Yorkshire popover swimming in butter. It's not so much a dinner as a challenge. A roast beef lover's Everest.

Meet that challenge tonight, why not? Just because it's there.

Call Frederick for reservations.

MOST REV. HUMBERTO S. MEDEIROS INSTALLED AS ARCHBISHOP

THE LEADERSHIP of two million Roman Catholic passed Wednesday from the aging hands of Richard Cardinal Cushing amid pageantry centuries old to those of a man "full of promise" as the Most Rev. Humberto S. Medeiros was installed as archbishop of Boston. The cardinal's presence at the ceremonies at Holy Cross Cathedral was rare in the history of the Church. "I had never dreamed that Providence would allow me the privilege of presiding at the installation of my successor," Cushing said in prepared remarks. A new papal decree ended the practice of appointing a new archbishop only on the death of his predecessor. Cushing, 75, retired last month after 26 years in office in the nation's second largest diocese to become a special Vatican emissary. More than 2,500 of the faithful jammed the Cathedral and massed outside on a summer-like day to watch the colorful procession that began the installation of Medeiros, former bishop of Brownsville, Texas, who turned 55 Tuesday. Preceded by priests bearing license and a cross, three cardinals and more than 50 bishops from across the country filed along Union Park Street into the cathedral. Near the end of the line came Medeiros and Pope Paul VI's personal emissary, the Most Rev. Luigi Raimondi, Apostolic delegate to the United States. Inside, Msgr. Thomas J. Finnegan, chancellor of the Boston archdiocese, read a papal letter appointing Medeiros archbishop and metropolitan of Boston. A delegation of 80 representatives of the diocese's 2,500 clergymen and of the laity pledged fealty to the new archbishop, who blessed them for the first time. Medeiros said: "I cannot rely or any power of my own. Even if I come to you full of hope and confidence in the Lord Jesus Christ and in His Church, I must admit that it is not without 'great fear and trembling.' " Cardinal Cushing said: "I need hardly tell you how deeply moved I have been by the ceremonies of this day. I can assure our new Archbishop that nowhere in God's world will he find more earnest collaborators, more willing hands and hearts to assist him than among the people of Boston." Representatives of a dozen other religious denominations made the ceremony one of the most ecumenical in the nation's history. Gov. Francis W. Sargent and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White represented state government and John A. Volpe, secretary of transportation, represented President Nixon.

BANK SEES LITTLE EVIDENCE OF N.E. ECONOMIC RECOVERY

DESPITE SIGNS of national economic recovery, there is little evidence of a general recovery in New England, a Boston bank said Wednesday. Recovery is unlikely to be smooth or rapid, according to the October issue of New England Letter, a publication of the First National Bank of Boston. "Conditions today are more difficult than in recent adjustment periods," the letter said. "Interwoven with the economic slowdown itself are two major depressant forces: the sizeable regional impact of the decline in federal defense procurement and the deeep-seated problems experienced over the past year or so by the leather footwear industry. The effects of these two forces are likely to linger after the regional economy turns upward." The letter said the future growth of the region rests on several necessary developments, including the need to look to new industries."

NIXON PEACE PLAN SEEN HINGING ON MILITARY STANDSTILL

SPECULATION on President Nixon's broad new peace proposal centered Wednesday on a military standstill and cease-fire in Indochina, possibly speedier withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam and a prisoner exchange with the Communists. The President, seeking to break the long stalemate at the Paris peace talks, gave a 15-minute nationwide television and radio broadcast Wednesday night to disclose his proposals that will be formally presented to the Communists in Paris today. Prior to his address, there was high level speculation that Nixon would almost certainly ask that military operations be halted at their present stage. It was also believed likely that he would offer to speed pullout of Americans from Vietnam with possibly an end to U.S. combat roles there by the early part of next summer, and would propose some sort of arrangement to free American POWs, possibly through an exchange of Communist prisoners. Nixon's address came two days after his return from a nine-day European trip — which included consultations with his Paris negotiators — and less than a month before the Nov. 3 elections in which the GOP hopes to gain ground in both the House and Senate.

ANWAR SADAT, 51, PICKED TO SUCCEED EGYPT'S NASSER

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY, meeting in extraordinary session Wednesday night in Cairo, nominated Anwar Sadat, 51, to succeed the late Gamal Abdel Nasser as president of Egypt for the next six years. Assembly Speaker Labib Shukair announced the nomination of Sadat, a longtime associate of Nasser and acting president since the latter's death on Sept. 28, was unanimous. The nomination must now be approved by 8 million eligible voters in a nationwide referendum scheduled for Oct. 15.

COMMUNISTS USE NAUSEA GAS FOR FIRST TIME IN CAMBODIA

NORTH VIETNAMESE troops used nausea gas for the first time in Cambodia and assassinated civilians during a six-hour attack Wednesday on rearguard positions of a big Cambodian task force stalled about 50 miles north of Phnom Penh, field officers reported. Cambodian officers said part of the reason for the strong attack near the village of Prakham was to intimidate civilians to keep them from cooperating with government forces. They said the Communist troops dragged civilians from their hiding places, killing at least six of them and wounding an unknown number. In South Vietnam, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker conferred with President Nguyen Van Thiew for an hour and U.S. sources said they discussed details of President Nixon's proposals for settlement of the Vietnam War. Similar talks in advance of Nixon's peace plan broadcast were held in Paris betweeen the U.S. negotiators and South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky.

16-4 Vote Turns Down Home For Priests Bid

By SHIRLEY GOLDWYN

The petition of an order of Roman Catholic priests for permission to use a large Newton home as a residence for its seminarians was turned down by a 16 to 4 vote of the Board of Aldermen on Monday night.

About 50 residents of the area were present to witness the deliberations of the board on the matter.

The Stigmatine Fathers were seeking permissive zoning use for five priests, four brothers and about five students to live at 16 Fairmount Ave.

The order has already purchased the home and some of the priests are living there.

At a recent public hearing on the matter, neighbors were overwhelmingly opposed to any institutional use of the house in the residential area.

They maintained that if one institution were allowed to enter others would follow and the character of the neighborhood and the value of the homes would decline.

An attorney representing the Stigmatine Fathers had said at the public hearing that the priests planned to move from property they now own in Dover because it was becoming too expensive to maintain.

At a meeting of the School Committee last week Lipof's resolution was criticized and the freshman alderman was accused of "shooting from the hip."

At the School Committee meeting Lipof said he made the request because he had not been able to see an "overall

Polls Show Sargent, White Now Running Neck and Neck

Governor Francis W. Sargent and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White now appear to be running just about neck and neck in their race to determine which of the two will serve as the next Governor of Massachusetts.

That appraisal is based on polls and surveys of voting sentiment made during the past several weeks.

On Sept. 14, the day before the primary, Governor Sargent was an overwhelming favorite to win election to a full four-year term as head of the state government.

Mexican Artist's Works On View At Gallery Here

Louis Lopez Loza: Recent Color Etchings, an exhibition selected from the artist's last two years of work, will be shown at the Berman-Medalie Gallery, 10 Austin St., Newton, Sunday, October 18 to November 14.

Born in Mexico City in 1939, Lopez Loza studied there at the Institute of Fine Arts. He had his first one man show in 1959, when he was only twenty, at the Galeria de Artes Visuales. In 1963 he began working at the Pratt Center for Contemporary Printmaking in New York, but he returns occasionally to Mexico for exhibitions of his work.

Luis Lopez Loza is an extraordinary draftsman with a magical sense of color and rich blacks in his forms, expressing images of man and his world. The work is singularly forceful and at the same time, whimsical.

Among his one-man exhibitions are: Gallery of Visual Arts, Mexico, 1959; University of Mexico, 1964; Public Library of San Antonio, Texas, 1963; Gallery of Mexican Art, Mexico, 1969; Israeli Cultural Center, Mexico, 1969.

He has exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art, Brazil, Argentina; Martha Jackson Gallery, New York; Third Biennal of Printmaking, Chile; Second Biennal International, Poland; Biennal of Printmaking, Puerto Rico; "100 Prints from around The World", Jewish Museum, New York; and at the Tokyo Biennale, 1970. His commissions include Expo 70, Montreal; Hemisphere 68, San Antonio, Texas; Mexican Pavillion, Expo 70, Japan.

piled until late in the week "it appears that registration is probably under the 1966 figures for the city."

Licaire explained that the registration probably is about the same as that for last year's municipal election.

He said that he expected the percentage of women and men voters to continue with the former showing a heavier enrollment.

At the present time the Election Department is preparing to meet requests for absentee ballots coming mostly from students studying out of state and servicemen stationed at foreign posts.

When formal absentee ballot applications are not available, Licaire said, his department will accept a letter addressed to the department and bearing the signature of a resident o n the voting list.

Licaire also said that close kin of an out - of - the - state or our - of - the - country may make application for an absentee ballot for the latter.

"Any person leaving the city" Licaire pointed out, "who expects to be absent on election day and is unable to supply an address where he might be reached, does not have to give up his vote."

The election official said that such voters may apply for an absentee ballot and vote at City Hall before departing on his trip.

All absentee ballots must be back by election day, Licaire said. Applications are available right up to the day before election.

The official emphasized the absolutely necessity for filing for absentee ballots, explaining that there was no other way the voter, out of the city, could be accomodated.

Final compilation of registration figures will, of course, provide the total number of voters authorized to go to the polls next month along with other information: the number of men and women voters and their party designation.

It is a religion based on the words and works of Christ Jesus. Martin Elected Chairman Of Mass. Chapter of ADA

Gordon A. Martin, Jr., of 31 Grant ave., Newton Centre has been elected Chairman of the Massachusetts Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action.

The annual ADA State Convention, meeting on Sunday at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge, selected the 36 year old lawyer who is a Commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination and Chairman of Boston's Coordinating Council on Drug Abuse.

Martin, who has taught both criminal and constitutional law at Northeastern University School of Law, formerly served with the United States Department of Justice both as First Assistant United States Attorney for Massachusetts and as a Trial Attorney in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

He was also a Special Assistant to Senator Edward M. Kennedy and is co-author of the report, "Drug Abuse in Boston."

Other officers elected by the liberal group include Michael Brower as first vice-chairman, Mrs. Anne Priest as executive vice-chairman, and James J. Bishop, John Brode, Barney Frank, Alan S. Korman of West Newton, Mrs. Herbert O. LeVine, of Auburndale, and Mrs. Leo R. Parnes of Waban, as vice chairmen. Mrs. Roman Totenberg was elected secretary and Dr. Donald E. Butterfield as treasurer.

In his address, Martin reaffirmed that ADA was not a single-issue organization; that while dedicated to the immediate end of the war in Vie Nam, it remained vitally concerned with the problems of race, of the cities, and of the environment, some of which, he said, could be effectively dealt with while war in Southeast Asia continues.

Martin called upon librerals to demonstrate their concern for the economic, health and other problems which affect the majority as well as minority groups and to dedicate themselves to building an effective bridge between whites and blacks.

Fishman emphasized that "obviously Mayor Basbas was forced to make some concession to the public outcry that has arisen since his recent announcement that he would hold two public offices at the same time if he were elected to the State Senate on November 3rd."

Rep. Fishman accused Mayor Basbas of "deliberate concealment" of the real issue of the campaign by his "so-called gift to charity which would be cut in half after taxes." Fishman stated that "the real issue is whether the people of Newton and Watertown will get full value and service from a politician who wants to hold two full-time public offices at the same time — whatever the salary may be."

"The Mayorality of the City of Newton with over 93,000 people is surely a full-time job as Mayor Basbas said last year when he ran for re-election," Fishman said,"and as his opponent in that election, I agreed with him by offering to resign my seat in the House of Representatives if elected Mayor," Fishman added "I am disappointed that Mayor Basbas has not done the same in this election."

Irving Fishman reiterated that "if Monte Basbas should be elected to the State Senate, Newton would find itself paying the full price for a Mayor who must take time off from his city job to be a state legislator too." "I hope that Basbas will reconsider his position," Fishman said "and agree to resign one public office (Mayor of Newton) if he is e lected to another (State Senator) as I did last year.

"Then we could turn to the real issue in this campaign on which the voters could intelligently make a judgment in choosing their next State Senator."

Elliot Hall. On November 17, 1867, a small wooden church in the Gothic style was completed and dedicated as St. Mary's.

Several years later St. Mary's parish was created with the Rev. Michael X. Carroll as first pastor and with parishioners coming from the area of Newton south of Beacon St. as well as parts of Wellesley and Needham.

The parish has been directly responsible for the building of three churches, two in Newton and one in Needham, which in time were set off as separate parishes.

The committee planning the celebration week has scheduled a buffet dinner to follow the October 17, 4 p.m. Mass at the Emerson School.

A commemorative book has also been prepared for the occasion and will be available after Masses following the centennial observances.

The term "birdie" originated at the Atlantic City Country Club here in 1899 when a player sank his putt in one under par and exclaimed: "That was a bird of a short!"

Husband-Wife Artist Team Shows Exhibition of Works at Library

A fashionable one-time fashion artist and a former commercial artist are paired this month in a husband-wife show of oil paintings at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre street, Newton Corner, beginning October 7.

Doris and Sumner Weiner, who started out as artists in their salad days, have come back to art, via adult education, "Y" courses, and private teachers.

The results can be seen in the powerful sports paintings by Sumner Weiner, and the misty, impressionistic 'scapes and sketches by his wife, Doris, a Brookline High graduate who also studied at the Modern School of Fashion and Design, and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts Schools.

Doris prefers large canvases, has been working in oils for about five years. She currently studies, as does Sumner, with artist Mo Com of Brookline.

Sumner, vice-president of Hy-Grade Shoe Findings, Boston, often uses his camera to fix a scene in his mind for future painting possibilities. He and his wife, whose strong backgrounds in drawing are readily apparent in the oils on exhibit, have built a studio addition to their home at 12 Sagamore road, Newton Highlands, to accommodate their working paraphernalia of paints, pencils and pastels, charcoals and canvases, brushes, easels, sketches, photographs.

Past president of the Shoe and Leather Lodge of B'nai Brith, and also of the Newton Toasmasters Club, Sumner is an alumnus of Boston University and of Mass. College of Art. Doris says he is seldom without a sketch pad and pencil when he is relaxing at home, and a selection of his line drawings is included in the two-man show.

Mr. and Mrs. Weiner are members of the Copley Society, and the Sharon Creative Arts Association, and have exhibited at Commonwealth Studios, Newton, at Toni's Gallery, Canton, and at the Center Art Gallery and Doris Goldblatt Interiors, both in Brookline.

The Weiners are parents of two sons, Mark, 14, an amateur in the ninth grade at Weeks Jr. High, and Alan, 10, in the fifth grade at Beethoven School.

Both boys are developing creative talents Alan in art, like his parents, and Mark in photography. He has already constructed a camera for use with his telescope

The husband-wife exhibit continues at the Main Library through late October.

GOP Wards In Newton Active

Several Republican groups are active in Newton this week, among them the Ward Three Committee which met Wednesday evening at Republican Election Headquarters under the Chairmanship of Marshall D. Glen. Election day plans topped the list of items on the agenda.

Also, meeting tonight (Thursday) is the Executive Committee of the Newton Republican Club with Charles E. Aucoin presiding. Preelection items, here too, crowd the agenda.

An announcement by Julius L. Masow, Chairman of the Newton Republican City Committee, states that the full city committee, numbering nearly four hundred, will ho'd an important preelection gathering Thursday eevening, October 15 at the Work Shop on Columbus Street, Newton Highlands.

All eight Republican Wards of Newton are expected to complete their plans within the next ten days, holding meetings to make personnel assignments for election day.

Church It Hit By Burglars; Other Targets

Cash, stamps, a TV set and four watches were picked up by thieves in breaks last Thursday into a church and private residence in Newton.

The money, amounting to $6 and the stamps, also valued at $6, were taken by conscienceless felons who smashed a window over a door at the First Church of the United Church of Christ at 1115 Centre street.

In the second break the television and the timepieces were taken from the home of Lawrence K. Grodman, 68 Haynes road, Newton Centre. He called authorities to report the break and theft.

McGlennon On Vietnam

State Representative John McGlennon, Republican candidate for Congress from the Third District, today called for the President to "seize the initiative NOW in the Vietnam peace talks in Paris." McGlennon said, "The opportunity for solution of the Vietnam war through diplomatic means may now be at hand. The apparent concessions in the latest proposal from the North Vietnamese negotiators seem to contain the necessary elements for meaningful negotiations for a cease-fire." McGlennon urged the President to assign top priorities to the Paris discussions during his current European trip stating that "nothing is more important than bringing this war to a speedy conclusion."

McGlennon made the point that "we should adopt a more flexible position on the diplomatic front, and we should not allow our own best interest to be modified by the rigid positions and self-seeking demands of the ruling South Vietnamese government. Too often it appears that Thieu and Ky are dominating U.S. policy, particularly in regard to diplomatic negotiations."

McGlennon continued, "This more flexible diplomatic approach ought to be accompanied by the continuing phased withdrawal of U.S. troops at an accelerated rate, avoiding any further military diversions in Indo-China. The President's policy of phased troop withdrawal, which I have consistently supported, appears to have created a climate that makes the North Vietnamese more willing to talk, and we must not miss this opportunity to accelerate the wind-up of our involvement in Vietnam."

In McGlennon's words, "the conclusions of the war and an end to the killing of American troops in Vietnam ranks as this country's number one priority. Until this is done, we cannot really attack America's problems at home and heal much of the divisiveness and disillusionment among our people." Haskell C. Freedman, 118 Homer St., Newton. Court Harassments

In California the trial of Charles Manson and three girl associates has dragged into its 17th week, and the end is not yet in sight.

In New York progress in the trial of Black Panthers indicted for bombing activities gives promise of establishing a record for the length of criminal trials in that city.

Thirteen months ago, the trial of the Chicago Eight(later reduced to the Chicago Seven) got underway. Although the jury several months ago rendered its verdict, final disposition of the case will not come until some uncertain time in the future.

In all three cases the American concept of the administration of even-handed justice has been severely tried. In each case the conduct of persons concerned in one way or another with the outcome of the trial has frequently imposed upon the courts of law considerations which have at times drifted far from determinations of guilt or innocence.

The use of the courts as a sounding board for strange, esoteric philosophies or for the aggrandizement of individuals seeking to attract the glare of the public spotlight on themselves is a violation of that basic concept.

Yeterday, today and tomorrow a sound system of jurisprudence — dedicated at all times — to the strict interpretation of the law is an absolute necessity for the survival of democracy.

If the Chicago, California and New York trials indicate a trend toward obfuscating justice with absurd clowning, strident demonstrations and even obscenities, then it is time for decisive action.

That action is something to which the United States Supreme Court should address itself.

Marriage Insurance

If some of the pronunciations of those who would shape the future of the world offer any true criterion, the moral fabric of tomorrow's civilized society will be shoddy, indeed.

An example is offered by an official of NOW (National Organization for Women) who advocates that all marriage ceremonies be preceded by the issuance of marriage insurance policies, designed to guarantee equitable financial awards in event of divorce.

Perhaps the advocate is motivated by some difficulties she experienced when her own marriage went on the rocks. Possibly she may have been influenced by the shameful annual divorce rate.

Whatever her inspiration may have been, she would place the marriage of two persons on a hard-boiled business basis.

Such considerations as love, honor and mutual respect would be only secondary to the implications of those insurance policies that their marriage would be a success whether it endured or broke up.

In his lucrative swing around the college campuses, before big and small audiences booking him as a speaker, Jerry Rubin won applause when he advocated the murder of parents standing in the way of the insane philosophies he spouted.

No part of the country is without those instant purveyors of a new world of chaos.

Fortunately, the roots of civilization reach deep.

New England Fall

Apparently, New England is unique in the world for its gorgeous fall foliage. Other places in the United States and in far-off countries, even when they have ample forests, do not have the blaze of red, orange and gold that glorify New England in autumn.

The reason seems to be the maple tree. New England and the adjoining areas of Canada are blessed with an abundance of maples which not only give sugar, and wood for furniture, but also lively colors.

True, the white and black trunks of birch trees and the restful hues of evergreens complete the joyful fall concert of colors, but the maple leaves make the most substantial contribution.

Let us then, be thankful to the maple tree, even as once more we gather up its abundant foliage from our lawns and put it away in the large plastic bags which over the past few years have also become part of New England's autumn season.

POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS

On Sept. 16, the day after the primary, Mr. Sargent was a solid favorite, but Mayor White shaped up as a potent underdog. The Governor, however, clearly had a substantial lead over the Hub Mayor, probably about 15 per cent.

Since then the gap between Sargent and White has gradually narrowed until today they stand just about even.

At this moment it seems that the contest remains to be won and lost and that the victor could be either Governor Sargent or Mayor White.

But in the period since the primary the momentum has been with White as the public attention and acclaim he achieved in winning over three opponents in the primary have worked to his advantage.

There are defections in the Democratic picture. White does not have solid Democratic support. Although his three adversaries in the Democratic primary — Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, former Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Bellotti and former Presidential Aide Kenneth P. O'Donnell — all have endorsed White in a show of Democratic unity — some of the supporters of the three gubernatorial contenders knocked out in the Democratic primary have marched into the Sargent camp for one reason or another.

But the polls show White stronger than he would be expected to be in some Republican communities where there are sizable numbers of GOP voters of liberal leanings.

It should be remembered that one factor which militates heavily in White's favor and strongly against Sargent is that Massachusetts is basically a Democratic state and that when all factors are equal in a state-wide election contest the Democratic candidate will win.

This is sometimes overlooked because John A. Volpe won three of the four gubernatorial elections held in Massachusetts during the 1960s. But he was able to do so because he drew the support of many Democratic voters of Italian origin.

Polls disclose that a substantial percentage of the Italo-American Democrats, who voted for John Volpe in 1960, 1962, 1964 and 1966, will return to the party fold and support White this year. (Volpe won in 1960, 1964 and 1966, was defeated by Endicott Peabody in 1962.)

The surveys indicate that White also is dipping deeply into the independent vote and that the political ingredients are there if White can put them all together for a political victory.

A great uncertainty surrounding the White-Sargent fight at the present time is that a large number of independent voters are still on the fence and have not yet decided whether they will mark their ballots for the Governor or the Boston Mayor.

Both Governor Sargent and Mayor White will concentrate much of their efforts and energies to winning the support of those who hold the balance of power. The one who is the more successful will be the next Governor of Massachusetts.

So close does the race between the Governor and the Mayor shape up at the present time that its outcome could be settled by the debates between Mr. Sargent and Mr. White.

These confrontations presumably will be held when public interest in the gubernatorial contest is much greater than it is today, increasing their impact.

White did well in his verbal encounters with Messrs. Donahue, Bellotti and O'Donnell just before the primary. He comes through well on television, and the guessing is that he will hold his own with Governor Sargent even though it was the latter who issued the debate challenge on primary night.

Governor Sargent and Mayor White both are running on the records they have made while holding public offices, Sargent on his record of 21 months at the head of the state government, White on his record as Mayor of Boston for 33 months.

Indications from the polls are that White is being both helped and hurt by the four-way Democratic primary fight from which he emerged the victor.

Mr. Sargent is picking up any disappointed supporters of the defeated candidates that he can draw onto his bandwagan and is making as much political capital as he can of their defection from the Democratic side.

Some of them could not influence five votes, if that many, but they do have some momentary publicity value.

One of the issues on which Governor Sargent is campaigning is that of cutting the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

That would have been a clearcut issue if Senate President Donahue had been the Democratic nominee for Governor since Donahue opposed the proposal for reducing the House from 240 to 160 members.

However, it is not a true issue between Sargent and White since White earlier this year recorded himself in favor of placing the question on the ballot so the people could vote on it.

There is a great deal of doubt in the minds of many political observers that the reduction in the size of the House of Representatives would be the big stride toward better government that the League of Women Voters claims it would be.

However, the people have been pretty well convinced that those advocating a slash in the size of the House are on the side of the angels, and it is a safe issue on which Governor Sargent or any other candidate can campaign without any political risk.

On the plus side for White is the fact that he got his campaign into high gear during the primary and that the spotlight of public attention was centered on him when the primary returns were tabulated while Governor Sargent was marking time and awaiting the outcome of the Democratic primary contest to learn who his election opponent would be.

The poll findings show that White has made great gains in public support since just before the primary. His candidacy still appears to be on the rise.

But the answer for both Governor Sargent and Mayor White will be provided by the undecided voters who have not yet determined which of the two will be their choice.

Spaulding's Position Same As Ted's On Many Issues

Although Josiah A. Spaulding defeated John J. McCarthy in fairly decisive fashion for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate, Spaulding seems unable to get his campaign against Senator Edward M. Kennedy off the ground.

This is due in part to the widely held opinion that Ted Kennedy is virtually certain of achieving reelection and that Spaulding has no real chance of defeating him.

(One political columnist suggested facetiously that life might be breathed into Spaulding's candidacy if Vice President Spiro Agnew were to read him out of the Republican party.)

Spaulding, who disagrees with Agnew on just about everything, probably would welcome it if Spiro did give him the back of his hand although there is no reason to believe the Veep did New York's Senator Charles Goodell any good with his assault upon him.

Goodell seems headed down the road to political disaster along with Spaulding, and an attack upon either one of them does not involve much risk. Goodell is likely to finish third in his race. Spaulding at least will come in second.

Ted Kennedy showed up to much better advantage than Spaulding when the two appeared together on the Meet the Press television show.

One thing which stood out is that Ted Kennedy already has taken most of the positions advocated by Spaulding and that there really isn't much difference in the political postures of the two opposing candidates.

That was the claim of John McCarthy who battled Spaulding in the GOP primary.

Ted Kennedy and Si Spaulding do disagree on such questions as whether abortions should be legalized. But their positions are pretty much the same on the war in Vietnam, the invasion of Cambodia, the ABM system and the rejection of Judges Haynsworth and Carswell for seats on the U.S. Supreme Court.

While Mr. Spaulding emphasizes again and again that he is a Republican and that he is in agreement with President Nixon on many things, one of his problems seems to be that his political posture is closer to that of Senator Kennedy than to Mr. Nixon's.

Senator Kennedy declared once again on his Meet the Press appearance that he will not be a candidate for President in 1972 and that he intends to serve his full six-year term in the U.S. Senate.

Many political columnists and commentators do not believe Ted means what he says in that respect. This writer does. It is our opinion that Ted, trying to serve as a father to the children of his two late brothers, will be content to serve in the Senate for the next six years.

Rumors that Ted will not seek reelection as Assistant Majority Leader of the Senate have no foundation of fact.

Muskie Is Rated No. 1 Dem. '72 Presidential Prospect

Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, who endorsed Boston Mayor Kevin H. White for election as Governor the other day, is now regarded as the No. 1 contender for the Democratic nomination for President in 1972.

Muskie made a hit in many sections of the nation while campaigning as the Democratic candidate for Vice President two years ago.

For geographical reasons a candidate in Maine usually would have little chance of achieving the Presidential nomination.

But there is a scarcity of Presidential prospects in the Democratic party. Senator Edward M. Kennedy says he will not run for President in '72.

Many Democratic leaders are not disposed to give former Vice President Hubert Humphrey a second chance. Muskie leads the list of the remaining possibilities.

Philbin's Sticker Campaign Blow to Fr. Drinan's Hopes

Congressman Philip J. Philbin's decision to seek reelection on "stickers" deals a serious blow to the election hopes of Father Robert F. Drinan, former dean of the Boston College Law School, who defeated Philbin in the Democratic primary.

It's possible that Congressman Philbin, with a well organized and well financed "sticker" campaign, can win reelection without his name appearing on the ballot, but it is an uphill undertaking.

Philbin decided to make the effort after being shown the results of a poll which indicated he could win reelection on stickers.

However, persons who intend to cast their votes for "sticker" candidates are not always successful in carrying out their own intent.

A Congressman once was elected on "stickers" from a Boston district, but in those days the voting was all done on paper ballots.

It's relatively easy to print a candidate's name or paste a sticker on a paper ballot. It's a little more difficult to do it on a voting machine.

Whatever happens to Mr. Philbin's last-ditch try to hold his seat in Congress, it is almost certain to deprive Father Drinan of some Democratic votes he would get if Philbin were not making his "sticker" run.

Father Drinan's supporters are surprisingly philosophical about Congressman Philbin's move. They say that some of the bitterly disappointed Philbin supporters out in the Clinton area might have voted for Republican Representative John McGlennon of Concord if Philbin had not made his "sticker" move.

From where we sit, however, it would seem that most of the people who will now vote or try to vote for Philbin would have voted for Father Drinan.

Beauty Care Today

By Edgar of RONALD COIFFEURS

(The Eyes Have It)

What is an effective way to emphasize black-brown eyes and a long neck?

One way to draw immediate attention to the eyes is to cut the hair very short. Long, heavy hair may detract from the natural beauty of the eyes.

Another advantage of the short hair is that it will play up the long neck. If you are fortunate in having a well-shaped head, this too will be complemented by this short cut.

The eyes may be played up by playing down other features. False eyelashes, extending from inner to outer corners, are a sure way to add emphasis. Under the lower lashes, brush-strokes may be added to a fine black line that extends beyond the outer corner of each eye. "Twiggies," lower lashes stroked on with cake eyeliner, may be added below this.

Hadassah Groups Are Recruiting During October

The Boston Chapter of Hadassah is devoting the month of October to the recruitment of new members. As the largest women's Jewish organization in the world, its importance and influence cannot be underestimated in this time of crisis.

The aim of the Membership Department this year is to reach every Jewish woman my making her a very involved person. Her involvement in the United States is to help safeguard democracy, educate herself in her heritage, interpret Israel to her community, and to help Jewish youth identify with t heir past. By doing t his, she becomes the key factor in assuring the continuing Hadassah projects in Israel.

All of the October meetings being held by the sixteen groups in the Boston Chapter of Hadassah are being dedicated to these membership goals.

Newton Artist Has Exhibition Of Watercolors

Watercolors by Lawrence Kupferman of Newton, a prominent American artist, are displayed this month at the Cary Library in Lexington.

This new series in the artist's work continues his deep interest in the ocean, in macrocosm and in microcosm.

In the artist's own words, "I study the water of the sea from an aeroplane over Massachusetts Bay and Cape Cod and then intimately, down on my knees the pattern left by the s ea on the sands of the beach. Not only the great sweep of ocean, but the delicate edges of the incoming tide with its gentle lapping patterns."

A quiet perusal of these paintings will stir memories of pounding surf, receding t ides, swirling waters, cresting waves and sunlight on the ocean. They are an excellent example of the artistic imagination at work.

Larence Kupferman's earlier work may be seen in the Museum of Modern Art, New York; the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. He lives in Newton and is married to the artist, Ruth Cobb.

Headlights and Highlights From Newton South High

By JANICE E. KAPLAN

The Student-Faculty Curriculum Review Board of Newton South is finally becoming a reality, as departments are currently organizing their boards.

The idea of a Curriculum Review Board came from last year's Student Faculty Forum. After many revisions, Principal William D. Geer, Jr., accepted the p roposed board.

The purpose of the board is to further involve students in curriculum procedures and revisions. Course offerings and general style of teaching will be discussed, although individual teachers will not be part of the agenda.

Each department head has formulated a way to select the departmental board as well as the representativs to the overall board.

Mr. Wayne Altree, chairman of the Social Studies department, at both Newton South and Newton High feels that the curriculum review will be effective only if a broad spectrum of students are involved.

Rather than having a specific Social Studies board, each class in the Social Studies department will have one day a month to discuss curriculum. Ideas and suggestions from these discussions will be given to the representatives to the overall board.

The two students representing Social Studies on the overall board are currently being chosen. Teachers nominated about fifteen students. All classes will vote to select the representatives.

The Social Studies department this year is offering many new and relevant courses. Nevertheless. Mr. Altree is welcoming students' participation in curriculum.

Mr. Vincent Bronson, chairman of the Science department asked all interested students to submit a written statement on why they wish to join the science board.

The students chosen will sit in on science classes. They are expected to contact the teachers and discuss grading procedures and other items.

Mr. Bronson has presented several questions to the board concerning the "tone" of teaching, and discussing student contributions to the teaching-learning process.

The math department is organizing the board in a very different way. Mr. Warren B. Manhard, department head, noted that: "The idea came from the Student Faculty Forum and therefore the responsibility for setting it up should also come from that group."

Mr. Manhard has asked the forum to select the students for the math board.

Mr. Manhard explained that there are always lines of communication open for curriculum changes in the math department. He is "perfectly willing to listen to anybody" and hopes that the involvement of the students will be beneficial.

The English department is using the already established Book Review Committee to form their Curriculum Review Board.

The foreign language department, headed by Mr. Petrillo, has asked interested students to write a statement as to what they feel the Curriculum Review Board can accomplish.

The committee will consist of one or two teachers per language and one student from each level (year and curriculum) of that language.

Once all department boards are established the Overall Board will begin.

The 1970 Kick-Off Dance was cancelled. After much planning David Schlakman, chairman of the dance, was forced to cancel it "because of lack of response on the part of the students."

The dance was cancelled at the last minute after only seventy-nine tickets had been sold, not enough to cover the cost of a dance.

The first meeting of the Newton South Union was held September 22. In order to interest students it was held outside during an extended homeroom period. Over five hundred students attended the meeting where everyone present was able to vote on all issues.

The second meeting was held October 6. Rusty Phillips, president of the Union was pleased by the large turnouts and looks towards a successful year.

Principal William D. Geer, Jr., has suggested new guidelines for student rights. He has sent the proposed regulations to Superintendent Aaron Fink.

Mr. Geer urged a new attendance policy headed in the direction of an open campus during study periods. The policy is "designed to lead students to develop a functional sense of personal responsibility and prepare them for the demands of citizenship that come to them upon graduation."

Residents Advised Of Ban On Burning Of Leaves Here

Newton Mayor Monte G. Basbas has issued a reminder to all Newton residents that the burning of leaves is prohibited in that City. Newton, one of the first municipalities in the Commonwealth to impose such a ban, enters its second year of prohibition of leaf burning this fall.

"With the advent of a new fall season," stated Mayor Basbas, "the time is here to both remind our long - time Newton residents and inform new Newton resident about the total ban that we have placed on leaf burning as a positive step in our anti - pollution effort."

Originally imposed last fall, the ban was the result of concern by Basbas and various citizens' groups over the serious health hazard posed by open burning of leaves. In response to this hazard and with appropriate direction from the City, almost all the citizens of Newton gathered their leaves and left them in neatly stacked plastic bags to be picked up by the City's rubbish disposal crew.

"I hope that our citizens will continue to cooperate and bag rather than burn their leaves," states the Mayor. "With this mutual cooperation, we can continue to allay the threat to our environment posed by open burning. Furthermore, I urge all citizens to report violations of the burning ban to the Fire Department."

Introducing a revolutionary new small car.
The Super Beetle.

You've never seen this car before.
It's 3 inches longer than a Volkswagen Beetle.
Yet it has nearly twice the luggage space.
It has a more powerful engine than the Beetle of old.
It has a shorter turning radius for easier parking.
It has a new suspension system for a more comfortable ride.
It has a larger fuel tank.
The brakes have been improved for quicker stops.
The front track has been widened for better handling.
The inside of the car, quite frankly, has more class.
It's fully carpeted.
The dashboard is more dashing.
The fresh-air heating system has a grand total of 7 different outlets.
It also has a new flow-through ventilation system with a 2-speed blower.
All in all, it's 89 ways different from a Volkswagen Beetle. Which in our opinion makes it a completely different automobile.
But in one very important way it remains the same:
For in 1971, the year everyone is feverishly building their revolutionary new small cars, the name on the rear deck of this revolutionary new small car reads "VOLKSWAGEN."

Tiger Win Streak Snapped When Brockton Romps To 35-7 Victory

By BOB WORDEN

Brockton's Phil Coriaty and Dennis Miquel almost single handedly wiped out Newton in Saturdays confrontation, as the Shoe City posted their second victory of the young schoolboy season, with a 35 to 7 victory over the Tigers.

Newton's five game winning streak came to a halt, as Brockton outhit, outran and took advantage of several Newton miscues and penalties, as they launched their campaign for the Class A Championship.

The Tigers, primed for an upset, found themselves down 7 points early, when Miquel rolled right and hit Coriaty with a bullet, he was off like white lightning, scampering 62 yards for a touchdown. Kicking soccer style, Alke Tsitso booted it through the uprights for the extra point.

Later in the first period, Newtons pass blocking broke down and Brocktons defensive end Donnell Wigfall creamed quarterback Jim Doolin and forced him into fumbling, Doyle recovered, setting the stage for Brocktons second score.

Miquel at 6:35 ran it in from the six yard line. Tsitsos point after was good, to round out the scoring in the first half.

Newtons Chuck Pendergast legged 74 yards on kick off in Newtons first scoring bid. Doolin then threw to Junior tight end Paul Johnson, who was triple teamed, made a spectacular catch for the TD but it was called back on a penalty.

In the second half, Brockton executed some crisp blocking on Newton defenders as Coriaty made touchdown runs of 73 and 87 yards. Tsitsos scored from the four yard line and Miquel fired a pass to Coriaty for the 2 extra points, to boost the Shoe City's margin to a 35 point advantage.

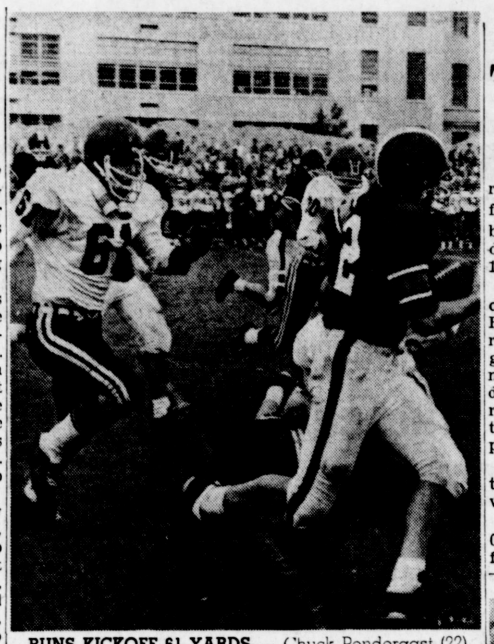

Newton Coach Jim Ronayne went to his bench late in the fourth quarter and gave Junior QB Paul Grillo a chance to improve their unsuccessful passing attack. Grillo then connected with "Tricky" Rick Hayes, bringing the ball to the one yard line.

Grillo ran it in himself and Junior Ken Haywood kicked the extra point. The final score, Brockton 35, Newton 7.

Ronayne told his club "You can't cry over spilled milk" and reminded them that they lost a game in each of their two previous seasons. This Monday the Tigers travel to Weymouth North, starting time 1:30.

Sideline Comments: It was very disappointing to see Brockton Coach Armond Colombo Coaching techniques. Late in the fourth period with a 33 point lead margin he went for a two point conversion, he kept his first team in, and he tried an onside kick with less than one minute remaining. What ever happened to sportsmanship?

Taking a look at how Newton's oppenents did, Waltham upset Brookline 27 to 14, Boston Latin beat Weymouth South 22 to 12, North Quincy edged Weymouth North 14 to 6, Chelsea downed Medford 14 to 8 and Arlington nipped Beverly 7 to 6.

'New Look' South High Gridders Take Second Win By 12-0 Margin

By LEWIS FREEDMAN

Last week, in the seasons opener the Lions bombed Rindge Tech, 42-0 for a school record in points scored in one game. This Saturday, though not as devastatingly, South dismantled Techs neighbor to record one more win in 1970 than it totaled in the two years previous.

The game marked the first time since 1967 that South has won as many as two in a row.

The Lions grabbed a quick 6-0 lead in the first period, the first time they touched the ball, marching 70 yards on 11 plays. Halfback Dave Lelchook scampered over from the five. The big play of the drive was a 20-yard aerial from junior quarterback Ron Izen to end Larry Feldman.

Izen tossed his first TD pass in the third quarter when South ran its lead and final point total to 12-0. Izen flipped a short ten-yarder to John Staulo to culminate a 60-yard drive.

Co-captain fullback Bob Staulo (Johns elder brother) bulled his way for 113 yards to go along with his first game yardage of 115.

Though the offense was dependable it was the now vaunted Lion defense which was the key.

The big D (very big with the front seven averaging over 200 pounds) led by ferocious Roger Cooper, Joe DeLucca, Dan Celli and with a little help from their friends pinned the CHLS offense to the ground, allowing not only no points but a mere two first downs - one on a penalty.

South is unscored upon in two contests and looks like a powerhouse after two games. The Lions look like the Lions of old-roaring at the top of their lungs and devouring any and all opposition.

The jv football Lions did not fare as well as their varsity counterparts, falling to Bedford, 14-0, last week.

Quarterback Russ Small twice directed South to the enemy six-yard line but saw both drives thwarted.

Morrison, a halfback, is majoring in liberal arts at Ithaca. He is the son of Dr. Herbert S. Morrison and Mrs. Morrison of 1801 Beacon Street in Newton, and is a 1970 graduate of Brown-Nichols High School.

South Soccer Squad Off To Good Season

Last week the Lions tipped Wayland, 3-2 and tied Weston, 1-1 before falling to rival Newton High, 5-1 to run its slate to 2-1-1.

Junior Lee Grossman booted two goals to boost South into a 2-2 tie with Wayland before Dave Smith iced the contest with a solo goal.

Grossman scored for the first time in the third quarter and then notched another tally in the final period giving South a 2-1 lead. However, John Bucci scored with eight minutes left to send the game into overtime.

Smith boomed a high shot into the upper right hand corner of the goal on a penalty shot with only 30 seconds remaining.

Grossman was again a game-saver in the Lions tie with Weston. This time he emerged from a wild scramble in front of the enemy net and beat goalie Ron Savitz. South had trailed from the first quarter when Ron Sussman tipped a shot in giving goalie Dave Cohen no chance for a play.

Newton South, 2-0-1 in Dual County League play absorbed its first loss of the 1970 season at the hands of Newton High, a team it has never beaten.

Tim Tsochantaridis was the chief culprit, kicking in three goals for the hat trick. Mike Baluer and Abe Oros also scored for the Tigers.

South goaltender Dave Cohen superb in all action to date was peppered with a total of 29 shots and made many picturesque saves despite being beaten five times.

8-0 Setback Marks Up First NAA Lions Loss

The Newton Athletic Association Lions lost to the Framingham Bandits by a score of 8-0. The game was one of frustration for the Lionmen.

Newton took the opening kickoff and marched to Framingham's two where the Bandits held. Framingham moved the ball out to their 18 aided by a roughing the kicker penalty in their own end zone where they were faced with a third and eight yard situation.

Cornerback Rick Paglia picked off a deflected pass and returned it to t he twelve only to find out the interception was nullified by an inadvertent whistle.

In the second period Halfback Kevin Hoban threw a pass to end Jack Ryan who caught the ball and seemingly ran four yards with the ball where he was hauled down at the two where a whistle blew, however, the pass was ruled incomplete.

With 50 seconds left in the half Newton punted to Fuhrman of Framingham who received the kick at mid-field and danced his way down the side line for the game's only score.

The second half saw Newton plagued by fumbles its first three series. Framingham spent the third period inside Newton's 15-yard line. Newton got untracked in the fourth period and moved the ball to mid field where time expired.

Next week the Lions will travel to Glendale Park, Everett, to play St. Anthony's Eagles.

Other N.A.A. scores:

Tom Rezutti On N.E. Grid Squad

Tom Ruzzeti, a sophomore defensive safety from 28 Beecher Place, Newton, was on the Northeastern University Varsity Football squad when the Huskies opened their 1970 season against cross-town rival Harvard in Cambridge, on Sept. 26th.

Ruzzeti has been tried at both cornerback and defensive safety and can play either quite well. He will also be used to return punts and kick-offs.

Harrier Pottey Sets Fast Pace, But Keyes Wins

Newton South harrier Chuck Pottey blasted a 6:24 first lap on the Mt. Ida Junior College 2.6 mile course and came back to finish in 13:24 for one of the fastest times ever recorded on the hilly route.

Unfortunately, Wayland's distance star Lloyd Keyes dashed to the fastest time ever for a new course standard of 13:08, to beat Pottey and claim first in the dual meet won by Wayland 21-40.

Pottey passed the 1.3 mark six seconds ahead of Keyes, but slowed down to a 7:00 final lap while Kayes spurted away with a 6:38 final burst for the new mark.

Keyes brilliant effort erased the year old course record held by Newton High's Mike O'Brien in 13:11. The other fastest times on the Mt. Ida course are: 13:16 by Jay Sidman, also of Newton, 13:22.2 by Moe Bordenca of Waltham and 13:22 by Dave Whitney of Newton South. O'Brien's and Sidman's times came in the same race — the opening meet of 1969, while Bordencas and Whitney's times were also recorded in the same race — the final meet of 1967. Pottey's time was only 1.6 seconds behind Whitney's school record.

Captain Mike LeBlanc showed signs of rounding into shape with his fastest clocking ever of 14:28 to capture fifth place.

Earlier in the week the Lions were felled by undefeated Lincoln-Sudbury, 18-45 for their third consecutive Dual County League cross-country loss.

The mainstay of the Lion harriers Pottey claimed third-place over the 2.5 mile course with a 13:26 timing but the rest of the top ten was all Lincoln.

Ernie Taylor, 13:12 and Paul Newmann, 13:20, set the pace and then six more LS finishers came across between 14:04 and 14:56.

Plentiful Pork Products Can Perk Up Fall Meals

By PATRICIA S. FROMBERGER

Ever wake up in the morning to the mouth watering aroma of bacon crackling and sizzling on the stove?

It's a memorable experience—and worth repeating now, while pork and pork products are all plentiful and moderately priced.

In fact, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service says that pork output will be running ten per cent or more above last year's levels during October.

There are so many ways to let pork perk up your meals — with roasts, chops, steaks, spareribs, and delicious cured and smoked products like hams, sausage, and, of course, bacon. And don't overlook pork liver; it's high in iron content and rich in Vitamin A.

Glazes or sauces are tasty additions to fresh and cured pork products. Almost any kind of fruit, fruit juice, or jelly can be used, but currant jelly, orange marmalade, peach or apricot jam, applesauce, cranberry sauce and pineapple are tops! Honey, barbecue sauce and pickled fruits and their juice are good, too. And sauces made of soups like celery, mushroom, and onion go well with pork.

And a real taste treat to roasts or stuffed chops by using new and different dressings made with apples, raisins, or prunes and spiced with cinnamon.

Or try more gourmet stuffing of rice, mushrooms, slivered almonds or chopped pecans. And, of course, there is the always popular cornbread stuffing.

In selecting fresh pork, look for firm, fine-grained flesh of a grayish-pink color. It should be marbled with flecks of fat through the muscle, and have a uniform covering of firm white fat on the exterior surface. The bones should be porous and pinkish in color.

In both fresh and processed pork products, look for the mark of Federal inspection. It is your assurance that the product has been processed under sanitary conditions and is safe to eat. It also means that the product is not adulterated and is truthfully labeled.

Perk up an October meal with this recipe for HAM, POTATO, AND ONION CASSEROLE. It is a hearty, rich tasting dinner main dish that makes use of three plentiful foods:

6 tablespoons ham drippings, margarine or butter
6 tablespoons enriched flour
3 cups milk
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ lb. Cheddar cheese, grated
1 lb. diced cooked ham
4 cups cubed cooked potatoes
12 small cooked onions
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

TO PREPARE: Melt the drippings or fat. Blend in flour and add milk, stirring constantly. Cook mixutre until thick, boiling about 3 minutes. Add seasonings and grated cheese, and cook slowly until cheese melts. Add cooked ham, potatoes and onions. Pour mixture into a greased casserole. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and bake, uncovered, in a 350 degree oven for 30 to 40 minutes, or until the crumbs are lightly browned. Serves 8 to 10.

CURRENT PLENTIFULS: Pork, Fresh Apples, Canned Applesauce, Apple Juice Broiler-Fryers, Dry Beans, Canned Peaches, Canned Salmon, Onions, Eggs, Potatoes and Dried Prunes.

Soccer Talk

By PAUL ELDRIDGE

This week we will finish up the laws of soccer. Both of them start the same way with the ball crossing the goal line, either on the ground or in the air, without a goal being scored. If a defensive player is the last to touch the ball, this sets up a corner-back. This is taken from the one-yard quarter circle in the half of the field where the ball went out. A goal-kick comes about when the ball is last touched by an offensive player. The kick is then taken from the goal area. This is the rectangular box in front of the goal that looks like a crease in hockey. Again the ball is placed in that half of the field where it went out. Either the goalie or another player on his team can take this kick and the ball must go beyond the penalty area.

At this time let's look at the players on a team and their duties. The goalie's one and only duty is to keep the ball out of the net. There are two fullbacks who are just like defensemen in hockey. Their duties are to help the goalie by keeping the other team's forwards away and to get the ball down field to their own forwards. The three fullbacks are similar to the infield in baseball and their duty is to keep the ball from going through where it could be dangerous. The five forwards, like the forwards in hockey, main duty is to get the ball in scoring position and put it in the net.

The City of Boston's Recreation Dept. is thinking of starting a youth soccer league in the near future. Did you know that Westwood High's first football field is now a soccer field for the Jr. High team. It seems a shame that Westwood High does not have a soccer team where they have boys in the school who have played the sport in Jr. High.

Blindness No Handicap To Ohio Workers

Seven employees of a photographic processing plant in Coolville, Ohio are blind, but their handicap has proved to be an asset.

They work in the plant's darkroom processing hundreds of rolls of film each day.

Lawrence Smith, a film splicer, opens an average of 400 film cartridges an hour. He splices the ends together and feeds a continuous reel of film into one of the six automatic photoo processors.

"MOST OF MY WORK IS DONE IN THE DARK WHERE VISION ISN'T GOING TOO DO ANYONE ANY GOOD," Smith said.

'Darkness No Problem'

Smith must be able to work quickly and have a deft touch to keep the rolls of films straight so that long strips of film feed into the processing equipment.

"When I first came here I was making splices and loading the magazines after only three hours," Smith said. "They showed me how to make the splices, steered me into the darkroom and I took it from there.

"Darkness is no problem for me as it might be for a sighted person. I've lifed in it all my life."

Charlie Baumgartner, another blind film splicer, said that since a blind person has been "adapting to working in the dark all his life," he has a better feel for performing tasks in totally dark surroundings.

Baumgartner, who has a Sciences, says he has even grown actely sensitive to the noise the splicing machine makes when it is functioning properly.

Employer Pleased

"I keep an ear on things to make sure they are working right," Baumgartner said. "If something does go wrong with the machine, I can pinpoint the machine, I can pinpoint the problem about 95 percent of the time just by the way it sounds."

Ned Tanner, president of Best Photo Service, said his seven blind employees do excellent work and do not eive preferential treatment because of their handicap.

"They are given a job too do and they must perform," he said.

"We feel that hiring persons who are handicapped through blindness is good business. They perform their jobs as well as, if not better in many cases, than persons with sight."

It was also felt, the attorney said, that the seminarians would benefit in their educational experience from living within a community rather than removed from it.

At Monday night's board meeting Land Use Committee Chairman Alan Barkin reported that his committee had denied the petition of the Stigmatine Fathers by a 3 to 2 vote.

The city's zoning ordinances state specifically that permissive use in a residential neighborhood "may be granted only when the public convenience and welfare will be substantially served," Barkin said.

The majority of board members seemed to agree that the proposed use of the property did not fall into that category. In addition, some aldermen said they were reluctant in this period of rising taxes to increase the amount on non-taxable property in the city.

Alderman Adelaide Ball said she also resented, as she did in the case of the petition of the Freeport Foundation, that the group had purchased the home before seeking the necessary permission from the Board of Aldermen.

Voting in favor of the petition of the Stigmatine Fathers were Aldermen Richard Bullwinkle, Peter Harrington, Thomas Concannon and Arthur Sullivan.

Bullwinkle said the Stigmatine Fathers are "a Godfearing, quiet sect. They want to live in this house which was originally constructed as a school. They want to instruct their novices in a community atmosphere so that social awareness is a part of their preparation."

Harrington maintained that the large, older homes in the city are often turned into rooming houses and that the proposed use of the home on Fairmount Ave. would in the long run be in the best interests of the city since no major alterations to the character of the home would be necessary.

When questioned about whether the Board of Aldermen even had the authority to rule on the petition of the Stigmatine Fathers since it is a religious group, Assistant City Solicitor Charles Morang said that in his opinion they did since students as well as priests would occupy the dwelling.

Architect From British Isles In Newtonville

Marcel E. Sammut, a British architect, landed in Boston harbour two and a half years ago. He fell in love with Newtonville and immediately bought his ranch house at 30 Anthony Circle, where he lives with his wife Hermine and his two daughters Lega-Ann and Aline.

Mr. Sammut is a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Health, London, and a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, besides having a degree in high commerce and administration.

He has recently obtained the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards Certificate and is now a registered architect in Massachusetts.

Paul Vaites Tells D.A.R. Of U.S.S. Massachusetts

"A glorious and active history" belongs to the battleship U.S.S. Massachusetts, declared Paul S. Vaitses, executive director of the U.S.S. Massachusetts Memorial Committee, Inc.

Speaking on Monday, Sept. 28, at the meeting of Lydia Partridge Whiting Chapter, DAR, Vaitses gave a short resume of the activities of the famous ship, which is now berthed at Fall River.

Built in Quincy, it was commissioned in 1942, and from then until 1945 participated in 35 major naval engagements. Carrying a crew of 2300, it earned 11 battle stars without the loss of a single man.

Vaitses served on this ship, which was ahead of its time in modern improvements. Not only did it have air conditioning, computers, and dial telephones, it had a device for making fresh water from salt water, and an electrical generator large enough to light a city the size of Newton. Measuring 689 feet overall, it drew 35 feet of water, and weighed 45,000 tons when loaded. Furnished with five-inch 38 guns as well as 40- and 20-MM anti-aircraft guns, it was a formidable weapon.

Put in mothballs (1947) at Norfolk, Virginia, it was rescued from scrapping in 1964 by the committee of which Mr. Vaitses is head. Contributions from many citizens, including countless school children, made it possible for it to be floated up to Fall River, refurbished, and made into a permanent memorial to all the Commonwealth's World War II dead. Refurbishing is still incomplete, but is going forward steadily, as more contributions come in.

In addition to being a memorial, the Massachusetts is a naval museum of great interest to tourists of all ages, visited by some 200,000 each year. Young and old alike are fascinated by the enormous guns which can be elevated and aimed by hand, the barber shop, the brig, the laundry, and all the other rooms, including the dignified Memorial Room with the gold-lettered plaques listing the names of all Massachusetts citizens who gave their lives in World War II.

Colored slides illustrated Mr. Vaitses' lecture, and a selection of tape recordings describing parts of the ship was also enjoyed.

At one o'clock social hour with coffee and refreshments opened the meeting, which was held in the Workshop, Newton session followed the program. During the latter Mrs. W. A. Hurley, new regent, and Mrs. Joseph P. Maloney, new vice-regent, gave reports on the fall conference of the Massachusetts Society, DAR, held September 23 and 24 at Auburn.

Travel Talk For Women of Second Church

The October Meeting of the Women's Council of the Second Church in Newton will be held on Wednesday (Oct. 14), in the parish house. Work groups are scheduled for 9:30, study groups at 11:15, luncheon (for which there is a 75c charge) at 12:30, and the program at 1:30. This month's topic is Ancient and Modern Greece.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Leslie Sweetnam have slides to show and tales to tell of their three weeks trip through Greece this Spring.

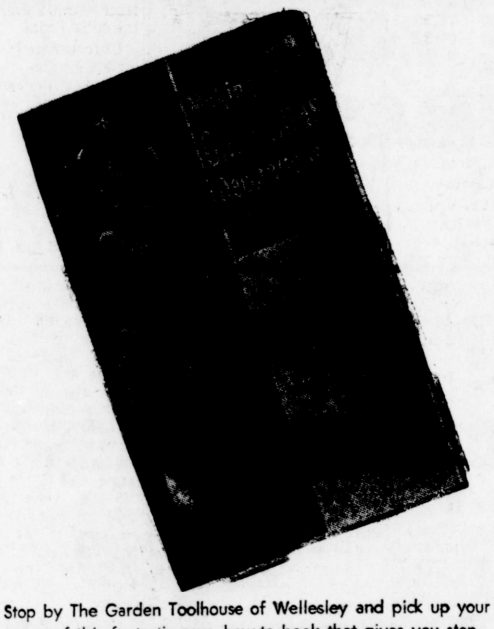

They spent a week in Athens, another week cruising through the islands of the Aegean Sea up through the Dardanelles and Bosporus to Istanbul, and the last week by bus across the Peloponnesos from Corinth to the Ionian Sea. They bring with their lovely slides a rich background of classical knowledge as well as keen insight into present day Greece.

All women, especially those of the United Parish, are invited to come and travel for the afternoon.

Tots-To-Teens Classes At Ecumenical Church School

The Weekday Church began its current year of classes for three year olds through adults in September at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church and St. Paul's Episcopal Church under the leadership of Mrs. Gordon Miller and Miss Diane Balcom. This ecumenical church school offers a comprehensive program designed to meet the needs of families and all ages represented in both parishes, as well as reaching out into the wider community.

Children from other faiths and outside the sponsoring parishes attend these classes, and the adult education programs are open to the public at large. An informative study series on Consultation on Church Union is planned for adults in the near future.

Nursery classes are held Monday through Thursday mornings for three and four year olds.

Kindergarten and intermediate grade classes meet on Tuesday afternoons and primary grade classes are held on Thursday afternoons. The entire administrative staff of both churches including the ministers, Rev. John Balcom and Rev. Dudne Breeze, Associate minister, Rev. Meredith Handspicker, the directors of the school, and a team of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary students work together to provide this program.

The Senior Seminar, offered Wednesday evenings at 7 p.m. for senior high school students, will utilize the talents and abilities of the leadership team in pursuing a variety of subjects in a series of course.

Religious education courses, worship experience, and service projects are all part of the experiences provided by these unique ecumenical classes.

Opening meetings for the Junior and Senior Youth Fellowships of the Weekday Church School will be held in October. Each of these ecumenical groups will have leadership from the staff of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and The Newton Highlands Congregational Church as well as lay leaders and Andover-Newton Theological Seminary students who will assist in the varied program for the year.

Discussion groups, social activities, worship and service are included in the plans for weekly meetings on Sunday evenings.

One-Man Photo Show Set At Free Library For October

Arruda, who teaches photography at Newton South High School, lives in the Falls, likes it, and lets the viewer focus on some unexpected sights.

Boxcar and eengine at the freight yards, a brooding interior of Mary Immaculate of Lourdes Church, the billiard table at George's Barbershop -- the casual passerby in the Falls will never see these scenes.

Add to them a dark bird in a bae tee, a boom popped by a cold radiator, some unothodox shots of much-photographed Echo Bridge, and you will feel the authoity in Arruda's work, product of his fine eye with Nikkormat or Rolleiflex.

A graduate of Mass. College of Art, he is an Attleboro native, now married to the former Leslie Gould of Newton. In his second year with the Art Department at Newton South High, he is working back-to-back with English teacher Robert Goggin in a cooperative learning situation.

In his first photography competition, Arruda won a second place at the Attleboro Museum show for the People and Portraits category, 1969.

The one-man photo-show, together with a complementary book display, may be seen through October. Library hours are 9 to 9 daily, 9 to 6 Saturday, closed Sunday.

Funeral Held For Victim In Car Accident

A Newtonville man was killed on Thursday of last week (Oct. 1) when his own automobile rolled over him in the driveway of his home.

Sumner W. Newcomb of 169 Mt. Vernon St., a 46-year resident of Newtonville, was apparently killed immediately. His car had rolled several feet and was found resting against his garage. Police and firefighters, called by Mr. Newcomb's wife, Dorothy, removed the car. Mr. Newcomb was pronounced dead at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

A native of South Boston, he was a graduate of Boston English High School in 1909. He served in World War I and was a 50-year member of Dalhousie Lodge, AF and AM of Newtonville and of the Aleppo Temple in Boston.

He was also a member of Newtonville United Methodist Church and Puritan Canoe Club of Boston, which he had served as commodore.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Newcomb Monday morning at the United Methodist Church with the Rev. Robert C. Mezoff officiating. Burial was in Newton Cemetery.

Wines and Cheeses Feature Friends of Library Meeting

Sampling wines from Portugal and cheeses from all over was a pleasure offered at the recent annual meeting of the Friends of the Newton Free Library, held at the home of the Friends' President, Mr. George Michaels, of Auburndale.

A large gathering of new and long-term members of the Friends also enjoyed poking through an exhibit of books from the Newton Free Library on wines and on Portugal, arranged by Mrs. Barbara Michaels, Public Relations Director for the Library.

At the combination pleasure and business meeting, officers of the organization for the 1970-71 term were introduced.

Mr. Michaels is serving again as President of the Friends of the Newton Free Library. Supporting him will be Mrs. Mae Takayanagi, of Auburndale, first vice-president; Arnold Tovell, Newton Highlands, second vice-president; treasurer, George Brewer, Auburndale; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Barbara Kamar, Newton Highlands; recording secretary, Mrs. Miriam Freedman, West Newton; and also of West Newton, Mrs. Mary Lewis Hansen, publicity chairman.

New directors of the Friends of the Library were welcomed at the annual meeting. These include Mrs. Naomi Gordon, Waban; Mrs. Thelma Barkin; Mrs. Hariet Avery, and Mr. Fred Wilcon, all of Newton Center.

Continuing to serve as directors are Mrs. Barbara Michaels, Mrs. Kitty Sherman and Mrs. Walter Rosenfeld, both of Newton, and the Reverend Scott Paradise, West Newton.

The Friends of the Newton Free Library function to assist the Library staff, as patrons of the city's library, and potential patrons in a variety of ways.

In the past, the Friends have sponsored Essay Contest for students in Newton Schools, film showings, and such speakers as Isaac Asimov. New members are always welcome. Membership chairman is Mrs. Takayanagi: 244-7426.

Tres Bien Ball Will Offer A Novel Feature On Nov. 14

Planners of the eighth annual Tres Bien Ball have given a novel twist to the over-worked Parisian theme with their salute to "New Year's Eve in Paris."

Highlight of the Nov. 14 dance will be the drawing for round-trip tickets to Paris for two. The festive, expense-paid jaunt includes a posh champagne dinner New Year's eve at a top-starred restaurant, hotel accommodations for 20 days, and a car with one thousand free kilometers. Just in case the winners DON'T love Paris every season of the year, they'll be able to take the 21-day trip whenever they choose.

The Sheraton Plaza ballroom will be decked out like an old-fashioned French cafe for the evening, replete with candlelight for the tables. Ruby Newman's orchestra will alternate with Peter Fiedler and His Friends for a varied musical pace.

The dance, sponsored by alumnae of Newton College of the Sacred Heart, Manhattanville College, and Newton Country Day School, is the major annual fund-raising event for the three schools. Miss Ursula Anne Kent, Jamaica Plain, is general chairman.

Her committee includes Mrs. Edward J. O'Neil III, Newton; Mrs. Frank J. Giovino, Jr., Westwood; Mrs. Mark E. Gallagher III, Boston; Mrs. Roger E. Hughes, Jr., Chestnut Hill) Mrs. Frank A. Hernberg, Jr., Wellesley; Mrs. David F. Dalton, Brookline; Miss Kathryn Hogan, Auburndale; Mrs. Robert C. Mullin, Winchester.

Also, Mrs. John B. McNamara, Chestnut Hill; Mrs. Chester F. Blake, Jr., Boston; Mrs. Robert M. Donahue, Chestnut Hill; Mrs. Robert E. Connors, Wellesley; Mrs. John R. Reilly, Jr., Needham; Miss Florence Flynn, Boston; Mrs. Laurence J. Hoch, Brookline; Mrs. Peter L. Thurmond, Newton.

Social Security Information

For the Under-30

If you're in that half of the U.S. population under 30 you may think social security is something remote and unimportant to you right now. Not so, according to Gerald Silver, social security manager for Roslindale, and West Roxbury.

"In this generally healthy and youthful group, nearly 2½ million people receive benefits because they are disabled or are dependent upon disabled workers. Over three million widowed mothers and young children get monthly social security checks as survivors of workers," Silver stated. "Half a million students age 18 to 22 and a quarter of a million people who become disabled in childhood get monthly benefits as the children of retired, deceased or disabled workers", Mr. Silver went on. "Disabled children get social security benefits as long as they are not able to work."

"The money in cases like these is important, of course," the manager added. "But for the young worker who knows that his family will be at least partially provided for should he be injured or die prematurely, there is also peace of mind.

American Queen Of Sikkim Urges Greater Freedom

By AJIT K. DAS

The Himalayan Buddhist kingdom of Sikkim, where an Amercan is the queen, wants to revise the treaty which makes it a protectorate of India.

Under the 20-year-old treaty, India assumes responsibility for the defense, foreign affairs, transportation and communications in neighboring Sikkim.

But Sikkim now wants to operate the postal, transport and communications system while leaving defense in Indian hands.

Ruler of Sikkim is Chogyal (king) Palden Thondup Namgyal, 47. In 1963 while he was crown prince, he married Hope Cooke, a New York debutante. Now 30, she is Gyalmo (queen) Hope and the mother of the king's two children, Prince Palden, 6, and Princess Hope, 2.

Many Indians, including some officials in the Indian Foreign Office in New Delhi, interpret Sikkim's new stand as being anti-Indian. But Namgyal argues that revision of the treaty is required by changes in circumstances since the pact was signed in 1950.

The king says Sikkim has no intention of disturbing friendly relations with India. The monarch says his state realizes India's economic assistance in cash, men and materials has contributed to Sikkim's economic progress.

Some Indians blame Hope, the first American to marry into Asian royalty, for engineering a demand for full sovereignty for Sikkim.

Indian troops stationed in Sikkim, a land with a population of about 187,000 people, are particularly conerned with guarding Sikkim's 150-mile border along Tibet, which is ruled by Communist China.

India's military garrison in the Himalayan kingdom went into action in 1965 when China attacked Sikkim near Nathula Pass, 14,300 feet above sea level.

Sikkim maintains no army of its own. But the little kingdom is organized a militia and has a equipped police force which operates guard posts along the Sikkim-Tibet border.

India operates Sikkim's postal and telegraph system and constructed and maintains Sikkim's road links with India. These are the services which Sikkim wished to run itself.

Indian critics of Sikkimese interest in treaty revision take the view that an independent Sikkim eventually would turn pro-Chinese or be overrun by Communist Chinese troops.

CAROL SUMMERFIELD

Local Woman Is Adv. Manager For Hotel Corp.

Appointment of Carol Summerfield as advertising manager for Sonesta Hotels was announced today by Jean-Yves Canas, Director of Advertising and Public Relations for the Boston-based international hotel corporation.

A graduate of Cornell University School of Hotel Administration, she joined Sonesta Hotels in 1965 as national sales representative.

The following year she became sales manager for Sonesta Hotel in Cambridge, and in 1969 joined the corporate headquarters marketing department in Boston as sales promotion manager.

In her new post, she will coordinate advertising and sales promotion activities for the 25 Sonesta hotels and 10 regional offices as well as assist in administration of the corporation's trade and consumer advertising programs.

She is the wife of Martin A. Summerfield, president of Franklin Advertising Associates in Newton and South Yarmouth. The couple resides at 115 University Rd., Brookline.

Queen Wins Praise

Hope comes into the controversy because of an article she wrote four years ago in the bulletin of Sikkim's Institute of Tibetology.

She said she wrote the article as a student of oriental affairs rather than as queen of Sikkim. In it she contended that all lands in Sikkim belong to the state and transfer of any land, even by the king, is only temporary.

Under her theory, the Indian Hills station at Darjeeling, which Sikkim gave to India in 1835, is not the absolute property of India.

The queen's views made her suspect to many Indians but added to her popularity among her own subjects. Even Sikkimese who thought the marriage of an American woman to the Himalayan king was ill-advised, now appear to be her enthusiastic supporters.

N-W Hospital Rate Hike . . .

Single Room Occupancy Up To $89-92 Per-Day Charge

The Board of Governors of Newton-Wellesley Hospital has approved an average increase in room rates of $11 a day effective Oct. 1. The increase, the board reports, is necessitated both by sharply higher payroll and other costs and by the effects of strikes and other delays in the hospital's expansion program.

The increases in room rates will range from $3 a day on four-bed rooms which presently are $61 to $64 a day to $13 a day on single-bed rooms which are presently $76 to $79 a day to a new range of $89 to $92.

Establishment of the new rates followed acceptance by the Board of a new operating budget totaling $11.7 million, which compares wih a $9.1 million budget for the fiscal 1970 year ending Sept. 30.

Commenting on the Board's action, president Richard P. Axten of the hospital, said, "Much of the increase in the total budget results from the planned expansion of the hospital's operations under the current building program from the former 260 beds to 350 beds in 1971. However, the increases in room charges are necessitated primarily by the continuing rise in competitive pay scales for hospital personnel, substantially higher costs of medical supplies and other goods and services, increased borrowing and depreciation charges, and higher costs for employee pensions and social security taxes."

STRIKES HURT

Hospital officials noted that until recently it had been expected that the increase could be held to under $10 a day. However, strikes and other construction slow-downs in the hospital's expansion program have delayed the opening of new patient floors until 1971.

"Every effort was made by the hospital administration, working with appropriate committees of the trustees and medical staff, to hold down costs," Mr. Axten said. "The trustees are keenly aware of their fiduciary responsibility to their fellow townsmen in Newton, Wellesley and adjacent communities to provide the best possible health care at reasonable cost. While there are undoubtedly many of our neighbors who do not consider present day hospital chages 'reasonable', we who are grappling constantly with steadily rising wage scales and costs of material purchases know that our rates are indeed reasonable in relation to what we must pay to provide vital health services."

PAYROLL COSTS $812 MILLION

Wages and related payroll costs required to keep the hospital operating 24 hours a day seven days a week constitute $8.2 million or 70.1 percent of the total budget. Supplies and other non-personnel items of expense, including interest charges on money borrowed to finance the expansion of the hospital's facilities, account for the remaining $3.5 million or 29.9 percent of the budget.

"Our hospital is a voluntary 'not-for-profit' institution, so increased costs cannot come out of profits because there aren't any," Mr. Axten said. "Neither can we, as an organization which exists by, for and through the communities it serves and which operates without tax revenues or other subsidies, afford to operate at a loss.

"Like other hospitals we are doing everything we can to minimize personnel expense through bulk purchasing and shared computer use, and to provide better but less costly diagnostic and therapeutic treatment with new equipment.

"Nevertheless, we continut to incur cost increases beyond our control, and when we do we have no alternative but to reflect these increases in higher charges for services rendered."

Street Lighting Survey Ordered By Mayor Basbas

Newton Mayor Monte G. Basbas has directed the City's Public Works Department to conduct a complete survey of street lighting in Newton.

In a memorandum to Public Works Director Willard S. Pratt, the Mayor stated that, although the City has recently undergone a relighting, a new study should be undertaken "because of the heavy density of our foliage and winding streets," and that "we should make every effort to bring our lighting up to top standards."

Basbas went on to explain that, "with crime, particularly crime committed in the nighttime, becoming an increasing problem in suburbs like Newton, improved police techniques and efficient operation by law enforcement agencies is not enough.

"Our first goal should be to discorage and thereby prevent crime, not to concentrate on measures after the fact, and improved lighting has proven to be one of t he key factors in inhibiting criminal activity. Our best weapon against this type of crime is the very best street lighting."

plan and direction" of the School Department's efforts in this field. The department replied that Lipof had not asked for it.

In a prepared statement that was handed to the aldermen and to the press Lipof said, "as a parent of four school age children, I have been looking for some time now, for some official communication from the schools that they have implemented an active drug education program that could reach every child in our city."

"Because I have received no such communication — even 'Patterns' has been completely silent on the subject — I found it necessary to make my own personal inquiries. I spoke with several teachers, principals, school committeeman, and on two separate occasions, I have informally questioned the Superintendent of Schools. These inquiries led me to the conclusion that drug education within our school system is on a non - mandatory nature," Lipof's statement went on.

He added, "I know of several isolated incidents of excellent programs in our own school system, such as the ones at Hyde School and Oak Hill School, for example.

"I am aware of the 80 students presently being trained to work with their younger brothers and sisters. I am aware of the excellent guest speakers, panel programs, research papers, films and summer workshops to update curriculum."

"I am also aware that on March 10, 1969, only 18 months ago, the School Committee spent almost an entire meeting discussing what part the Newton School system should play in combatting drug abuse. Let me now quote briefly to you from the minutes of that meeting," Lipof said.

The remarks he quoted were: "We hope to sponsor small group discussions of pupils led by informed and trained personnel drawn from the teachers and counselors."

"We believe that parents should be thoroughly and accurately informed about the health and legal aspects of drug use and abuse; therefore schools will work out their own programs with their own parent groups."

"There will possibly be a group that will work on curriculum this summer."

"We are not yet sure who is to do the teaching — whether it should be science teachers, social studies teachers, guidance counselors, special teachers or others."

These remarks, he claimed, did not substantiate the School Department's statement that a drug education program has been in existence since 1967.

Lipof said he still wanted to know:

"How many teachers are presently qualified to participate in a drug educaton program? and at what grade levels?"

"How many teachers in each particular school are equipped to implement a meaningful drug program?"

"What written evaluations have been required of the teachers to establish the effectiveness of their particular programs?"

"What is being done by the School Department to communicate with every parent so that a better atmosphere of cooperation can be achieved? (exclusive of P.T.A. and newspapers)

"What is being done by the School Department to communicate with city officials?"

"Is a drug education program mandatory for all schools?"

Lipof's statement concluded, "It is my firm conviction that the crux of the problem is a lack of communication between the schools and the community and a lack of a mandatory drug education program within the school system. Naturally, I don't attempt to minimize the important role of the city administration, the Police Dept., and especially parents in tackling this dreadful problem, but I am firmly convinced that it is the schoools and primarily the schools that have the opportunity, and ability to reach every parent and child."

$127,669 Rebate Coming To City On MDC Sewage

As one of the 40 Greater Boston communities comprising the Metropolitan District Sewer Commission, Newton will get a $127,669 rebate on sewer charges.

The return is the result of a recent Suffolk Superior Court decision which ruled the City of Boston into the MDC sewage system and therefore liable to a percentage share in MDC sewage costs.

The ruling said that Boston is "connected" to MDC system and therefore no longer entitled to the 52 percent exemption which it has received for 10 years.

The case was initiated by Attorney General Robert H. Quinn, the decision made by Judge August C. Taveira. In the nine-day testimony, Boston officials contended the existing connections are insufficient and sewage disposal facilities owned by the city are still required to be operated.

The Biggest Roast Beef in Boston

You'd better believe it.

And here's what keeps him honest. If he ever once carves you a slice of roast beef that weighs less than a pound and a half, you get a second slice free. And he's in deep trouble.

So he makes sure every juicy, succulent slice completely covers the big, oversize platter it's served on.

Here's what comes with your roast beef: a nice big salad, ice cold and crisp. A nice big baked potato with sour cream. Your choice of vegetables. And a golden Yorkshire popover swimming in butter. It's not so much a dinner as a challenge. A roast beef lover's Everest.

Meet that challenge tonight, why not? Just because it's there.

Call Frederick for reservations.

Card Wright Says Curia Is Clearing House

American Cardinal John J. Wright thinks people have got the wrong idea about the Curia, the Roman Catholic church's central government, where he works.

"They think of the Curia as a great sociological beast," the former Bishop of Pittsburgh said "They regard it as an undesirable accretion to the gospel and to the primitive church."

But Wright, 60, looking back on his first year as the first American to head a Curia department, said the organization is a necessity to the church.

"There are those who have decided, for reasons I have never been able to grasp entirely, that the church should be decentralized," Wright said. "They say everything is in the hands of the Curia.

"Well, the Pope is the head of the church. He can't do all the work himself, so he has these bureaus and commissions and congregations which we call the Curia."

In any case, Wright said, local churches are taking over many of the tasks once done by the Curia in line with the Vatican Ecumenical Council's call for individual bishops to share in policy making. And the Curia, once solidly dominated by Italians, is becoming more international.

"I used to think the result of all this would be that there would be less mail," Wright said. "I've been gravely disilusioned," he added, eyeing a stack of letters on his desk.

"The bishop of the brand new diocese in Frica who would probably have written in once a year to ask what the Pope thinks about such and such, now writes to ask us to find out what all the other bishops are doing about whatever is the subject in hand.

"The result is an enormous amount of paperwork. "The Curia has become a kind of clearing house."

The cardinal said he would prefer pastoral duties to the office work that occupies much of his time here. But it was a very small complaint.

"The truth is, I just love living in Rome," he said.

"I don't merely mean the Rome of the Popes. I like the Rome of Virgil and Horace, the legendary Rome and all its surrounding little hill towns."

Pointing to the vast basilica across the square, he said: "But this is the Rome I love best of all . . . the place where Christianity came alive."

At his comfortably furnished apartment a short walk away, Wright relaxes with his hobbies — a collection of books and manuscripts about St. Joan of Arc which is reputed to be the most complete in the world and a collection of records which leans heavily to what he calls "Mediterranian" composers: Verdi, Donizetti, Puccini, plus Mozart and Richard Strauss.

Dry, stringy, lifeless hair will respond to an oil with heat conditioning, according to beauty authorities.

aware of their responsibility to their fellow townsmen to provide the best possible health care at reasonable cost," said Richard P. Axten, president.

"Like other hospitals we are doing everything we can to minimize personnel expense without detracting from essential patient care. . .

"Nevertheless, we continue to incur cost increases beyond our control, and when we do we have no alternative but to reflect these increases in higher charges for services rendered," the president continued.

The rate jumps were $3 a day on the four-bedrooms and to $13 on the singles. Higher payroll and purchasing costs were the largest factor, according to the hospital.

The strikes on new construction are another factor, as are increased borrowing and depreciation charges and rises in employee pension costs and social security taxes.

Wages and other payroll costs come to $8.2 million or 70.1 percent of the total budget. The other $3.5 million is made up of a sum of budgets including supplies and interest on borrowing.

Crocked Roaches?

RACINE, Wis. (UPI) — How about "crocked as a cockroach" to replace the old "drunk as a skunk?"

According to entomologists at the Johnson Wax Biology Center here it might be more accurate, for they've found that roaches have an insatible appetite for fermenting liquids. Indeed, the scientists often use bread soaked with beer as cockroach bait.

Low Fat Meats

To watch your weight and still enjoy eating, try low fat meat cuts, advises a nutrition researcher.

"The average cut of lean beef round or pork loin chop contains much of the protein needed as a daily nutritional requirement, yet considerably less fat and calories than is generally believed," said Mrs. Frances Hall, assistant director of the National Livestock and Meat Board's nutrition research Department.

Basic Legislative Needs Are Vital Says Rep. Mann

Representative Theodore D. Mann today reminded voters of his district (Wards 5-6-7-8) that their continuing concern is required for what he termed "the basic legislature needs in the State".

Stressing his record in dealing with major problems, including mental health, education, youth and metropolitan planning, Mann declared:

"We must continue directing our efforts to basic programs that will effectively serve the economy, health and welfare of our community."

Speaking of his efforts in behalf of mental health programs and noting that he had filed legislative bills dealing with the subject, Rep. Mann noted:

"In recent years we have moved forward in the development of Regional Mental Health Centers and plans call for additional facilities and personnel. Much, however, remains to be done to further develop these essential programs. Hopefully, the State and Federal governments will engage in cooperative efforts to provide funds with which to implement legislation now enacted."

"Modern community-oriented programs of mental health centers for adults is a matter of primary concern. The cost in human resources as well as financial, justifies greater governmental concern and involvement."

"The establishment of adult treatment centers so that adults may receive help on an out - patient basis close to where they live and work is a part of the answer to present day needs."

"The alternative to such programs," Mann said, "if we fail to meet the need to provide the proper facilities and personnel ultimately places a crushing burden on the families involved, and in the aggregate costs the community far more in terms of human values as well as in dollars", he said.

Mann said he welcomed the opportunity his fourth campaign for the House offers him to meet voters of his district and to discuss with them the critical issues of the day. He hopes to meet with many more as he meets with various groups and house parties in the next several weeks.

Chains Play Many Roles

Chains play an important role in summer outdoor living by helping insure privacy, security and convenience.

For example, you can shield open patios or decks from wind by building a simple privacy barrier of lengths of fiber glass panels, fastened to wooden or metal posts by short lengths of chains. Panels may also be of painted exterior plywood or heavy-duty canvas.

And for more convenient outdoor cookery, you can build chain-hung tables or shelves from walls or fence rails adjoining your barbecue area.

Other easy and economical ways to use chains to advantage include:

—Keep young children safer on docks, and raised porches or terraces by stretching three lengths of chains about a foot apart between posts at least four feet high.

Make an ever-ready dog run for the family pooch by extending a wire between trees or buildings and fastening a chain to the wire to permit freedom of movement.

—Protect lawns and flower beds with barriers made by extending a single piece of chain between metal posts about three feet high.

—Protect lawn furniture from theft by securing it with chains to nearby trees or buildings. This same precaution can be taken with bicycles, scooters, lawnmowers and other gardening equipment stored in garages where doors or locks may be vulnerable.

—Define limits of your yard's outdoor parking areas with single-strand chain fence to guide visitor's cars and protect lawns from damage.

—A chain across the street entrance of your driveway will discourage random entrance by trucks or motorists looking for shortcuts. A padlocked chain across your carport will help deter car thieves. Many motorists go a step further-chaining their parked cars to street signs or trees.

—Be sure that hanging container plants or any decorative accessories are equipped with sufficiently strong chain. You can easily do this by weighing pot plants or other material you plan to hang and asking your hardware store for the proper strength chains. All new chains are identified according to their "working load limits."

Club plans for the year were discussed, with meetings planned for the second and fourth Mondays of each month at Nonantum Branch, 126 Bridge Street. October meetings are on the 12th and 26th at 7:30 p.m.

Membership in the club is free and open to all Newton residents who wish to learn new camera skills and exchange creative camera ideas. Current members range in age from junior-high students to adults, and include men and women with varying camera abilities and interests.

Japan is Split Over Trade With CommunistChina

Japanese businessmen are making more money than ever in their trade with the Chinese mainland. Red Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai is boldly using the trade as a lever to stir up trouble between Japan and the rival Nationalist Chinese government on Formosa.

Japan's trade with Communist China reached a record level of $625.3 million in 1969. Japanese firms sold far more than they bought from the Chinese mainland, and the balance was $146.3 million in Japan's favor.

This year Peking is spending money even faster to buy Japanese goods. There are estimates from some businessmen the trade volume will hit $800 million in 1970.

A combine of chemical companies signed a contract in mid-August to deliver $19.45 million worth of chemical fertilizer to China.

At about the same time, Komatsu, a maker of earth moving machines, won an order for $8.89 million worth of road building equipment, including 200 18-ton bulldozers.

Chou has created turmoil in Japanese business circles by threatening to close the Chinese mainland to any Japanese firm deeply involved in investment or sales of technical know how to Nationalist China.

As a result, big Japanese companies have been forced to choose between the two Chinas. Nippon Steel, the world's second largest steel maker after U.S Steel, already has been banned from Communist China.

Taiwan Chinese Retaliate

The Taiwan Chinese, headed by President Chiaing Kai-Shek, retaliated by closing their country to about 20 Japanese firms doing big business on the mainland.

Increasingly, the result is a division of labor, in which some Japanese companies supply the mainland and others Taiwan.

Some of Japan's conglomerates have split over the issue. Most of the Mitsubishi family of industries sides with the Nationalist Chinese. But Mitsubishi Chemical, with an eye on Red China's huge potential fertilizer market, opted for continued good relations with Peking.

The chemical firms especially are fearful of giving up trade with Communist China. Red China already is buying half their fertilizer output. They calculate that if Peking continues to modernize its agriculture, there will be an enormous market on the mainland for years to come.

MANILA (UPI) — When high school students took over the City Council for a day their first "official" act was to approve a proposal for inclusion of sex education in high school and college curricula. The vote was 17-2. The two "nos" were cast by boys.

We'll replace your furnace with a heating system that will make your house feel like a Florida resort all winter.

And we can guarantee the operating cost in writing.

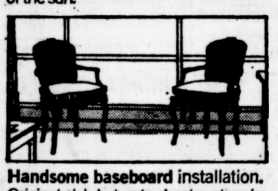

Heat eater. This 24-room house was heated for $15 a week with Radiant Electric Glassheat. It used to cost $24 with oil. No wonder the contractor was glad to guarantee the operating cost.

Thousands of people all over this country and Canada enjoyed Radiant Electric Glassheat in their houses and apartments last winter. Some people have been enjoying this amazingly comfortable, trouble-free heat for over 20 years.

Glassheat is the easiest heating system in the world to install. There are no ducts. No pipes. No tanks.

And Glassheat is direct heat. Unlike other heat systems that only warm the air, Glassheat warms you direct. Glassheat is almost instant heat; seconds after the panel is turned on, your skin begins feeling heat rays like the rays of the sun.

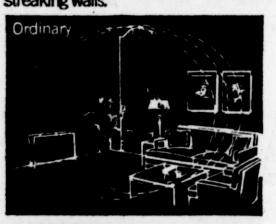

Handsome baseboard installation. Original slab hot-water heat system in this Levitt-built home ruptured. Conversion to Radiant Electric Glassheat was made easily.

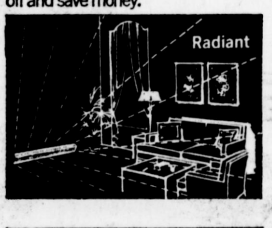

Clean heat. This Radiant Electric Glassheat wall panel never deposits a speck of dirt on these lacy curtains. For the first time in years the curtains haven't needed monthly washings.

Radiant heating with Glassheat. It "broadcasts" heat rays evenly. There's only a 2-degree temperature difference from floor to ceiling. With conventional heating systems, the difference may be as much as 20 degrees.

Since Glassheat is electric heat, there is no burning. So there is no dust or soot. No moving parts either, so there's nothing to break down. And you get a thermostat in each room. If you aren't using a room, turn the heat off and save money.

Why we can afford to guarantee the cost of operating Glassheat.

We expect you to spend less on heating after you install Radiant Electric Glassheat than you're spending right now. For one thing, electric heat is more efficient. No heat goes up the chimney. No heat is wasted in rooms you aren't using. And glass, which is the heart of Glassheat, loses heat more slowly than metal constructions. What's more, if you're in the Boston Edison or Massachusetts Electric area, your power company will give you a special low electric rate and a generous installation allowance. We're glad to tell you how much lower your annual heating bill will be with Glassheat—and guarantee it in writing.

In just a few minutes, without obligation, we can show you how Radiant Electric Glassheat will turn your house into a toasty warm, Florida resort, eliminate heating problems, and cut the cost of heat compared with your present system.

Fill out the coupon or call 237-3994 and ask for Bill Doherty.

Aldermen Vote On Variety Of Petitions Monday Night

In dealing with a variety of zoning matters on Monday night, the Newton Board of Aldermen denied a petition by Clay Chevrolet Co. t o build a parking lot adjacent to the automobile agency, denied a petition to rezone the property formerly occupied by Security Mills in Newtonville and approved the site plan for an office b uilding at the Newton at 128 Industrial Park.

Clarence B. Clay had asked the board for permissive use on a parcel of property on Hovey St., Newton Corner for use for outside storage customer parking.

At a recent public hearing neighbors opposed the extension of business use of land any further into the residential neighborhood.

Clay had said that the severe parking problem in the area caused the need for the parking lot. He noted that the problem increased during periods of automobile inspection and at times when certain models of cars were recalled for correction of possible defects.

With regard to the Security Mills property, Aldermen Thomas Concannon and Peter Harrington had petitioned the board for a change of zone from manufacturing to Residence D of a large area bounded by the Massachusetts Turnpike on the north, the westerly edge of the Business A zone on the west, the northerly side of Washington Park and Parkview Ave., Cabot Park and Lewis Terrace on the east. The entire area encompasses about 1,632,284 square feet.

The Land Use Committee of the Board of Aldermen had recommended by a 3 to 2 vote the rezoning only of the Security Mills property.

Alderman Harrington pointed out to the board that 220 residents of the area had submitted letters favoring the change of zone of the Security Mills property from manufacturing to residential.

Land Use Committee Chairman Alan Barkin, who had voted against the rezoning in committee, said that if the property were rezoned to residential, the present use of the land would be non-conforming and that would mean that only the manufacturing use could still persist on a non-conforming basis, precluding the possibility of offices at the location. There are now some offices at t he location.

The aldermen approved the site plan for a five story office building at the Newton 128 industrial park in Newton Highlands. The structure will include 89,922 square feet and will be located near the corner on Wells Ave.

Land Use Committee Chairman Barkin told the board that there are already nine companies located in the new industrial park and present projections contemplate about a total of 740 employees by December 31.

Neighbors Push Court Action To Kill 'Freeport'

Court action to prevent the Freeport Corporation from going forward with their plans for a home for troubled young people at 361 Commonwealth Ave., Chestnut Hill, opened Monday in Middlesex Court.

Attorney Robert Bonin is representing a group of neighbors who have opposed the idea since its inception and worked against it since the Board of Aldermen gave it a six-month trial go-ahead last May.

Freeport was told May 4 that it could have a maximum of nine persons, all the same sex, in residence. The Board, however, stipulated that neighbors must join the house committee. None have so far accpeted the invitation.

The case is being head by Judge Levin Campbell. Objection, presented by Bonin, has centered on the Board's action of allowing multiple use of a dwelling in a residential zone.

Freeport Attorney Fred Fisher called the Rev. David Parachini who told the court the Commonwealth Ave. house could be ready for students by November 1. Dr. William E. Stone, director of the Newton Mental Health Center, also spoke in favor of Freeport.

Hospital Honors Newton Teens For Service Work

Thirteen teenage volunteers from Newton were honored last week at a party given by Beth Israel Hospital in appreciation of the variety of services the young volunteers performed throughout the summer.

Miss Anne V. Cronin, Director of Personnel, expressed the Hospital's gratitude for their assistance "in virtually every area of activity in the Hospital."

In the course of their service, the teenagers made up stretchers in the Emergency Unit, escorted out - patients to examining rooms, handled patient service calls, transported patients to and from x-ray and assisted in the pharmacy, the photography department, unit service, central supply, and many of the administrative departments.

The event was attended by mothers of the volunteers and many members of the Hospital staff who have worked closely with them.

Resolution Calls For All-Out Effort For Newton Taxpayers

Submitted Tuesday n ight to the Board of Aldermen and referred to the Finance Committee for study, was a resolution calling for unanimous support for Mayor Monte G. Basbas in an all-out effort to provide relief to the overburdened taxpayer of Newton.

Alderman Sidney T. Small, an at-large representative from Ward 6, sponsored the measure, and called for the Mayor to meet with the president of the Aldermen, chairman of the Finance Committee and Newton's State legislators to work out legislation to change the assessment formulas of State and County levies on the municipalities.

Speaking of the "unbearable proportions" reached by the municipal taxes, Alderman Small's resolution points up the declining returns from state taxes and increasing assessments from County government.

In 1967 Newton received from the State $2,633,605 over what it was assessed and had to pay. In 1970 t his amount dropped to $756,665 — "a reversal of form that has cost Newton's taxpayers over three million dollars in those three years."

Calling Middlesex County expenditures the result of "irresponsible and unchecked spending by a 'shadow' government accountable to no one but itself," the Alderman said the bill from the County to Newton has risen over 50 per cent from 1968 to 1970.

The resolution follows:

WHEREAS The financial burden placed upon the Citizens of Newton and many other Cities and Towns of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by exorbitantly climbing property taxes has reached unbearable proportions; and

WHEREAS The Cities and Towns which must levy these taxes upon their Citizens must do so not only to meet the need for increasingly expensive services and educational costs, but to make up for constantly declining returns from State tax proceeds and constantly climing assessments levied upon them by County Government and other regional agencies, and are therefore powerless to affect determination of their own tax rates; and WHEREAS Newton, as an example of this alarming trend, has seen, in the past three years, a situation develop wherein that City, which in 1967 received from the State $2,633,605.38 over and above the amount of money that it was assessed had to pay, in 1970, $756,665.39 over and above what it received from the State, a reversal of form that has cost Newton's taxpayers over three million dollars in those three years; and

WHEREAS The assessments levied upon Newton by Middlesex County have become intolerable, with the County tax bill increasing by over 50 per cent, from $1,319,097.16 in 1968 to $2,073,673.01 in 1970, and with the bill for the County TB Hospital assessment increasing from $35,870.81 in 1968 to $202,548.75 in 1970, a rise of nearly 600 per cent, both increases being the result of irresponsible and unchecked spending by a "Shadow" government that is accountable to no one but itself and has affected the 1970 tax rate of Newton by $6.00 per thousand; and

WHEREAS Mayor Monte G. Basbas of Newton has been carrying on a continuous struggle against both the State's financial distribution formula, that gives less and takes more from the Cities and Towns each year, and the reckless and unchecked spending of Middlesex County;

NOW, THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED That the Board of Aldermen of the City of Newton pledge its unanimous support to the Mayor in his efforts to provide relief to the already overburdened tax payer and that it act, wherever possible, to call to the attention of State and County Legislators and Administrators, its concern and distress over the plight of the tax payer, who is, in fact, being taxed out of existence, and that of the Cities and Towns, who must provide their Citizens with desperately needed services while having to meet the intolerable assessments levied upon them.

HANOI REJECTS NIXON'S FIVE-POINT INDOCHINA PEACE PLAN

NORTH VIETNAM, in a foreign ministry statement broadcast by Hanoi Radio, categorically rejected President Nixon's five-point Indochina peace plan Wednesday. The official Hanoi statement said Nixon's call for a cease-fire and the convening of an international conference "are merely a deceptive maneuver" cloaking an American plan to prolong "its occupation" of South Vietnam. The lengthy statement, broadcast in English and recorded by government monitors in Washington, said that the North Vietnamese government agreed with the rejection statements issued by the Viet Cong regime. "The Vietnamese people and the government of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam sternly condemn and categorically reject the deceptive 'peace proposal' made by the Nixon administration," the foreign ministry statement said.

BOOBY TRAP BOMB KILLS 10, WOUNDS 5 IN SAIGON

A COMMUNIST booby trap made out of a U.S. artillery shell killed 10 persons—nine of them American soldiers — and wounded five, headquarters reported Wednesday in Saigon. The dead included an Army chaplain, a company commander and a South Vietnamese soldier. Field reports said the booby trap exploded in front of a command post as men of the U.S. Army's 198th Light Infantry Brigade were setting up defensive positions Tuesday night in Quang Ngai Province 288 miles northeast of Saigon. Names were withheld pending notification of relatives in the United States.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY opened a special session in New York marking the 25th anniversary of the United Nations Wednesday with a budding hope that Middle East peace talks can be resumed. A massive security force on land and water protected dignitaries. A U.N. spokesman announced that Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring, special U.N. mediator on the Middle East, was flying from his post in Moscow, where he serves as Sweden's ambassador, to New York to aid world leaders in the search for peace. Egyptian Ambassador Mohammen H. El-Zayyat called on General Assembly President Edvard Hambro and asked that a full debate on the Middle East be held as soon as possible in the world parliament. The assembly previously had agreed to priority for such a debate. U.N. sources said unofficially that the Mideast airing was expected to start in New York Oct. 26. In Washington, the State Department announced that Secretary of State William P. Rogers would arrive today and immediately hold a meeting with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad. Diplomatic sources acknowledged that a new round of quiet diplomacy was beginning to solve the Middle East. crisis.

ANGELA DAVIS HELD IN $250,000 BAIL ON FUGITIVE CHARGE

BLACK REVOLUTIONARY Angela Davis, ousted University of California philosophy instructor, was held Wednesday in New York in $250,000 bail on a federal fugitive charge in connection with the courtroom kidnap-murder of a California judge last August. The 26-year-old admitted Communist and Black Panther supporter was arraigned in the federal courthouse under maximum security while 75 sympathizers outside chanted "Free our sister" and "Power to the people." A few gained entry to the courtroom and shouted "You will be free." The arraignment came 18 hours after Miss Davis and a black companion, David R. Poindexter Jr., 36, of Chicago, were arrested by FBI agents in their $30-a-day Manhattan motel room. They were unarmed and offered no resistance. Poindexter was arraigned on charges of harboring a fugitive and was ordered held in $100,000 by U.S. Commissioner Earle N. Bishop.

TRIBUNAL PONDERS TOUGHEST RACIAL QUESTION IN 16 YEARS

THE SUPREME COURT ended three days of emotional arguments Wednesday and took under advisement the toughest civil rights questions it has faced in 16 years. Not since the historic 1954 decision that struck down separate school systems for black and whites have the justices been asked to decide racial issues with such potentially sweeping impact. Attorneys for southern boards, Negro parents, the Nixon administration and a parent-teacher association argued their points of view in the consolidated case that generaly asked: under the constitution, how far must a school board go in seeking racial balance in its classrooms?

BLACK CONGRESSMEN FORM 'SHADOW CABINET'

BLACK CONGRESSMEN announced Wednesday they are forming an all-Negro "shadow cabinet" to expose Nixon administration officials who fail to enforce civil rights laws. They said they decided to act because the President's Civil Rights Commission reported earlier this week that bureaucrats hostile to civil rights laws are blocking progress in this field.

FARNHAM TO APPROVE 15% AUTO INSURANCE RATES CUT

STATE INSURANCE Commissioner C. Eugene Farnham said Wednesday he will not wait for a court ruling but will shortly approve a 15 per cent slash in auto insurance rates that is expected to save Massachusetts motorists $77 million next years in premiums. A motorists' group warned that as many as half of the state's 2.5 million drivers, however, could be left without any insurance at all if the cutback takes effect. Farnam's statement came shortly after Gov. Francis W. Sargent, in a rare appearance before the commission, urged the regulatory panel to approve the cheaper 1971 premiums without waiting for the State Supreme Court to decide whether the reduction is constitutional. The insurance industry asked the high court Tuesday to throw out the cutback, approved earlier this year by the Legislature, on grounds it violates the Commonwealth Constitution's guarantee of a "fair" profit to insurance companies. Sargent charged at the hearing the industry has launched a campaign to "create confusion, even panic" among policy holders in an attempt to get the legislature to "delay or repeal" the reduction. The cut, for one year only, is to take effect Jan. 1.

6-1 Vote By School Committee

'Open Campus' Is Favored By Board

By SHIRLEY GOLDWYN

A plan that will allow Newton High School seniors and juniors, with parental approval, freedom to go where they will during unscheduled class periods was approved by a 6 to 1 vote of the Newton School Committee on Tuesday night. Committeeman Alvin Mandell dissented.

The "open campus", similar to a plan adopted by Brookline recently, will require students to attend all classes, but not study periods. Students will be allowed to leave school grounds during their free time if they wish.

An ad hoc committee of students, teachers and parents will evaluate the experiment continuously and make recommendations concerning its continuance, curtailment or alteration.

In making the proposal to the School Committee, Newton High Principal Richard Mechem said, "This plan will give the students an opportunity to exercise greater responsibility for their lives. Some students will abuse this privilege.

"It seems appropriate that they work out their patterns of behavior in the relatively friendly and sympa-

Board O.K.s Store Front School Plan

A program that will bring 95 ninth grade students at Weeks Junior High School to a store front schoolroom in the Castle Square section of Boston's South End was approved by the Newton School Committee on Tuesday night.

The program is an enlargement of a pilot program that took place for six weeks last spring. Twenty - five students and one teacher participated in the pilot project in which all of the learning experiences were had at 469 Tremont St., Boston.

The store was donated through the courtesy of the Boston Redevelopment Authority after the Weeks' staff in the pilot program received the support and endorsement of the Castle Square Tenants Council.

At Weeks this September a new plan was developed for education which sets up clusters of students and teachers.

Each grade has three clusters of approximately 100 stud-

Sargent-White TV Meeting Should be Worth Watching

The televised confrontation on Friday night between Governor Francis W. Sargent and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White should be both interesting and important.

Tests of public sentiment indicate that Sargent and White are engaged in a close contest.

The impact made by the meeting upon the hundreds of thousands of voters who will be sitting at their television sets could send one of the two into a substantial lead.

Church Education Program Hits Waste In Life Style

"What kind of a World do We Want?" and "What can WE do about it?" are the closely allied themes of this year's religious education program offered by the First Unitarian Society in Newton.

According to Mrs. Arthur S. Laughland, Minister of Religious Education, Director of the church's R.E. program, the themes could be subtitled: "an intergenerational approach to political and environmental awareness."

In weeks past the program has included joint discussions between young people and adults designed to heighten awareness of the unnecessary waste built into our familiar life style — the disposables, the non-returnables, the electrical gadgets and machines that contribute little to the quality of life while adding much, collectively, to the fumes that hover over our cities, a by product of our rising power consumption.

Last Sunday, October 11, the Church Junior Highschoolers hiked to the Charles River and Norumbega each carrying a bag lunch plus an extra bag for trash collection along the way.

Under consideration is a community wide project to establish a collection center for paper destined ultimately for recycling. The project offers lessons for the participants that are both practical and symbolic, for it suggests ways to reduce the volume of waste disposal, the atmosphere by-products of trash burning, and the number of trees that must be cut to meet consumer demands.

Goals of the ecology program are to promote greater understanding and respect for the environment, to foster greater emphasis on human values, to enhance the individuals belief in his own power to change things, and to promote cooperation and respect between young people and adults by involving them together in worthwhile projects.

"It is impossible to say just where this undertaking will lead us," comments Mrs. Laughland, "because it really is limited only by the imagination and resourcefulness of the participants."

Simultaneously with the intergeneration emphasis on the ecology, a full program of activities for all age groups is underway in the church school. Curricula range from 3rd grade Feasts and Festivals, which celebrate the holidays in the great religions of the world, to 6th graders examination contemporary religion and Unitarian Universalism; from 2nd graders attempt to understand and deal with emotions and feelings to 5th grades new course, Man, the Meaning Maker, which believes that children are better able to guard against prejudice in themselves, and cope with it in others, when they realize that all people block out or distort certain perceptions.

Junior and senior high groups are planning their programs which will include a course in education for human sexuality, a creative arts program, and discussions of personal and social concern to the maturing adult.

One overnight for families has been held at Ferry Beach, Maine, and others are planned as the church attempts to minister to people who want to share new experiences as families together.

The church school teaching staff is made up of teams of talented enthusiastic volunteers. Most grades this year are led by husband-wife teams. Mrs. Laughland believes that the participation of fathers especially in the primary grades, effectively demonstrates the concept of the church as 'extended family' in our mobile society.

The staff this year includes: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Harpley, Mr. and Mrs. Andreas Kirshner, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. John Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Zeeb, Mrs. William Gruber, Mrs. George Stephen, Mrs. Marilyn Murphy, Mrs. Sally Farris, Mrs. Bruce Birnhak, Mrs. Eugene Bullock, Mrs. Robert Dickinson, Mr. Howell Lind, Mrs. Justin Williams. Music is under the direction of Mrs. Paul Humez.

The Religious Education Committee under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Floyd Gilles, is responsible for planning and carrying out of the program. Also on the Committee are Mrs. Erwin Salzer, Dr. Gerald Rothschild, Mrs. Dutton VanAlstine, Mrs. Charles Levy, Dr. Yolanda Low, Dr. S. J. Foulkrod, Mrs. George May, Mrs. Bernard Blood, Dr. Leonard Hassol, Mrs. Walter Bisselle, Mrs. Hubert Goodrich, Mr. Dermot Bredin, Mrs. Marjorie Hartle, Mr. Colin Stephen and Rev. G. Conservators Plan Second Sunday Walk Here Oct. 18

Newton Conservators are looking forward to more good weather and another good turn-out for their second open space walk on Sunday, October 18th.

Edmands Park in Newtonville will get the attention this week during a one-hour walk starting at 2 p.m. from the Park entrance on Blake Street (off Cabotand Mill streets).

Edmands Park was presented as a gift to the City of Newton in 1913 with the understanding that its 33 acres would be retained in close to natural condition. A WPA project in the 1930s introduced a dam and skating pond, some picnic facilities, and a lodge.

The pattern of neglect and vandalism set in almost at once, and today the contractors still dump their construction wastes, some neighbors deposit garden trash, and the general public introduces its own varieties of litter and destruction.

Sunday's walk will focus on the almost unlimited potential this lovely site has for positive community use. These walks are intended not as lecture tours but as informal introductions to some of our open spaces, with the hope that people once finding the way in will return often to enjoy the many positive offerings so close at hand.

Two weeks ago on October 4th, a head count showed that 109 people joined for a walk through portions of the MDC reservation and Webster Estate in Chestnut Hill.

This large turn-out proved a bit startling to the herd of nine deer and they put in a very brief appearance at the gates when their keeper Mr. Ralph Keating attempted to drive them down for an early meal so the children could see them.

Also because of the large turn-out, the Conservators eliminated most of the planned discussion, and the information gathered in preparation for the walks will be printed for distribution at a later date.

However, there were brief comments about the land use history from Conservator directors Mrs. Rita Barron and Mrs. Helen Heyn (who is also a Conservation Commission member); Mrs. Kathy Barton of the Boston College Dept. of Geology & Geophysics sketched the geology of the region; Mr. George Keller of the Planning Dept. distributed hand maps for orientation to the surroundings; and Mr. Arthur Southwick charmed everyone with his identifications of the many types of mushrooms to be found in these woods.

If Sunday's weather is completely unsuitable, the date for Edmands Park will be rescheduled. If the weather is questionable or if you want more information about th walks, please call Conservator Information chairman Mrs. Leon Barron (527-5214).

Basbas Warns Teens Of Drug Crack-Down

A letter directed to principals of Newton's senior and junior high schools from Mayor Monte G. Basbas in which he appealed for help in clearing school grounds and surrounding streets of litter, and in which he informed students of an imminent "crack-down" by Newton police on drugs was read to members of the Newton School Committee on Tuesday night by Supt. Aaron Fink.

In his letter Basbas declared, "would you please bring to your students' attention the fact that the Newton police are about to initiate an intensive drug crack-down in our city. This will not be a witch-hunt, but it will be an all out effort to clear from our community the pushers and sellers who are seeking to persuade our teens to experiment, and our Police Department is admirably trained at this point to handle this work."

The letter went on to state that 19 officers are graduates of the Federal Narcotics School; 11 are graduates of the State Police Narcotics School; six men have been graduated from the Attorney General's narcotics training programs, for a total of 36 men now trained and on duty in the community on the drug problem. "In addition, there is a continuing program in our Police Department in which each month two officers begin drug training in the State Police Narcotics school, while additional officers will be enrolled on a continuing basis in Federal Narcotics School."

Basbas added "our young people are better equipped to handle the problem, since it is a day-to-day reality for them. Each student's cooperation with school and police authorities may be the sole method of ensuring a healthy and sane adulthood for our Newton teens. No one wants to waste a life, there is too much for us to do for our fellow man — don't let our future go down the drain for a momentary high."

With regard to pollution Basbas asked for the aid of the student population to alleviate a growing problem. He said there is an increasing problem of residents — including students — using the public school grounds and adjacent streets for disposal of cans, bottles, trash and litter.

With regard to drug education the School Committee voted to waive the $15 registration fee for the drug education course which is part of the evening adult education program. The move was made to enable more residents of the city to take part in the course.

Supt. Aaron Fink, who asked the School Committee to drop the fee, reported that 15,000 brochures describing the adult education programs were sent to the city's residents. Three thousand people signed up for courses but only two people, one of them a teacher, enrolled in the drug education program, he said.

It was also reported that members of the School Committee have received from the Superintendent copies of plans for drug education programs in the schools.

Plan Newton Program For UN Day Oct. 24th

Newton Mayor Monte G. Basbas has appointed Jack D. P. Lichtenstein, his Administrative Assistant, as United Nations Day Chairman for Newton in this historic 25th Anniversary Year of the UN.

Mayor Basbas pointed out that this year's UN Day observance on October 24 will have special significance, as it will launch the beginning of a nationwide effort to seek ways of strengthening the United Nations.

Acting in response to an invitation by the National UN Day Chairman, Frederick Ehrman, Chairman of the Board of Lehman Brothers, the mayor cited President Nixon's declaration that the year's UN Day is more than merely a commemoration. "The 25th Anniversary of the founding of the world body provides us with an excellent opportunity to rededicate American support for the UN and to atmpt to make it more effective," the President has proclaimed.

In his letter to Mayor Basbas, Mr. Ehrman reiterated the President's contention that this October 24 should be a time to set goals for the coming years and realistically evaluate the UN's potential. "I hope we may count upon your assistance in responding to the President's leadership to make this UN Day a significant step toward fulfilling the United Nation's urgent purposes," Ehrman wrote.

In his appointment of Mr. Lichtenstein, Mayor Basbas joins with over 1000 top state and city officials across the Nation who are forming UN Day Committees following Mr. Ehrman's appeal. Mayor Basbas also called upon all citizens, voluntary organizations and education institutions to help guarantee an effective UN Day observance by cooperating to the fullest extent with Chairman Lichtenstein.

Mr. Lichtenstein, in accepting the Mayor's appointment, outlined plans for an observance that will take place on Friday, October 23, the day before the official celebration, and will consist of 8:30 a.m. ceremonies in the War Memorial Auditorium of Newton City Hall.

In implementing the UN Day plans for Newton, Mr. Lichtenstein will work in conjunction with the United Nations Association of the U.S.A. which is responsible for coordinating UN Day observance across the country.

Information about how individuals and local organizations can take part in this observance can be had by calling United Nations Association of Greater Boston, 120 Boylston Street, Boston (Telephone:426-8875) or from UNA-USA, 833 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017.

A New Shepherd

From a tiny village on the Azores' Island of St. Michael to the spiritual leadership of nearly 2,000,000 Catholics in the Archdiocese of Boston is a long distance whether measured by miles or in terms of human progress.

It has not been an easy road for Humberto Medeiros. It has been a road unmarked by the spectacular. Rather it has been a quiet highway for an humble man, dedicated to the spiritual and mundane welfare of his fellow man.

No one knows better than Archbishop Medeiros the awesome weight of the responsibilities of the office he now takes over. No one better appreciates the great contributions his predecessors have made to his church and to the well-being of a great part of New England, to the nation and to the world.

From one of the smallest of the Catholic dioceses in the United States he comes to the second largest. He picks up the scepter of one of the truly great churchmen of the Century.

He will have the support of the great new flock to which he has become shepherd. In his own way he has proved he deserves it.

We Face Expulsion

Congress has decided to hold up this nation's current dues to the International Labor Organization and that could be the first stop toward having the United States thrown out of this United Nations' agency.

Such a development, no doubt, would be a disgrace in the eyes of Pravda.

To remain as a member in good standing of this 120-member ILO we are expected to pay 25 per cent of its $30 million-plus annual budget. For the last fiscal year that added up to $6.2 million.

It isn't a case of a tight-fisted, skinflint policy by Congress. While the U.S. has been picking up a good part of the tab each year Russia has been using the ILO as a well-tuned sounding board for its propaganda.

While it might seem paradoxical to find Russia playing the role of an expert on labor questions on a world-wide level, the Soviet has been enjoying ILO meetings in Geneva.

Ideally, the ILO's purpose has been to bring together government, labor and management on pressing international labor and manpower problems; to provide governments with technical assistance to develop world labor standards.

President George Meany of the AFL-CIO is credited with helping to influence the recent congressional action. It's understandable that Mr. Meany would have some difficulty in seeing eye-to-eye with his Russian counterparts.

The State Department, weighing the matter from a diplomatic level, doesn't like the idea of our refusal to put the U.S. assessment on the line when it is due.

The average man on the street will find it difficult to understand why we should spend $6.2 million a year to help provide the Soviets with a handy forum from which to spout their propaganda on international labor.

As matters stand, the U.S. can be two years in arrears before we lose our voting rights in the ILO. After that, maybe we can find something else to do with that cash.

Law-Blessed Gambling

Financially hard-pressed big cities and States—and few escape that designation these days — will be watching New York City and the Empire State during the year ahead.

Both have gone into the gambling business in a big way. New York State has a lottery set up and you can purchase tickets at your favorite newsstand or at some of the snootiest stores. New York City is preparing to put illegal, off-track bookies out of business and rake in cash for the municipal treasury.

Neither the state nor the city succeeded in getting into gaming fields without beating back an abundance of shocked disapproval from the churches and from the steadfast, old-line moralists.

At this stage the responsible officials are not quite sure: (a) whether the financial returns will match the totals some optimists have forecast; and (b) whether their ventures will cause more headaches than they are worth.

Opponents of the New Hampshire state lottery not only presented arguments from a moral standpoint. They predicted the legalizing of gambling would be vulnerable to eventual racketeer manipulation and would not bring in the financial yield many enthusiasts predicted.

In six years the N.H. lottery has not been "taken over" by nefarious outsiders. However, its dollar return has not reached the volume predicted when it was legalized in 1964.

New York State costs for public education is a whopping $4 Billion a year. Its monthly lottery has been producing $25 to $29 Million-a-year. That's a lot of money but falls considerably short of all that is needed. A special "super lottery" with a $1 Million top prize resulted in a net of $7.5 million for education this year. While that disappointed some backers, they hoped resultant publicity would stimulate over-all future interest.

New York City frankly seeks to take over the lucrative off-track gambling from the racketeers. The very nature of the operation it is putting together lays it open to far greater risks than the states of New Hampshire and New York in the lottery field. Yet, it may succeed in building a racket-proof system.

Whatever the future of law-blessed gambling may be, however, the record to date offers evidence that it will not in the foreseeable future make taxes obsolete.

Pierson Makes Washington Report

Formal Evening Clothes Go to Peruvian Victims

After returning from a fact-finding trip to Peru, Wigmore A. Pierson of Newtonville travelled to Washington to make a report, at the State Department, to other members of the Peru Earthquake Voluntary Assistance Group.

Pierson made several recommendations to the representatives of thirty voluntary agencies which were at the meeting.

Among his recommendations were the following: "In the aftermath of future disasters, only money should be sent by the public to the appropriate agencies which can be used either to purchase ONLY those items immediately required and-or put directly into the affected nation's economy."

"A standing committee of on-going voluntary agencies should exist which could convene within one week of a disaster to discuss resources, logistics, publicity needed, and material or supplies needed in order to avert the kind of chaos which followed the Peru earthquake."

Pierson reported that during his travels throughout the devastated area he found that old clothes which had been forwarded to Peru had caused a great many problems.

Shipping costs often exceeded the value of the clothing shipped, hundreds of women in the United States colony spent countless hours sorting clothes and discarding at least 25 percent because they were threadworn with age, unusable by the Peruvians due to cultural and geographical differences (i.e. formal evening clothes, one shoe of a pair, wrong climate clothes, etc.) and much time was lost in this manner which could have been better utilized by everyone working to help Peru.

While the Peru Earthquake Voluntary Assistance Group was meeting at the State Department, Mrs. Nixon addressed the group.

She narrated a film about her June trip to Peru, and along with Mrs. William P. Rogers, wife of the Secretary of State, presented each group member with a Certificate of Appreciation for his help with Peru Relief.

Pierson concluded his report by expressing the hope, "that the standing agencies have learned much from his experience and that future efforts after other natural disasters will be more effective and more efficient both in terms of utilization of manpower and in the kinds of aid which is sent to the stricken people."

- POLITICAL HIGHLIGHTS -

This will not really be a debate in the accepted sense.

But the televised encounter will afford an opportunity for the undecided voters to see the Governor and the Boston Mayor together, to watch how they handle themselves, to hear what they have to say and possibly to make a choice between them.

Both Governor Sargent and Mayor White project well on television although they have different styles. Both are skilled politicians. They are not campaigners who are disposed to attack their opponents although the pressure of their fight may be starting to wear on them.

The stands they have taken and the things they have done in their respective service as Governor and Mayor of the capital city presumably will be the subject of some of the questions which will be put to them. It should be worth while tuning them in on Friday night.

Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn Seen in Big Lead Over Conn

Democratic Massachusetts has chosen Republican Attorneys General in six of the last eight state elections.

Edward J. McCormack was the last Democrat elected by the voters to the office. He was the victor in the 1958 and 1960 elections, winning over Christian A. Herter, Jr., in 1958.

Elliot L. Richardson was elected in 1966, Edward W. Brooke in 1964 and 1962 and the late George Fingold in 1956, 1954 and 1952.

But the custom of picking Republican Attorneys General in the Bay State is likely to come to an abrupt halt in the Nov. 3 election.

A former Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Quinn was elected Attorney General by the Legislature when Elliot Richardson resigned from the office to become second man in the State Department. Now, of course, Richardson is Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Some political observers speculated before the primary as to whether Quinn was well known throughout the Commonwealth since he had never previously made a state-wide run.

The primary returns seemed to answer that question.

Attorney General Quinn received only 6000 fewer votes than did Senator Edward M. Kennedy. He polled a substantially bigger vote than did State Auditor Thaddeus Buczko, State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane or Secretary of State John F. X. Davoren.

All five were unopposed in the Democratic primary. The votes they received were of a so-called complimentary nature.

Their official primary vote totals were 517,445 for Ted Kennedy, 511,692 for Quinn, 490,007 for Buczko, 475,332 for Crane and 471,420 for Davoren.

Quinn has not been a spectacular or headline-seeking Attorney General, but the poll returns indicate that a majority of the people approve of the way he has done his job.

2-Point Vietnam Question Listed on Election Ballot

Massachusetts voters will have an opportunity—after a fashion — on election day to record themselves in the privacy of their polling booths on how they believe the war in Vietnam should be ended.

Their vote will have no legal standing. It probably will have no impact upon President Nixon or his military advisors.

But it should influence the Bay State's two U.S. Senators and 12 Congressmen. A Congressman who does not pay attention to the public sentiment in his district is not likely to last long on Capitol Hill.

The Vietnam question will be number 5 on the ballot. It will be divided into three sections. The voter will pick the section which most clearly reflects his or her views.

Section No. 1 asks if the war in Vietnam should be settled by a military victory.

Section No. 2 asks if the United States should withdraw its troops "in accordance with a planned schedule."

Section No. 3 asks if our forces in Vietnam should be withdrawn "immediately."

What this three-way question does is set the stage for a vote in Massachusetts on President Nixon's policies in Vietnam.

It is unlikely that there will be any substantial public support for Section No. 1. Most people now realize that a military victory in the accepted sense cannot be achieved in Vietnam. The war there will either be ended at the negotiating table, continue indefinitely or gradually fade away.

A Yes-vote on Section No. 2, in effect, would support President Nixon's policy of a planned and phased withdrawal.

A Yes-vote on Section No. 3 would favor an immediate troop withdrawal from Vietnam. That is what is advocated by the doves and by many liberals. It was urged in one of the planks in the platform adopted at the Democratic State Convention.

Voters should decide before election day how they wish to record themselves on this three-part question. A slow-down would be caused at the polling places if the voters wait until they see the question on their ballots or voting machines before making up their minds.

Another issue to which the voters should begin to give some thought will be contained in Question No. 3 on the ballot which asks if the voting age in Massachusetts should be lowered from 21 to 19.

This question will become meaningless if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds the validity of the action by Congress in reducing the voting age to 18. It will have significance if the highest court rules that Congress acted illegally.

The issue is a simple one. Do you think a 19 or 20-year-old boy or girl should be given the right to vote?

Bitter Feeling Now in Open In Philbin - Drinan Battle

Political reporters, writing from Washington after the Sept. 15 primary, pointed out that Massachusetts would lose much of its political clout on Capitol Hill with the departure of House Speaker John W. McCormack and Congressman Philip J. Philbin from the nation's capital.

THE FIREMAN

Ringing Bells Sought To Aid Blind Walkers

As a benefit for blind pedestrians, the Newton Traffic Commission has recommended that ringing bells be installed on the red and yellow walk lights at Walnut St. and Washington St. in Newtonville Square.

The suggestion was approved after discussion of the proposal made by Milton Diamond, president of the Newton Lions Club.

Now the idea mus gain final approval of the Board of Aldermen which has the final say on the Traffic Commission recommendation.

In other business the commission voted to deny the request that Kimball Terrace be closed to traffic.

Kimball Terrace is near the new high school construction site in Newtonville and the last three homes on the road have already been razed to make way for a temporary parking lot and eventually for a portion of the athleti facilities.

Petitioners had asked that a fence be constructed from 16 Kimball Terr. to Elm Rd. and that entrances to the parking lot be on Elm Rd. only.

Traffic Commissioners advised instead that enforcement of existing parking bans be asked of the police department.

The commission also recommended denial of the request of Aldermen Alan S. arkin (Ward 8) and Michael Lipof (Ward 6) that the eacon St. entrance to the Newton Centre municipal parking lot be cthanged to an exit only.

They recommended also that left turns into the lot from eastbound Beacon St. traffic, and out of the lot onto Beacon St. be prohibited.

Ten on Board Of B'nai B'rith

Ten Newton residents have been elected to serve on the New England Regional Board of the Anti - Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

They are Harry Finn, Michael Kaplan, Sidney Simons, Mrs. George Snyder, and Dr. Arnold Vetstein, all of Newton; also George Glass of Waban; and Ernest H. Robinson and Sidney M. Zeitlin of Chestnut Hill.

'Good Neighbor Night' To Be Brotherhood Event On Monday

One of the year's highlighted events for Brotherhood Temple Mishkan Tefila has been announced by William B. Nathanson, President, and Edward L. Kandib, Executive Vice - President, and General Chairman: "THE 11th ANNUAL GOOD NEIGHBOR NIGHT."

This inspiring event will be held on Monday, October 19th, 1970, at the Temple Social Hall, 300 Hammond Pond Parkway, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

The theme for this year's program is: "LASTING TRUTH IN A WORLD OF CHANGE."

The very first Annual Good Neighbor Night of Brotherhood Temple Mishkan Tefla was held in October of 1960 and with the initiation of this program, the Brotherhood wrote a page in Community and Temple history.

With each successive year's program, notably distinguished, and stimulating guest speakers have been presented, along with an impressive suite of prominent civic and educational leaders as head-table guest.

Brotherhood Temple Mishkan Tefila again looks forward with pride and anticipation, to the still further advancement of progressive civic thought, so effectively motivated by this program.

This year's program will honor three main speakers:

The Reverend George H. Williams, Hollis Professor of Divinity at Harvard University; The Reverend Edward H. Flannery, Faculty member at Seton Hall University, and Executive Secretary of the Secretariat For Catholic - Jewish Relations; and Dr. Israel J. Kazis, Rabbi Temple Mishkan Tefila.

Professor Williams was ordained to the ministry in 1940. He served as assistant minister at the Church of the Christian Union in Rockford, Illinois. He served on the faculties of the Starr King School for the Ministry and at the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, California from 1941 to 1947.

In 1947, he came to Harvard and was successively lecturer, associate professor, and Winn Professor of Ecclesiastical History before being named Hollis Professor in 1963. He was Acting Dean of the Divinity School from 1953 to 1955.

Professor Williams is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Mediaeval Academy of America, and the Societe Eruopeenne de Culture. He is a prolific writer and, from 1948 through 1969 has authored a considerable number of books which deal with religious education, Christology, Catholic Ecumenism etc.

He is on the editorial boards of Harvard Theological Review, Church History, Greek Roman and Byzantine Studies, Studies in Romanticism, Colloquy, and Mennonite Quarterly Review.

Father Flannery has figured prominently as an exponent of Catholic social thought and action and in particular in the field of Jewish - Christian dialogue which he sees as presenting special problems for the ecumenist because of an embittered past.

In his talks he goes into the historic past to find the roots of Jewish - Christian troubles discusses the content and import of the Vatican Council's Declaration on the Jews, outlines what is being done today to implement it, and presents a broad scope of future possibilities.

His book, The Anguish of the Jews: 23 Centures of Anti - Semitism (New York: Macmillan, 1965), is the first history of anti - Semitism by a Catholic priest. It has received six awards since its publication, and is now being translated into French and Spanish. A Portuguese edition has recently come off the press.

The Angulsh of the Jews expresses Father Flannery's belief that the chief stumbling block separating Christians and Jews is not only the fact of anti - Semitism but Christians' ignorance of what has happened to Jews in history.

He is a member of the national board of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and other societies and organizations.

In the words of Dr. Israel J. Kazis: "In an effort to create a climate of better understanding among citizens of different faiths, the Brotherhood has been sponsoring an annual Good Neighbor Night which has served as an effective medium for presenting the views of distinguished religious leaders on the great issues confronting the American people in our time.

"This project represents a contribution to the enhancement of the democratic spirit in our community in that it gives concrete expression to a principle basic to the American way of life, namely, unity in the midst of diversity."

Dr. Kazis studied at Harvard University where he received the A.B. and Ph.D. degrees. He is also a graduate of the Hebrew Teachers College of Boston with the degree of Bachelor of Jewish Education.

He was ordained at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in 1940, from which institution he also received the M.H.L. degree. Dr. Kazis was called to Temple Mishkan in 1946. He is at present serving as their Rabbi.

Dr. Kazis served as President of the New England Region of the Rabbinical Assembly of America; member of the Committee on Jewish Law and Standards of the Rabbinical Assembly; member of the Executive Council of the Rabbinical Assembly; President of the Massachusetts Board of Rabbis; member of the Committee for the Study of Juvenile Delinquency in Massachusetts; member of the Task Force of The United Fund Campaign of Greater Boston.

This spectacular occasion has fast become a milestone in the field of community and civic relations history. In 1968, Brotherhood Mishkan Tefila was awarded first prize for "BEST PROGRAM OF THE YEAR" by both the New England Region and the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs. Again, at its annual Convention in June, this year, the National Federation again presented to Brotherhood Mishkan Tefila its:

1970 BRONZE TORCH AWARD
for
"BEST SINGLE PROGRAM OF THE YEAR"

In last year's "Good Neighbor Night," special honors were bestowed upon His Eminence, Richard Cardinal Cushing.

For reservations, contact Herbert Lerman, ticket chairman, at his telephone: 332-7245 or, the Temple office 332-7770.

Beauty Care Today

By Edgar of RONALD COIFFEURS

(Hair Color and Skin Tone)

How may hair color best be chosen?

Lighter or darker hair color selection depends on the wearer's skin tones. The correct choice can do wonders for your complexion.

The color and hue of your hair will complement your complexion.

We will be happy to help you select a "new" color for your hair.

Senator Hatfield Endorses McGlennon For Congress

UNITED STATES SENATE
WASHINGTON

October 9, 1970

Mr. John McGlennon
1250 Lowell Road
Concord, Massachusetts

Dear John:

I am pleased to add my voice to those of Ed Brooke, John Volpe, Elliot Richardson and many others here in Washington who strongly endorse John McGlennon for Congress from the Third Massachusetts District.

I do this for I believe that you are totally dedicated to stopping the killing in Vietnam at the earliest possible moment.

Your support of the concept of establishing a specific timetable for total withdrawal of American troops as a way of breaking the Paris deadlock is important to me and I believe we could work together to achieve our common goal.

Kindest regards,

Sincerely,

Mark O. Hatfield
United States Senator

thetic atmosphere of the school.

"Indeed, one of the major purposes is to help students prepare for the greater freedoms that modern society now offers them."

He also said the program "will improve the morale of the students and faculty," and that it will lead to greater use of the school's facilities such as laboratories, library, etc., and greater use of community resources and materials.

In relating the background to the proposal, Mechem said that "the history of the last ten years in American society is terribly complex, with developments relating to education and adolescence even more complicated.

"I will not try to review all of that here, but new attitudes towards the rights, privileges, and responsibilities of teenagers, as spelled out in legal decisions involving clothes, freedom of speech, political activity, etc. must be considered as a backdrop against which this recommendation is presented."

He also noted that "the high school today offers a range of programs unimagined ten years ago. Many of these are not textbook oriented, involving projects, work done away from school, visits to local and area libraries, etc. Traditional study halls are not helpful in performing this kind of work."

Other reasons cited by Mechem for the proposal were:

"Students are not coming to the high school prepared to effectively use their study hall time. There are a variety of reasons for this which I will not go into here."

"Pressures (both good and bad) upon today's youth lead to a resistance to arbitrary restrictions of any kind."

"The traditional restrictions of the school contrast more sharply every day to life outside our school."

"More and more of our students are involved in important outside activities which have great educational value (not necessarily in the traditional sense). These include jobs, political activity, activities such as Freeport, church groups, etc."

Mechem also reported that plans are being made for the free time including mini-courses or small group sessions in various fields directed by students or teachers, tutoring and athletics.

The evaluation of the experiment will try to keep a check to insure no fall-off of grades or attendance, Mechem said.

The principal also noted that the idea originated in a student colloquim during the 1968-69 school year.

School Committeeman Alvin Mandell, who cast the dissenting vote, expressed fears concerning the increase in traffic in the area and the impact on the neighborhood and local merchants. He also said such a privilege should be a reward for achievement of good grades.

Superintendent Aaron Fink responded that education is not a system of reward and punishment and "you can't necessarily equate a student's grade average with his sense of responsibility." "Many C students are working to their capacity and are good citizens," he added.

The program will require approval of the State Dept. of Education to obtain a waiver of the specified number of hours in which a student is supposed to be within the school.

Torturing Dogs To Test Football Headgear!

A report entitled "Evaluation of the Protective Characteristics of Helmets in Sports" (Journal of Trauma, May 1964) tells how dogs weighing between 22 and 60 pounds were subjected by university doctors and scientists to repeated and severe blows on the head by a rotary hammer driven by compressed air in a study of protection afforded football players by helmets.

The experimenters reported that the merciless blows were repeated at ten to twenty minute intervals. One dog was stated to have received 14 blows.

Nembutal, a hypnotic or tranquilizer — not an anaesthetic — was used. In any case, imagine the condition of these pathetic victims of cruelty following their ordeal. And judge for yourselves the kind of men who would commit such atrocities.

This report may be checked and read in full detail at the Countway Medical Library, 10 Shattuck St. in Boston, and doubtless elsewhere.

Gaynor Proposes State Aid Given For Education

Robert Gaynor, an attorney - at - law, 109 Cabot Street, Newton candidate for representative from Wards 1, 2, 3, and 7 is waging a vigorous campaign for the House of Representatives.

He states that he favors a flat grant system of aid to cities and towns. He further states that it is impossible to provide the kind of quality, education needed through the real estate tax revenues; Federal and State funding are required. Local control is as important to education as money.

Mr. Gaynor proposes that only through a flat grant system can we relieve the burden over our over - taxed homeowners and tenants while at the same time ensuring parents that their children are getting the best possible education.

Women Voters 23rd Annual House Tour On October 24

The Boston League of Women Voters will present its 23rd annual house tour on Saturday, October 24, from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. The sea which stimulated Boston's commercial ventures is now inspiring new uses for old waterfront warehouses and factories, and this year's tour contrasts waterfront buildings full of history and antiques with those reconstructed with an eye to the future.

In addition to viewing a number of fascinating apartments, this year's tour participants will be able to discuss waterfront redevelopment plans with representatives of the Boston Redevelopment Authority and the Boston Waterfront Residents' Association.

Tickets for the tour are available from the League office, 453 Washington Street, Boston (542-5677); and at the Codman Company, William F. Otis, Inc., and Street and Company, Realtors, Boston offices. On the day of the tour, tickets will be available at 453 Washington St. and at Carl Koch and Associates, Inc., 36 Lewis Wharf.

Apartments on the tour include four on Commercial Wharf: that of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Taylor, who have decorated with the likes of a scavenged iron railing for a room divider and a rope swing hanging from the 30-foot cathedral ceiling; Mrs. Judith Monnell's which features a fascinating collection of personal treasures like amber whale-oil lamps and a desk and chair made by her great-great- grandfather; Mr. Arthur A. Swanson's large duplex with 3000 square feet of wall-to-wall carpeting and a loft built into the living area; and a sample condominium above Carl Koch and Associates, Inc. In Mr. Koch's office, which also will be open for the tour, may be seen a model of what he would like to see done with Lewis Wharf and the rest of the waterfront.

Across the street on Commercial Wharf West is the large studio apartment of Mr. Stanley Anderson where living areas are set off by stained glass windows salvaged from the old Brookline City Hall.

A number of apartments in the renovated Prince Spaghetti factory will be open. They include the urbane dwelling of Mr. Theodore Eisenstadt, which features ship models of his own construction; the penthouse of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Notter, Jr., filled with warm yellows, oranges and browns which set off pristine white walls; the duplex of Mr. Neil A. Parker, simply furnished to make maximum use of space; Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dellaria's modern aerie with Mediterranean flavor; and Mr. and Mrs. Jack M. Roberts's apartment, filled with treasures from around the world and decorated in a traditional manner with an 18th century flavor.

Across the street Mr. and Mrs. Gerard R. Cugini have renovated a building dating back to 1844 into offices and a triplex apartment. The building is particularly interesting because of uses of textures and spaces and by the furniture, much of which was designed by Mr. Cugini. This exhilarating yet serene apartment is a joyous blend of magnificent design and harmonious life style.

The apartment-office of Mr. Moritz Bergmeyer on Fulton Street was renovated from an old brick and timber warehouse. The sandblasted bricks and beams, open and defined spaces, and various textures provide interesting contrast to the simple lines of the core, where may be seen the original granite blocks which are the building's foundations.

Striking contrast to this modern decoration is found in the duplex of Mr. Robert Blanchard and Mr. Francisco Monnar, located on Long Wharf above their shop, the Green Dolphin. Although renovation has taken place, Mr. Monnar and Mr. Blanchard have kept the building's old charm with numerous antiques and knick-knacks.

Another contrast, also on Long Wharf, is provided by the dazzling studio apartment of M. A. Rose, which shows off the robustness of the 18th century building yet is feminized by sophisticated use of hanging plants and ingenious dividing of airy spaces.

Slightly separated from the other apartments by both distance and environment is the completely renovated North End bow-front home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Giglio. Their duplex and the apartments below will be open for the tour. All feature sculptured white plaster walls and ceilings and parquet floors.

Finally, the India Wharf Rats, "the most blue of all blooded clubs," which has moved to Long Wharf, will be open. It is a must for all sentimental Bostonians.

This year's tour chairman is Mrs. William Sack. Her committee includes Miss Susan Bender, Mrs. Daniel Hardenbergh, Mrs. Stephen Kunian, Mrs. Margaret Morcom, Mrs. Peter Nessen, Mrs. Anne Ryle, and Miss Candy Sullivan.

NEWTON WORKERS — Women's Committee of New England Villages for Retarded Adults make final arrangements for Telethon Day, Sunday, Oct. 18. Funds raised will help support the first Village in Pembroke, Mass. This will be a new way of life for Mentally Retarded Adults through community working and living. Left to right are: Mrs. Irving Hackmeyer, Mrs. Sam Kaitz, Mrs. Leonard Sheingold, all of Newton.

Mrs. Capron brought a guest, Mrs. Richard B. Capron of Brookline, her new daughter - in - law, which is quite interesting to this very much mother - daughter club.

Chairman, Mrs. Merrill opened the meeting after the social hour, and notice was taken of the new - style club bulletin put out by Mrs. Theodore A. Pearson, more economical and concise.

Mrs. Pearson read a short article on modern music; Mrs. Leone spoke about the 90th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Seyi Ozawa of Japan conducting again this year; and Mrs. Merrill announced that the theme of the music committee this year will be Beethoven, as it is the 200th anniversary of Beethoven. A history of symphony and what it means was presented, with notation that Mozart and Beethoven were best known for their symphonies and compositions.

Of Beethoven's nine symphonies, the Committee listened to the first that afternoon. It was also stressed that he was the first composer to use a chorus with instruments.

Announcement was made of the American Home Luncheon to be held at the Clubhouse at 1280 Centre St. on Monday, Oct. 19 with Mrs. Victor D. Baer and Mrs. William E. Bailey as Co-chairmen. Reservations should be made immediately to Mrs. William E. Bailey at 244-0240.

South Jayvees Bomb Rindge In 32-0 Grid Win

Halfback Steve Bucavales scored two touchdowns on runs of 30 and eight yards to propel the Newton South jv football team to a 32-0 demolition of Rindge Tech, last week.

Bucavales opened the scoring in the first quarter with his long run and halfback Paul Nissen charged over for the two-point conversion to give South a quick 8-0 lead.

The score stayed that way through the half. In the third period South erupted for 16 more points to ice the contest. Bucavales scored again and Nissen followed with another conversion run.

Fullback Andy Moynihan notched the third TD in the third quarter and quarterback Ned Moan went over on a seven-yard scamper in the final quarter to finish off the scoring.

The jv is 1-1.

THROUGH THE HOLE FOR A GAIN—Newton's Mark Lennon took advantage of a hole opened in the Weymouth North line and scampered through it for a 7-yard gain as his team chalked up a 26 0 shut-out win to put the Tigers back in the victory column. (Bob Worden Photo)

Newton High Back In Winner's Circle With 26-0 Weymouth Win

By Bob Worden

Newton High returned to the winner's circle as they blanked Weymouth North 26 to 0. The Tigers reverting back to the two platoon system, dumped North for their fourth loss of the season.

Coach Jim Ronayne was pleased with the performances of the many Juniors who saw action. Junior John Connolly, starting in the fullback slot, moving Kevin Carver to half back, played an outstanding game, his longest run went for 23 yards.

Paul Grillo replaced Jim Doolin at quarterback in the first half, hoping to rejuvenate a weak Tiger passing attack. Grillo led the Black and Orange in the opening series of plays, which saw Carver finish off an 83 yard drive with a six yard sprint around end.

The Tigers consumed a great deal of time in that drive, eating up 8 min. and 6 seconds, in which Newton posted 5 first downs.

Grillo connected with Mark Herendeen on the bomb, midway through the second period, setting the stage for the Tigers second score. Mark Lennon charged through one of the many huge gaping holes opened by the offensive line, traveling nine yards for the score.

The Tigers did not sit on their 13 point cushion. Doolin came off the bench in the third period and utilized his excellent speed. At 1:11 he found pay dirt, sprinting 16 yards on a bootleg around left end. Haywood kicked a low line drive through the uprights to boost Newtons advantage to 20.

The Tiger defense yielded their first first down at 4:35 of the third period, as they played brilliant football, especially after last weeks shellacking by powerful Brockton.

Doolin closed out the scoring with a late fourth touchdown. He took the ball in himself from the three yard line. Haywoods extra point was blocked. The final score Newton 26, Weymouth North 0.

Sideline Comments: The warm holiday afternoon confrontation was very anti climactive, as almost everyone had their marbles on Newton. After next Saturday, the pace will pick up and tension will mount as Newton will face key oppenents, Arlington and Medford follow next weeks Weymouth South game. And after that the Tigers meet Waltham and Brookline.

Its make it or break it time . . . Weymouth North had an excellent crowd on hand considering the City now has two teams. Rumors from the Newton High Training room has it that tackle Dan Bordon recovering from a knee injury may see action against Arlington.

Next Saturday, Newon vs Weymouth South at Dickinson Stadium, starting time 1:30

NAA Lions Rebound To Wrap Up St. Anthony's Eagles by 34 - 14

The Newton Athletic Association Lions Pop Warner Football team successfully rebounded from their only defeat at Framingham to beat St. Anthony's Eagles of Everett 34-14 at Everett Stadium Sunday.

Halfback Kevin Hoban paced the attack scoring 20 points and rushing for 144 yards. It was Everett, however, that scored first.

After halting Newton's first drive, Everett took over on their own eleven and on two long pass plays picked up six points.

The touchdown came on a Doug Saute to Terry Schrepfer pass play of 60 yards. Halfback Tom Manetta rushed the points and the Eagles led 8-0.

Rick Paglia ran the ensuing kick off back to mid-field. Two plays later halfback Kevin Hoban swept end for a 35 yd. touchdown. The Lions got two chances at the conversion due to a procedure call against Everett. Halfback John Vizakis went in for two behind Capt. Dennis Camerons trap block, Kicker Rick Paglia boomed the next kickoff to the Everett five where Terry Schrepfer took it and retreated to the end zone where Alan Flynn nailed him for a two point safety and a 10-8 Newton lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Newton slashed its way through the Everett middle and scored in for plays with Hoban going in from the seven behind left guard Greg Moans block. John Vizakis rushed the points and Newton led 18-8.

Newton's final scoring in the half came when fullback Jim Vizakis went 7 yards off-tackle behind David Prince, Hoban and Jack Ryan blocks. Hoban rushed the conversion and the Lions took a 28-8 lead at intermission.

The rest of the scoring for both teams came in the fourth period. Quarterback Bob Kinsella pitched to Hoban who went 75 yards for Newton's last score. Kinsella rushed the points. Quarterback Doug Saule hit Manetta for Everett's final score.

Linebacker Jim Vizakis led all tacklers with 9. Matt Sabetti had 6 along with Middle-guard and chief stalwart Ron Collins.

Newton's secondary proved vunerable to the pass against which allowed both Everett touchdowns.

Next Sunday the Lions will be home against the Wellesley Tornadoes at the Newton Highlands Playground.

Izen Tallies Only Goal In South Win 1-0

Rich Izen tallied the games only goal as Newton South squeaked past Acton-Boxboro Regional High, 1-0, last week, to remain unbeaten in Dual County League play after four games.

The Lions, now 3-0-1 in the league and 3-1-1 overall won only two games all season in 1969.

Dave Cohen, Souths exceptional goaltender posted his first shut-out of the year with his usual sensational effort. Last year he was a second-team all-suburban selection.

Newton South takes on undefeated perennial league champ Lincoln-Sudbury this week in what shapes up as one of the seasons most important contests. Lincolns netminder Mark Beaton is unscored upon this year. South also faces Bedford for the second time this season. The Lions topped Bedford 4-1 on opening day.

Is Freshman In Art

Susan Jane Birnbaum of 60 Solon St., Newton, a 1970 graduate of Newton South High School, has been admitted to the freshman class of the Philadelphia College of Art, a four-year degree-granting institution preparing artists and designers for careers in business, industry, education and the fine arts.

Cross-Country Tigers Drop Two; Seen As Slight Title Contenders

For the first time in anybody's memory Newton High has lost two cross - country meets early in a season.

The perennial Suburban League champs, dethroned by Brockton last fall, have been beaten twice already in five meets, this year, and chances are slim that the Tigers will regain their Suburban title.

Newton has conquered Weymouth North, 23-38, Weymouth South, 27-30, and Waltham, 24-32. However, the harriers were nipped by Arlington, 27-28 and slaughtered by Brockton 20-43.

The only word for Tiger Jay Sidman, thus far, however, is fantastic. The senior co-captain is undefeated and is dominating the league.

The diminutive harrier, ninth in Division I of the state meet in 1969 appears to have a good shot at the individual crown this fall.

Sidman opened his season in 90 degree heat on the Newton home 2.6 mile course. He romped to a 32-second victory over Weymouth North with an excellent early - season time of 13:30. He followed with a 19-second 12:25 - 12:44 win over Arlington star Dave Baldwin.

The race covered 2.4 miles. Sidman notched his third triumphs at Weymouth South, the Suburban League's latest entrant by a 12-second margin.

The fourth meet was the biggest race of Disman's career. He fulfilled his long - time ambition to crack the Newton course record. Sidman sprinted a 13:04 timing to blast the old standard of 3:10. He won the race by over a minute. He followed with another big win, erasing the entire heralded Brockton team in 12:35 on the Shoe Citians own 2.6 mile course.

The Arlington race was a tough meet to lose. Fred Puddister edged Ed Coan for eighth place and the deciding point.

Newton was just out - classed versus Brockton. Brockton, whose three - time New England cross - country reign was interrupted in 1969 is still four - time defending state division titlist and seem ready to make a run for their old NE crown again. Against Newton the red and black annexed places two through ten with top man Don McCarthy only two seconds behind Sidman.

Co-captain Steve Caggiano ran well for two meets but was then injured and has been out of action ever since. Other top performers for the Tigers have been Coan, Ken Gorfinkle, John Boates, and sophomore Peter Wrenn, with a 14:15 best on the home course.

Pottey Stars Once Again As South Suffers Sixth Defeat

Chuck Pottey easily outran all opposition and turned in the second fastest timing of his career on the home Mt. Ida Junior College course, but the final outcome was the same as Newton South went down to its sixth straignt defeat.

Pottey crossed the finish line in 13:31, 28 seconds ahead of second - place, but South's next finisher, captain Mike LeBlanc was seventh in 14:44. Despite Pottey's top finishes, South has little or no back-up help and seems doomed to a hopeless season unlesse som bright change suddenly occurs.

Matt Williams ran ninth in 15:09, his second fastest clocking ever and best by far this year. Sophomore John Mason and junior Dave Ress were the other point-scorers in 12th and 14th, respectively.

Howie Frutkoff ran a tough, gutsy race, but lost out on finishing kick power to place third in the jv meet in 16:11. South was toppled again, 18-39, as Mike Pottey (Chuck's younger brother), seventh in 16:34, was the next Lion finisher. Pete Harvey, eighth, Mike Cogan, ninth, and Charley Horyoka, 12th were the other South placers.

LONG-HAIRED GROUP SOUGHT IN CALIF. MASS SLAYING

POLICE in Santa Cruz, Calif., disclosed Wednesday they were searching for two or three long-haired young people, one a woman, as suspects in the mass killings of Dr. Victor M. Ohta and four other persons. Santa Cruz County Sheriff Douglas James said the suspects, whom he described as "long-haired people in the early 20s," were seeen north of Santa Cruz Tuesday near a station wagon taken from Ohta's hilltop mansion. James also disclosed that the 47-year-old doctor was shot three times — not twice as believed earlier — with a 38 caliber pistol. It also was learned the slayers killed the family cat with a shot in the back of the head. The station wagon was believed used to escape from the blazing home Monday night after Ohta, his wife Virginia, 41, their two young sons and a secretary were bound, blind folded and shot to death, and left in the swimming pool as their house was set afire. James said the suspects were seen at a campsite in the Bonny Doon area, 15 miles from the scene of the killings, and near the green and brown Oldsmobile station wagon taken from the Ohta mansion. The station wagon was later driven into a railroad tunnel, set afire and abandoned. It remained hidden until a freight train came through the tunnel and smashed into it. James said officers found three separate sets of "barefoot footprints" about 50 yards down a hillside from the tunnel near a river. Sheriff officers said location of the railroad would not have been known to anyone unfamiliar to the area. "You would have to know where that track was to take the car there," said a sheriff's assistant.

6 SOLDIERS SAY THEY DRAFTED PHONY STORY OF HEROISM

THE HOUSE Armed Services Committee disclosed charges by six enlisted soldiers that they were ordered to draft a fictitious account of heroism by an Army general so he could receive two of the nation's highest decorations for valor. "Our task was only to formulate the basic paperwork from thin air," the six wrote the committee chairman, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., in a letter. "We were required to prepare a descriptive narrative of his supposed acts of valor, a citation for these imaginary acts, and to have this fraudulent document in such form as to be acceptable and approvable . . ." The Defense Department had no immediate comment. The soldiers said they were ordered to prepare documents to substantiate the award of the Silver Star and the Distinguished Flying Cross to Brig. Gen. E. P. Forrester for heroism in Cambodia. At the time, Forrester was assistant commander of the 1st Calvary Division with headquarters north of Saigon.

CANADIAN KIDNAP PHONE CALLS TERMED HOAX

MONTREAL POLICE dismissed as an apparent hoax telephone calls Wednesday that the Quebec Liberation Front might be willing to release British diplomat James R. Cross. But the government kept ready machinery to whisk his kidnapers to Cuba if a deal can be made for his life. Quebec Provincial Police Inspector J. R. Melancon said authorities "doubt the authenticity of the calls, but the investigation is continuing." The government has been poised for five days to fly the kidnappers to Cuba. The Fidel Castro regime has agreed to provide sanctuary to the terrorists provided the FLQ releases Cross unharmed. The telephone caller said the FLQ would communicate again with the police, presumably to accept or reject the government's offer to trade Cross for the abductors' freedom.

HAVERHILL POLICE QUIZ 30 YOUTHS IN REPORTED BOMB PLOT

POLICE in Haverhill said they hope to finish questioning the rest of 30 youths today in connection with a reported bomb plot, Chief William Ross said Wednesday. Three youths have been arrested and some of those questioned have been cleared in the alleged plot, Ross said. Other arrests are expected, the chief indicated. Twenty-one bombs, all with the power of a hand grenade, were found during the weekend. Two — two man teams are working in double shifts in an effort to uncover other possible bomb chances in the city of 43,000 near the New Hampshire border, he said. Police came across the potential plot, which included blowing up Haverhill High School and police headquarters, according to Ross, while investigating reported threats made against school officials who refused permission to distribute an underground newspaper on high school grounds.

State Take-Over Of Newton Jr. College Gets Approval

By SHIRLEY GOLDWYN

The Newton School Committee on Monday night approved a far-reaching proposal that Newton Junior College be accepted into the state system of community colleges and become the nucleus of a regional community college that would serve several communities, primarily Newton, Brookline, certain sections of Boston, Dedham, Needham, Wellesley, Weston, Waltham and Watertown.

The Committee also voted unanimously to instruct the Superintendent of Schools and the President of the Junior College to take immediate steps to implement the resolution.

In addition, the School Committee requested the Board of Aldermen through Mayor Monte G. Basbas to make available a suitable site for the proposed regional community college.

In a 28-page memorandum to the School Committee from Newton Junior College President Charles W. Dudley in which the future of the college was discussed, Dudley said that "if and when all state criteria are met, the possibility exists for an expeditious, almost immediate transfer to the state system."

At a meeting with representatives of the Massachusetts Board of Regional Community Colleges, Dudley declared, the crucial issue was pointed out as a permanent land site, particularly if the proposed college is to be located in Newton.

A land area of 50 acres was defined as a minimum requirement, though the way seemed to be left open for a consideration of imaginative proposals on a lesser site. "The possibility of 'air rights' was discussed — and appeared intriguing," Dudley stated in his report.

Annual Hallowe'en Festival Oct. 30th

Newton's young people will observe Halloween on Friday, October 30th, rather than Saturday, October 31st, according to the Newton Recreation Department, sponsors of the annual city-wide celebration.

The Friday date was selected because elementary schools traditionally have their Halloween parties for the younger grades during regular school hours.

Mrs. Robert G. Toher, program chairman for the Halloween observance, reports that Mrs. Robert L. Berk, Building Chairman for the Peirce School, is the first to announce program plans.

According to Mrs. Berk they expect 211 children from Kindergarten through Grade 3 to attend the partis from 2:30 p.m. to 4:15 p.m.

All classes will march into the auditorium and parade up and down the aisles to show off their costumes. A guitarist and vocalist will entertain after which the children will return to their classrooms for games and refreshments.

You can stop time in its flight and get back a whole hour the law took away from you last April next Sunday (Oct. 25).

It's a simple operation.

Officially the change becomes effective at 2 a.m. Forget the turnback and you'll find yourself out of step with most folks on Sunday morning besides depriving yourself of an extra hour of sleep.

Mayor White's Hopes Hinge On Strong Finishing Surge

Boston Mayor Kevin H. White's hopes of achieving election as the next Governor of Massachusetts probably depend on his ability to leave the hospital next week and campaign during the final few days before the election.

White's hospitalization attracted more public attention and received more publicity on television and in the newspapers than almost anything he could have said or done in the normal course of his campaign.

Nevertheless, polls and surveys indicate that White has been handicapped by the unfortunate interruption in his campaign. Other Democratic figures, including Senator Edward M. Kennedy, have tried to fill the breach caused by his illness but haven't quite been able to do it.

Teen Talk-In At Church Set For Two Days

"Mental health is everybody's business — including teenagers" says Dr. Hilda Perlitsh, Group Dynamics Consultant with the Newton Mental Health Center; "young and old alike need each other to try to cope with social and emotional problems of our day."

A "Teen-Age Talk-In" sponsored by the Newton Mental Health Center will be held at the United Methodist Church, corner of Walnut Street and Newtonville Avenue, on October 26 and November 2 at 3:00 p.m. Young people and adults have to live in this world together and need to come together to listen, talk and learn from each other.

The most effective programs to date have been designed and carried out by young people; all high school students are urged to come and explore with adults ways and means of formulating and implementing effective programs for our community in an effort to face the societal problems of changing values and morals, drug abuse, different life-styles and education.

Racial Incident Is Stabilized at Newton High

A racial incident at Newton High School which had the possibility of becoming a confrontation now has been stabilized, Newton Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink said yesterday.

Reportedly, it concerned an incident in which a white boy used profanity to a black girl; later they came into contact and the girl's face was slapped. The incident threatened to develop into a confrontation between friends of the two students, Mr. Fink said.

He added that the School Committee has been informed of all actions his departments have taken regarding the incident, and concur with the actions.

"We know we can't control the individual prejudices of individual children or their parents," Supt. Fink stated, "but we can only attempt to reduce the conflict and try to develop much more positive relationships."

25 Murray Road Students Do Boston Volunteer Work

Of the 618,000 people who live in the city of Boston 37 per cent of the adults have not finished high school. Approximately 34 per cent of all the families in Boston have incomes below the poverty level, 14 per cent of the people who live in this housing pay over 30 per cent of their income as rent.

In an attempt to better understand and to help alleviate the human problems behind these statistics, 25 students from the Murray Road High School are doing volunteer work in the Brighton-Allston section of Boston.

Working through several community self-help agencies, the students are contributing from 1 to 2 afternoons per week to such varied activities as tutoring Spanish speaking children in English, doing paperwork and answering complaints at the Allston Little City Hall, setting up a youth center at the Fidelis-Way housing project, and manning a "hot-line" at Project Turnabout, a drug rehabilitation center. By working to solve the city's problems, the students hope to gain a deeper appreciation of these problems than they would gain by studying them in a classroom.

This idea originated when 25 students formed the Urban Volunteers community week. Community week was created so that Murray Road students could have a free week at the beginning of the school year in order to plan courses employing the teaching resources of the non-school community. In this case these resources consist of community self-help agencies. After meeting with Peter Walsh (the Mayor's Coordinator of Volunteers) the students decided that in order to have a common ground for the sharing of their experiences it would be best to concentrate their activity in one area of Boston. Brighton-Allston, located near the school and having a large need for volunteers, was chosen.

The students meet once a week when they discuss their experiences, relating how events in the community affect different people and how each student, in his job, is affected by these occurences. By sharing their observations, the student-volunteers, as put by Mimi Grosser (Social Studies teacher at Murray Road and the group's faculty adviser) ". . . will be able to comprehend the situation of the city far more thoroughly than if each individual worked on his own."

When asked why he is an Urban Volunteer, Marc Livingston, a junior at Murray Road, replied, "The problems of the city affect us all. Helping to solve them provide me with both a greater awareness of different lifestyles and, in my efforts to solve these problems, a constructive use of my time."

But how much help can 25 people contribute in a city of 618,000? This is best answered by John Lynch, manager of the Brighton-Allston Little City Hall: "First off, they can provide much needed free labor. Secondly, through their enthusiasm and hard work the volunteers will show the average Bostonian that the city government can respond to their needs. Hopefully this will help to convince the city dweller to actively use the system, and in turn, convince the city worker to be more responsive to their demands."

Fishman Shrugs Off As "Smear" Attack on His Legislative Record

Representative Irving Fishman, a candidate for State Senator from the new Newton-Watertown district, yesterday shrugged off an attack on his legislative record "as a smear which my opponent has failed to substantiate by the slightest shred of evidence."

The response came following a comment by Mayor Monte G. Basbas who accused Fishman of "legislative indifference."

Rep. Fishman replied to the charge by citing his long record of public service, and the fact that he has been re-elected to four terms in the House of Representatives by increasing margins since he was first elected in 1962.

"My opponent may think I have been indifferent but the voters obviously do not share his opinion," Rep. Fishman stated.

"Although I have been recorded on more than 2500 roll call votes during my eight years in the Legislature, my opponent has not cited or criticized a single vote of mine to substantiate his charge of indifference.

"I'm sure that he has gone over my legislative record very carefully," Fishman continued, "looking for a vote that he might criticize, but obviously has found nothing specific that he can talk about. For this reason, he has been reduced to making general statements that can only be characterized as a smear."

Meanwhile, Connie Kantar, chairman of the Committee to Promote Rep. Fishman's campaign, announced that final plans have been made for the "campaign gala" to be held at the Sidney Hill Country Club on Sunday, Oct. 25 from 8 p.m. to midnight. This will be the principal fund-raising effort to finance the Fishman campaign.

Hosts and hostesses for the gala are Mr. and Mrs. Mark Aronson, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Arons, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Asher, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Bielski, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Bronstein, Alderman and Mrs. William Carmen, Alderman and Mrs. Harry Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Hickey, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hyatt, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Jacobson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kellner;

Also, Dr. and Mrs. William G. Kantar, Dr. and Mrs. Marvin Krims, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Laredo, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Lattner, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Michelson, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Obermayer, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Parad, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pollock, Dr. and Mrs. Alan Persky, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shapiro, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Scheff, Mr. and Mrs. John Samuel, Dr. and Mrs. Peter Schur, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Silverstein, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Stein, Dr. and Mrs. Myron Simon, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Zeltzerman and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Ziering.

Sons Of Italy Contribute $300 In Lieu of Taxes

The Umberto Primo Lodge of the Sons of Italy at 96 Adams street, has received an official "thank you" for the $300 contribution to the City of Newton in lieu of taxes.

The Lodge is tax exempt as are schools, churches, temples and other fraternal organizations from the tax rate of $113 per thousand of assessed valuation.

Dominic Messina, president of the Newton Sons of Italy Chapter, received a letter from Alderman Edward C. Uehlein of Ward 5 which said:

"Speaking for myself as chairman of the Finance Committee, and I am sure for the whole committee, I want to tell you how much we appreciate this gesture on your part.

"It is becoming increasingly difficult," the letter continued, "to find sufficient money to run government and we know that what your lodge is doing is trying in their own way to help the city and all other taxpayers even though not required by law."

City records show that tax exempt property in Newton is valued at $106,639,300. Taxes are levied on the remaining property valued at $324,760,550.

City Comptroller Arthur Marr stated that the only regular payment in lieu of taxes received by the city is from the Newton Housing Authroity which contributed $5,906.03 this year.

"We have reached that season of the year," Commr. Bolduc said, "when Newton citizens can help materially in s olving the problems presented by falling leaves and at the same time, improve the appearance of their property and lead to a cleaner and more desirable city.

"Your help in cleaning up leaves and litter from the street, sidewalk, border, gutter and catch basins in front of your property, as well as on it, will further protect and enhance the appearance of property."

Commissioner Bolduc stressed that Newton cannot complete the current task to clean highways, if leaves and litter are placed in the streets "and deposited in parks and reservations, or into brooks and easements, or open drains."

He warned that State Law, Chap. 134 of the Acts of 1970 prohibits the depositing of refuse or litter in or on public property. The fine for such violation is $100, he said.

Leaves are to be raked and placed in regular trash barrels, burlap or plastic bags. Burlap bags are to be used for leaves only.

Large burlap bags may be purchased for 20 cents each, and plastic bags may be purchased 25 in a carton for $1.50 at any fire station, seven days a week, or at Street Dept. Headquarters, Monday through Friday, located at: Elliot Street Yard, Newton Highlands; Auburndale Avenue Yard, West Newton, or at Crafts Street Yard, Newtonville.

Commr. Bolduc reminded that the bags of leaves must be tied so that leaves will not spread into the street.

How To Cast A Sticker Vote On Voting Machine

A number of Newton residents have called or written in to ask how they can cast a sticker vote for Congress on the voting machines which will be used in the Nov. 3 election. Here is the answer:

On the voting machine the candidates for Congress are listed in the ninth position across the machine in a straight line from the left.

Directly above the word Congressman, but not immediately above it, is a slide which the voter pushes up. (There is a question between the word Congressman and the slide.)

The voter may either paste a sticker onto the roll of paper or write the name and address of the candidate onto the roll. If the voter is writing his choice onto the roll of paper, he must include the address of the candidate. The name is not enough.

When the voter leaves the machine, he throws a lever which opens the curtain and also turns the rolls of paper behind 40 such slides on the voting machine.

"Night of the Great Pumpkin" At Jamaica Pond's Sugar Bowl

Will the Great Pumpkin come to Boston? Only the brave and daring will know when they gather to celebrate the "Night of the Great Pumpkin," a Halloween Festival, in Jamaica Pond's Sugar Bowl, on Friday night, October 30, from 4-7 p.m. for children, accompanied by parents, and from 8:30-10 p.m. for teenagers.

Harron Eilenson, coordinator of the event says that "The Night of the Great Pumpkin is not limited to or directed at one age group or neighborhood. The celebration provides an unusual opportunity for people from all parts of Boston to get together as one community."

Sponsored by the City of Boston's Office of Cultural Affairs and the Boston Parks and Recreation Department with the assistance of UNICEF and the Boston Collegiate Council, the Night of the Great Pumpkin will present young and old with a spooky evening of trips through a Horrible Hall - like haunted house, a rock concert featuring Ralph Graham, apple on a string, a costume parade led by a Pied Piper, a pumpkin carving contest (bring your own, pre-carved, please), and a treasure hunt.

UNICEF will treat pint-sized witches and pirates to Bozo the Clown, throughout the evening, and a performance by The Proposition at 6:30 p.m. At 4:30, Suzi Linn's Puppets will come forth out of the shadows and at 5, the Hub Theater Center.

The Night of the Great Pumpkin promises to make this Halloween the spookiest and most wonderful yet. Parents may join in the fun and make sure that they park on adjacent side streets only.

Tuition Rebate

Roger Paynter is a firefighter in New York. Like many another father he wanted to see his children know a more prosperous life than his own. Accordingly, when his son, Raymond, finished his high school days and indicated a desire to go to college, the elder Paynter was ready with the tuition needed for the boy's education at New York University.

Recently, Firefighter Paynter sued N.Y.U. for $277.40. The sum represented a refund he claimed he was owed because N.Y.U. closed its doors for 19 days last May in the face of demands by student demonstrators.

Paynter acted as his own lawyer before a Small Claims Court. He convinced Judge Patrick J. Picariello he was entitled to the refund.

The judge explained his decision in a seven-page document. N.Y.U., of course, has appealed. Its president, James Hester, expressed shock at the decision. He said his university would be threatened with bankruptcy if it had to refund tuition payments every time classes were canceled.

"It is undisputed and the court supposes common knowledge" the judge wrote, "that the action of the defendant (N.Y.U.) in first suspending and then canceling the balance of the semester was precipitated by riots, disorders and acts of vandalism occurring on its campus."

"The situation," the judge said, "on many campuses of the country was one of violence and chaos, principally because there were no guidelines between permissibly constituted student protest and unlawful action."

He agreed with young Paynter's father that his son had a right to something for which he had contracted; something for which he had paid in advance.

One school after another closed down last spring in the face of threats of violence and riots they couldn't or didn't control. Many were prone to point out the trouble-makers were only a minority. Somehow or other few got around to expressing their sympathy for the supposed majority which had been enrolled like Firefighter Paynter's son — just to get an education.

Whether Mr. Paynter eventually gets his $277.40 rebate will be decided by higher courts.

Meanwhile a copy of Judge Picariello's seven-page decision should be placed on the desk of every college administrator in the country.

"Re-Cycling"

Those old enough to remember the Home Front in World War II may recall with some nostalgia and maybe a bit of pride how communities vied with each other in reclaiming metals and rubber for the war effort.

Tin cans didn't go to the dump. A foot was properly applied to each can, and it was flattened so that it could be easily packed for disposal at a collection point. Rubber tires weren't hidden away in the garage or blatantly left around to spoil the landscape. They were processed into something called ersatz rubber.

Cities and towns got into the act, too. Long forgotten street car rails were dug out from under several layers of macadam and there was hardly a whisper of outraged protest from Old Bostonians when the late Mayor Maurice J. Tobin reclaimed a metal fence bordering Boston Common.

Whatever the reclaimed tin cans, old tires and steel rails did to help win the war isn't spelled out in latter-day records. However, those "drives" did much for Home Front morale and that hard-to-define asset called community spirit.

Now, from various parts of the country comes word that money can be found in the reclamation of bottles, cans, newspapers, scrap metals and the like. The process is called "recycling."

The World War II drive was successful because someone in Washington sold the idea to the country.

If, indeed re-cycling can be made a national project with or without a monetary return, maybe we've got a good start toward solving two major problems — the elimination of a major source of ecology troubles and the constant search for bigger dump disposal areas.

Strictly localized programs in the hands of highly-motivated individuals or committees may prove that re-cycling can be made to work.

If reclamation holds as many answers, as some people seem to believe, its use should be in the hands of experts and operated on a state or national scale.

Violence Begets Violence!

The belief by some political observers that a candidate for high public office gets a sympathy vote when he is stricken ill is strictly a myth. It almost never works out that way.

What was most unfortunate for White from a strictly political standpoint was that he appeared to be advancing his candidacy at a swifter pace than Governor Sargent when he was struck down by an illness which necessitated surgery.

Polls showed that he had virtually overtaken the Governor, who had a big lead at the time of the primary, and was running either a shade behind Mr. Sargent or just about even with him when illness felled him and took him out of the campaign.

It is still possible for Kevin White to win election as the next Governor. A number of factors are militating for him and against Governor Sargent. But Mayor White's illness has hurt him, not helped him.

However, there will still be time for him to surge home a winner if he gets out of the hospital next week and is able to make a strong finish.

The three men White defeated in the primary for the Democratic nomination for Governor are going all out to swing their supporters into line behind the Hub Mayor.

Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, former Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Bellotti and former White House Presidential Aide Kenneth P. O'Donnell want a Democratic Governor sitting on Beacon Hill for the next four years.

They realize that four years is a long time to wait for a change in administrations so each of the three has put aside his own disappointment and is going down the line for White.

Mrs. Kevin White, incidentally, is an excellent stand-in for her convalescing husband. She obviously can't settle or silence the back-room arguments as the Mayor could. But she does have good popular appeal.

This is as strange and unusual a gubernatorial fight as Massachusetts has had in a long time.

McCarthy Is Soon to Retire; Humphrey to Take His Seat

Persons who worked hard for Senator Eugene J. McCarthy in the 1968 Presidential Primary now are finding it difficult to realize that he will move off the public scene through choice at the end of this year.

There were rumors for a time that McCarthy, who had said he would not stand for reelection as a Democratic Senator from Minnesota, might change his mind or run in New York or some other state. But none of them materialized, and McCarthy will retire to private life at the close of 1970.

Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey seems to be on his way to winning McCarthy's Senate seat. For a period Humphrey was unable to get his campaign off the ground. Now he appears to have built up a comfortable lead over his Republican opponent, Congressman Clark MacGregor.

Humphrey, incidentally, indicates publicly that he will not seek the Democratic nomination for President again in 1972.

He says that his loss to Richard Nixon in the 1968 Presidential election was the biggest disappointment of his life.

HHH adds that he has been away from politics for two years — he has been teaching at Macalester College in St. Paul — that he is now 59 years old which, he observes, is not too old but really isn't "young enough either" for another run for the Presidency.

Some of Mr. Humphrey's political listeners doubt that he means everything he says in disclaiming any further ambitions to be President. They believe he would step in speedily if the opportunity presented itself.

But for the present the former Veep apparently will be satisfied to return to the U.S. Senate.

Josiah Spaulding Declares He Is A Republican Orphan

If Josiah A. Spaulding makes even a creditable showing against Senator Edward M. Kennedy in the Nov. 3 election, it will not be because of any help he receives from an official Republican organization.

Spaulding describes himself as a political orphan—"an absolute orphan."

He declares that he has not received ten cents from the Republican Senate Finance Committee, the Republican National Committee or the White House.

The GOP senatorial standard-bearer adds that neither is he getting any financial help from Governor Sargent or the Republican State Committee which Spaulding himself once headed and which presently is broke.

One reason Mr. Spaulding is not getting any money from the Republican National Committee or the GOP Senate Finance Committee is that the Republican strategy-planners in charge of those two organizations consider it would be a waste to give him any.

The White House is unlikely to come to his aid because Spaulding was supporting Governor Nelson Rockefeller against Richard Nixon at the 1968 Republican national convention when it was obvious Mr. Nixon would get the presidential nomination and that Rocky had no chance.

Governor Sargent, of course, is concentrating on holding his own job. He presumably is quite happy that Spaulding is waging a polite and hopeless campaign against Ted Kennedy. Ted is making quite a campaign as it is without being prodded into a drive which might possibly cause a Democratic tide.

As for the Republican State Committee it's almost always broke except for the time Frederic C. (Buck) Dumaine was chairman and dug down into his own pockets to lend the committee $125,000

Lindsay Jumps Fence In Bid To Carry Democratic Banner

Mayor John V. Lindsay's action in endorsing Democrat Arthur J. Goldberg against Republican Governor Nelson Rockefeller came neither as a shock nor a surprise. It had been forecast and expected.

It will have no great political significance if Rocky wins reelection to a fourth term as Governor of New York State, as he is favored to do.

But if underdog Goldberg comes from behind to upset Rockefeller and Lindsay is given the credit for Goldberg's election, it could set the stage for Lindsay's nomination as the Democratic candidate for President in 1972.

Ordinarily, a Republican who jumped the political fence in 1970 would hardly be considered a Democratic Presidential possibility 18 months later.

But the truth is that the Democratic party has a shortage of Presidential prospects.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy insists he will not run for President in 1972. Senators Muskie and McGovern and former Vice President Hubert Humphrey are not exactly pulse-stoppers from a vote-getting standpoint.

Lindsay might just be tapped to carry the Democratic Presidential banner in 1972 although it's more likely he will fade into obscurity when he concludes his present term as Mayor of New York City.

Muskie And Bayh Strongest Dem. Ticket, Says Shriver

Sargent Shriver answered questions in unusually candid fashion during an interview the other day.

He said that he will be available for the Democratic nomination for either President or Vice President in 1972.

But Mr. Shriver expressed the opinion that the strongest ticket the Democrats could field two years from now would be Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine for President and Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana for Vice President.

His only reference to his brother-in-law, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, was to say that Ted will not be in the 1972 Presidential picture.

As for himself, Shriver added that if he is not on the Democratic national ticket in 1972, he will be pleased to accept a Cabinet position in the event the Democrats regain control of the White House.

Philben Confident, Experts See Problem With Stickers

Congressman Philip J. Philbin seems surprisingly confident of his ability to win reelection on stickers in his district which sprawls from Newton to central Massachusetts.

Political observers, who have tried to appraise objectively the task Congressman Philbin has set for himself, conclude that it is extremely difficult of accomplishment.

If Mr. Philbin were able to persuade a sufficiently large number of voters to paste his stickers onto their ballots and voting machines, some of them would not do so in a legal manner, regardless of their intentions.

Veteran politicians used to say that it took two voters to produce one valid sticker vote.

Sticker candidates have been successful in their bids, but usually it was to gain a party nomination when there was no opposition.

There have been cases where one candidate running unopposed died just before the primary when it was too late for anyone else to get his name printed on the ballot and the only way anyone else could run was on stickers.

In such instances the person who had died usually received more votes than the live sticker candidate, but the votes for the dead candidate were disregarded.

Voters make so many mistakes when pasting a sticker on a voting machine or ballot that many election officers base their decision as to the legality of a sticker vote on what they think the voter intended to do.

Wording of Ballot Question Is Sure to Confuse Voters

The Massachusetts Legislature some time will adopt a law ordering that questions involving proposed changes in the State Constitution be placed on the ballot in such form that the voters will understand them.

Until that happens, the voters will continue to read the meaningless questions and try to wade through the long and involved explanations in the so-called summaries, with many of them giving up without recording themselves on an important issue.

"Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held July 15, 1968, received 181 votes in the affirmative and 66 in the negative, and in a joint session of the branches held May 15, 1969, received 208 votes in the affirmative and 54 in the negative?"

A voter may or may not realize after reading the summary printed below that the question asks whether the voter favors the creation of 240 single House districts in the Commonwealth, breaking up those districts which now have two or three State Representatives.

The manner in which these questions are worded on the ballot seems completely silly.

New Politics Coalition In Endorsements

At its October 7th meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Obermayer in West Newton, members of the Newton Coalition for New Politics listened to and questioned both candidates for Sheriff of Middlesex County, John Buckley and John Dever. Also heard by the group were remarks from a representative of Josiah Spaulding, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, who presented his views and positions.

After the candidates and their representatives had left, the group voted to endorse Sheriff John Buckley, Republican and Senator Edward Kennedy, Democrat. in their bids for re-election.

Coalition members, who had endorsed Michael Dukakis in his bid for the Democratic lieutenant-gubenatorial nomination, also voted to support Kevin White and Michael Dukakis, Democratic candidates for Massachusetts Governor and Lieutenant Governor. The group voted to make no endorsement for State Representative from the 12th Middlesex District.

Candidates supported by Newton Coalition for New Politics prior to the primary election and still endorsed by them are Robert Drinan, Democrat, for the U.S. House of Representatives; Irving Fishman, Democrat, for the Massachusetts Senate; and David Mofenson, Democrat, for the Massachusetts House of Representatives, 13th Middlesex District.

Billerica Site For County Police Academy Is Planned

John F. Dever, Jr., Chairman of the Middlesex County Commissioners, today announced that plans are underway to set up a model Middlesex County Police Academy, at the Billerica House of Correction.

Dever said that the costs of the academy would be picked up by federal and private grants.

Dever, in reporting the plans for a police academy said, "Such a school, easily accessible to all Middlesex communities, would establish closer working relations among all county law enforcement agencies. These would include city and town police, college and university police in connection with state and M.D.C. police."

Commissioner Dever said his plan would include representatives of District Attorney John J. Droney's office to assist police officers in courses on the presentation of evidence and court procedures.

"Federal reports indicate that organized crime, narcotic traffic and recent bombing activities are highly organized and that there is close cooperation among participants," Dever stated. "I feel the same organization is needed in law enforcement."

The planned school would have each police department supplying instructors as well as enrolling attendants. These instructors would be in addition to those made available from the federal government agencies such as FBI, Secret Service, Department of Justice, Treasury Department and the U.S. Army Bomb Disposal Units or Weapon Instruction Units.

Dever said that District Attorney Droney's help would be sought in the specialized narcotics problem, as well as using all state agencies that would participate.

"By bringing in representatives of various agencies on a seminar basis," Dever said, "there would be many mutual benefits. For instance, welfare and social agencies could aid a lot, as could auto theft departments of insurance companies and other related organizations."

Dever said that Middlesex County Police Academy, when properly established, will be a model for similar units across the state and nation.

Cost-cutting Tips on Food

Harold E. Neigh, extension consumer economics specialist at the Pennsylvania State University, gives the following hints for cost-conscious housewives trying to reduce food expenditures:

— You can buy cinnamon and sugar to put on your toast or homemade cinnamon rolls already mixed, but you will pay three times as much than you would by buying the cinnamon and sugar and mixing your own.

— Frozen orange juice usually costs less than buying oranges and squeezing fresh juice.

— Graham cracker crumbs are about the same price as rolling your own. But, if you buy a graham cracker crust in a pie pan, it is about double the price of crackers alone.

— The ingredients for homemade bread cost about the same as bread mix you buy. Both are lower than buying a loaf sliced and ready to use, but you have to consider your time and cost of heating the oven.

As well as making cost comparisons, shoppers must decide on the basis of their family's tastes and cooking preferences.

Waste problem in Alaska wilds

Problems of wastewater disposal reach to the North Slope of Alaska, where exploitation of the rich oilfields is underway. In an area where temperatures may dip to minus 65, and alternate thawing and freezing of the tundra have made conventional wastewater treatment effective, work camps must provide their men with showers, toilets and laundry facilities for their basic needs.

A record total of 299,773 tourists visited South Africa during the 1968-69 fiscal year, reports the South African Tourist Corporation. This was an increase of 8.8 per cent over the preceding year, the corporation says.

More Than 400 At Opening Of Yarkon Gallery

More than 400 guests, leaders of the Jewish community and representatives of the Israeli consulate and government were on hand, recently for the formal opening of a new Yarkon Gallery at 1441 Beacon Street, Brookline.

The occasion, featuring a special one-man exhibition of paintings by Avraham Azmon, represented a significant achievement both for the gallery's principals (V. Zev Rejman and Oded T. Melzer) and the State of Israel.

Yarkon Galleries, Inc., the first center of original Israeli arts, crafts and jewelry, has more than tripled in size since opening in 1968. There are now two floors of superb Israeli works. And the gallery has taken on the charming atmosphere of an informal museum.

The joint effort of two Israeli Sabras, Yarkon serves a surprising variety of diverse interests. It has provided an opportunity to display the important work of many Israeli artists and craftsmen whose efforts, until recently, had gone unnoticed in the U.S.

In the two years since its formation, the gallery has presented the works of literally dozens of Israelis. Young, imaginative artists and older, more prominent painters frequently exhibit their works side by side at the gallery.

Yarkon is also seeking to create a cultural identity with the State of Israel. All of the arts, crafts and jewelry shown at Yarkon reflect the different facets of Israel's historical heritage. And sinc nearly 85 per cent of Israel's citizenry were born elsewhere, it follows that the array of artistic influences is similarly kaleidoscopic.

One may see at Yarkon, for example, copper and brass pieces of north African influence alongside oriental hand-inlayed wood and modern stainless steel. The total effect is one of paradox - ancient and modern, Eastern and Western, abstract and traditional; in short, everything which culturally represents the land of Israel.

A third interest served by the gallery's opening is economic. Nearly 50 percent of the money spent at Yarkon finds its way back into the Israeli economy. Through this favorable re-investment and subsequent expansion of merchandise, Israeli artists are being encouraged to continue their work.

Educator To Lead Course In Creativity On Oct. 28

On Wednesday evening, October 28, at 8 p.m. at Education Development Center, 55 Chapel Street, Newton, Mr. Fred J. Stokley will begin a course in creative problem-solving. Mr. Stokley is the founder and director of Creative Behavior Associates, the educational organization sponsoring the course.

Presently he is associated with Education Development Center, the New England Educational Research and Development Laboratory and the Administrative Career Program at Harvard University.

For the past three years he has taught a course in Creative Problem-Solving at the Cambridge Center for Adult Education.

Mr. Stokley has served as a consultant to school systems in Maine, Washington, D.C., Connecticut and Massachusetts. He has lectured and written about the creative personality and creative education.

He has directed programs in developing creative ability to a wide range of people. For instance, they include pre-school children, elementary and secondary school pupils, graduate students, university faculties, school teachers and administrators, writers, artists, doctors, lawyers, businessmen, executives, housewives and the "retired;" in other words, ages 3 to 90, truck drivers and professors.

This span of divergence well illustrates the universality and potential present in a course aimed at increasing creative behavior.

Mr. Stokley taught high school mathematics, physics and psychology in Washington, D.C., Baltimore and Pittsburgh before becoming a high school principal.

He holds advanced degrees in theology, physics, psychology, and education. He has studied and taught at numerous graduate schools such as the Catholic University of America, the University of Notre Dame, Claremont Graduate School in California, John Hopkins University, and the University of Paris.

Mr. Stokley feels that today more than ever there is a need for individuals and groups to think, feel and act more creatively. His organization, Creative Behavior Associates, attempts to play the role of "broker" by bringing together skilled behavioral scientists and laymen. Research at the University of Buffalo in New York, University of Minnesota and the University of Utah has shown that creative ability and behavior can be developed.

Mr. Tsokley has stated that "recent research in education has indicated that between the ages of 3 and 7 humans operate at maximum creative ability. After the age of 7, a dampening effect begins to take place. Apparently, within our society and schools are forces acting on the individual that tend to suppress his ability to think and act creatively. Courses in creative problem solving seek to lessen the restraining forces outside the individual and increase the creative forces within each person."

Tour advice

Before you book a tour, it's a good idea to find out what your travel agency's cancellation policy is, advises the Better Business Bureau.

The bureau reported that inquiries and complaints were being received from persons whose money had been forfeited after they had cancelled their tours. "Cancellation policies vary from agency to agency," said Bureau president Woodrow Wirsig, who said customers should insist upon seeing the agency's policy in writing.

Foot ills

Foot disorders can be contributing factors to mental illness in addition to endangering physical health, says a podiatrist.

Dr. C.A. Fritts said a study, based on private research and discussion among survey respondents, showed four typical reactions to foot trouble which can develop into reactive depressions. These were loss of pride, pain, poor posture and loss of locomotion.

Library Marks United Nations 25th Birthday

The 25th birthday of the United Nations was marked last night at an observance held at the Newton Free Library, attended by Newton agencies whose activities extend beyond the limits of the city and nation.

The League of Women Voters, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Rotary, American Field Service, Newton Federation of Women's Clubs and the Newton Free Library Camera Club were among the participating organizations.

Representatives from each group spoke briefly about the impact of their local organization in the world at large.

An honored guest was Dr. Jack Bloom, past president of the United Nations of Greater Boston. Other guests included American Field Service students in Newton, along with Henry Sohr, president of the Newton Chapter.

A special feature of the birthday salute to the United Nations is a display of political science books — the Loretta Ryan Memorial Bookshelf — given to the Newton Free Library by friends of the late Mrs. Charles Ryan of the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Ryan, who was a graduate librarian, was deeply involved in the work of the League, and also was a Friend of the Library.

The Newton Free Library again this year is providing a United Nations Day exhibit in the lobby of the City Hall, on display from Oct. 20 through Oct. 26.

Mann Stresses Importance Of Greater Highway Safety

Representative Theodore D. Mann today drew attention to the critical need for greater emphasis on highway safety programs, declaring:

"The loss of human resources through tragic death and serious injury as a result of motor vehicle accidents on our highways is appalling."

"Much serious work, I know," continued Rep. Mann, "has been done in the areas of highway safety. As a member of the Special Legislative Committee for the Study of New Safety Features and Air Pollution Controls for Motor Vehicles, however, I recognize the need for intersified and accelerated action to reduce the toll of highway accidents."

"It is hoped that studies now being conducted will give members of the Legislature needed reliable information concerning present and future steps being taken by automobile manufacturers for the production of safer vehicles through improved design and construction."

Representative Mann pointed out that "while we are of course primarily concerned with reducing the number of deaths and serious injuries due to accidents for humanitarian reasons, there are practical economic factors compelling remedial steps. Fact is that we cannot significantly reduce Motor Vehicle insurance costs without attacking basics such as cost of repairs, hospital and medical costs, and other aspects of a very difficult and complex problem. Better safety programs, driver training programs, modernized construction of automobiles with safety features, better road construction . . . are all factors that must be included in any serious study."

Representative Mann stated that he had most recently recommended new legislation related to motor vehicle safety and anti-pollution measures. These would provide safety criteria for new cars sold in the state; require all vehicles to be equipped with anti-pollutant devices; establish minimum criteria on noise with the requirement that communities call for bids on new rubbish removal trucks with and without anti-noise equipment.

Representative Mann expressed confidence in the continuing efforts now undertaken to provide answers to the many related problems.

"Much, however," he added, "depends on the sense of urgency conveyed to the responsible officials by interested and concerned citizens."

Representative Mann, no in his third term as a member of the House of Representatives from the 13th Middlesex District (Newton Wards 4-5-6-8) also noted that his headquarters on election day will be located at the Charter House Motel on Boylston Street in Newton where a volunteer staff will furnish voter information, and transportation to polling places.

College -

The matter, as a result of the School Committee's action on Monday night, is now in the lap of the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor for provision of a site for the proposed new college.

What will happen if the city officials fail to provide this land was not discussed on Monday night, but indications are that most of the city fathers think the proposed move is a good one.

As Bertram H. Lowenberg, chairman of the Newton Junior College Board of Directors, stated Monday night, "The city is now subsidizing the junior college at the rate of $400,000 a year. Even if a site should cost $2 million (a figure drawn from the air) it would still only be the equivalent of five years of the present subsidy."

"This is the magic moment as far as the state and Newton Junior College are concerned. I think the state is interested in taking over the college on an expanded regional basis. The crucial issue would be making available a site," Lowenberg concluded.

Dudley's memorandum pointed out that a number of alternatives were explored before the recommendation for state takeover was made.

These included: private operation, collaboration with regional technical-vocational high school districts, collaboration with existing private two-year colleges in the Newton area (e.g., Lasell Junior College, Mt. Ida Junior College, and Aquinas Junior College), retrenchment to a limited purpose institution under local Newton control, legal creation of an expanded regional junior college district under local control of Newton and surrounding communities but outside of the state system of community colleges, continuation of the status quo (but assuming its improvement) serving predominantly Newton students, regionalized collaboration under local Newton control and assuming that there will be financial subsidy inputs from participating communities, state control and operation under the Massachusetts Board of Regional Community Colleges.

Some of the major problems now facing the college are the fact that enrollment of Newton students seems to be approaching a plateau and this would affect expansion of the variety of program offerings; the fact that the city now must subsidize the school at the rate of $400,000 a year and that figure would inevitably have to increase; and the fact that facilities will have to be improved if the college is to retain its accreditation.

Newton Junior College was founded in 1946 to meet the needs of returning World War II veterans. It has since grown and now has a full time enrollment of about 500, 85 per cent of whom are Newton residents and 15 per cent from other communities.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink pointed out at Monday night's meeting that if the college were to become part of the state's regional community college system it would serve several communities, and because it would be considerably larger than it now is would be able to offer a much greater variety of programs.

In addition the tuition, which is currently $600 a year for Newton residents and $800 for non-residents, would drop to the state college level of $200 a year.

School Committeeman Edwin Hawkridge expressed the concern that the present policy of giving an opportunity for further education to any Newton applicant "who has a fighting chance" would change if the school does not remain under local control.

"To what degree will the 'late bloomer' have a chance of acceptance if it becomes a community college?" he asked.

Dudley responded that the state community colleges have a commitment to take care of this kind of student.

Seminarians Agree Bible Is Relevant Today

Is the Bible relevant to the mounting, complex problems of today? To such diverse issues as the youth rebellion, the generation gap, ecology and the threat to man's environment, racial relations and Vietnam?

A group of young seminarians, while differing on details, were in basic agreement that it is.

The seminarians, meeting in an advertising agency's offices, discussed these and related questions in preparation for the 30th annual observance of National Bible Week, the interfaith movement to promote study of the Bible.

From the discussion the agency hopes to develop material for inspirational public service messages to help promote Bible Week, which this year will be observed Nov. 22-29.

Representing the Protestant, Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and Jewish faiths, the young seminarians engaged in a lively tape-recordd exchange of opinions and ideas.

They spoke of Jesus as an anti - establishment revolutionary and made it clear they could identify and sympathize with viewpoints of other young people of today, including campus rebels.

Dennis Keane, a Roman Catholic, expressed the opinion that the New Testament was firmly against violence for any reason, even to alleviate social ills.

Willis Logan, a black student from the Union Theological Seminary, disagreed. There are situations, he said, that call for a violent response, as when Jesus drove the money changers from the temple.

"Jesus teaches us to accept defeat and even death if necessary for the cause that is right and just," Logan said. "And man," he added fervently, "you can't get more revoluntionary than that."

Hair ornaments may be purchased or made at home. Glitter and "froufrou", jewels and little flat bows can make the prettiest hairstyle even more lovely.

Here are a few hairdo accessories that will add sparkle and beauty to your hairstyle.

Hairbands: made usually from velvet, satin or grosgrain. Two styles: tiny elastic bands at the back to hide under the hairdo. Plain bands with or without a bow in front.

Pottey Shines On But South Harriers Lose

Newton South distance ace Charley Pottey raced to his fourth and fifth victories of the year in seven attempts, last week, but the harriers were downed twice more to tumble to a 0-8 seasons slate.

Pottey battled Weston sophomore Tom Phillips all the way over the 2.8 mile Wildcat course and finally overtook him for good only 100 yards from the finish for a 14:40 to 14:42 victory.

Unfortunately, as has been the case all season there were no more Lions around at the finish for quite a while. Captain Mike LeBlanc chugged home sixth in 15:37 and was the only other South runner in the top ten.

Weston captured places two through five to secure the triumph of 21-40.

It was a two-man race all the way as third-place finisher Greg French was 43 seconds behind Pottey in 15:23.

South was upended by Westwood for the second time this year, 22-34. Pottey romped home with a nine-second 14:04 to 14:13 win over Jim Kelley, also for the second time. The first time the two met, this season Pottey conquered his foe by a 29-second margin. The story was familiar all the way down the line, though, as LeBlanc came across next for South in fifth at 15:04.

South Soccer Falters; Takes Duo of Losses

Newton South's soccer team, after a quick start has faltered, falling to 3-3-1 with two consecutive losses.

The second defeat came last week versus Lincoln-Sudbury, perennial Dual County League champ, which hasn't lost a league game in years.

Lincoln, 5-0-1 is unscored upon and fabulous goalie Mark Beaton is the man behind the perfect defense.

The Lions played a spirited game, but the champs were just too tough, pulling away for a 3-0 decision.

Tiger Gridmen Make It Third Shutout; Weymouth Bows 32-0

By BOB WORDEN

It was so cold, football fans were waiting for the Boston Bruins to make their appearance, but through piercing cold wind and snow the Tigers took the field to meet Weymouth South. Newton took the chiller, posting their third shut out in 4 outings, as they routed the Marroon 32-0.

Th Tigers wasted little time, Chuck Pendergast put six points on the board at 6:05, sprinting in from the seven yard line. Jim Doolin held the extra point like a stick of butter, after several futile attempts at holding it, he ended up eating the ball.

Newton's offensive line executed some crisp blocking on Mark Lennons 52 yard jaunt to pay dirt at 4:30 of the first period. Ken Haywood committed the cardinal sin of all sports, he pulled his head up to admire his extra point kick before he booted it, the ball hooked to the left.

The Garden City ballhandlers had their problems throughout the ball game, as they fumbled the ball several times. Tiger half back Dana Goodchild, made a costly turnover, late in the second quarter, fumbling at the four yard line, but tackle Steve Hunter pulled him out of the fire, recovering a fumble two plays later, Hunter, coming back from a serious knee injury played an outstanding game as did Co - Capt. linebacker John Murphy.

With 3:44 remaining in the first half, Doolin hit Junior end Paul Johnson in the end zone on a 24 yard pass completion. Haywood's point after was good, to give Newton a 19 to 0 half time advantage.

In the second half, Coach Jim Ronayne had the chance to give his second team some experience. They did an excellent job in containing the Weymouth offense.

Kevin Carver scored on a 19 yard burst in the third quarter, Haywood booted the point after. Junior Varsity stand out Brian Migell, plunged in from one yard out, to round out the scoring. Final score - Newton 32, Weymouth South 0.

Sideline Comments: A blunder by the Brockton High Athletic Dept. might have eliminated themselves from the Class A race already. The New Bedford game which the Shoe City won with ease last week, only accounts for six points in the standings, as two seasons ago (when they scheduled this year's game) New Bedford was a Class A team, now they are only Class C. Class A games count for ten points in the standings.

Two undefeated teams in the Surburban League fell. Arlington was dealt their first loss of the season, losing to Leominster 6 to 0. Haverhill beat Waltham for the first time since 1963 as they chalked up a 13 to 6 triumph.

Coach Jim Ronayne felt the Tigers are in good shape individually for next week's Arlington game, which promises to be a wild contest, but must pull together as a team. The game will be played at Arlington, starting time 1:30 p.m.

Track Co-Captain Sidman Paces Tigers To Two Wins

Jay Sidman, Newton High cross - country co-captain copped his sixth race in seven outings this fall to pace the Tigers to 24-37 and 23-32 victories over Cambridge Latin and Brooklin, respectively.

Sidman, one of the leading harriers in the state had devoured all competition by as much as a minute and two seconds before last week.

However, in the Cambridge Latin meet he ran into Bill Durrette, the second-place New England two-mile medalist as a sophomore and was beaten for the first time 11:49 to 12:35 as Durrette cracked his own course record.

Sidman and Durrette both compete for the Cambridge Sports Union as teammates and are good friends.

Despite losing by 46 seconds Sidman's time was still fast. Third place was 13:28.

Losing was an unaccustomed experience for Sidman and having course record set by someone else while he was in the race is another different experience. But to prove that the new experiences were not habit-forming he proceeded to erase the Brookline High course standard by nine seconds, in 12:11 defeating the former record holder Bob Alden who came in at 12:24.

Sidman has made the grand tour this fall and has set course records on his home route Brockton, Weymouth and now Brookline in seven meets.

In disposing of CHLS and the Indians the hard-running senior had plenty of support. Co-captain Steve Caggiano, injured for much of the season, reappeared against Latin and placed fourth in 13:32 and Newton proceeded to lay claim to the remaining spots in the top ten behind Ken Gorfinkle, 13:35, Ed Coan, 13:36, Steve Carleo, 13:37, John Boates, 13:51, Marc Rosenbaum, 14:16 and Ken Souliotis, 14:35.

Caggiano was again sidelined against Brookline, but the Tigers had little trouble in chalking up their fifth triumph of the season against two losses.

Gorfinkle took third in 13:12. Carleo copped fifth in 13:33. Boates was next in 13:35 and Coan rounded out the point-scorers in eighth with a 13:40 clocking.

Former Newton Grid Star Is Holy Cross Ace

Holy Cross sophomore Colin Clapton the man who guided Newton High to the Class A Championship two years ago, entered the Crusader record books last Saturday.

In a game versus Boston University, quarterback Clapton hurled a 99-yard scoring bomb to his halfback Ed Jenkins to erase the old Holy Cross mark of 79 yards on a pass play, set in 1949 by Paul Gallo and Tom McCann.

Clapton also tossed for a two-point conversion and ran for one himself. Despite his heroics, the Crusaders went down to the Terriers, 33-23.

First night pro football in 1902

The first professional football game ever played at night was played here in 1902. The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Kanaweola A.C. 39-0. Coach of the Athletics was Connie Mack and his star halfback was Rube Waddell, better known as an all-star baseball pitcher.

Boston Latin Nudges Lions From Unbeaten Berth, 10-6

By LEWIS FREEDMAN

It was a week of supreme ecstacy and a week of extreme frustration for the Newton South Lion football eleven.

The ecstacy came on Monday, when the Lions subdued a pesky, winless Weymouth South team, 34-28 in the last ten seconds, to strengthen their hold on the top run of the Class C rankings and preserve their perfect 3-0 record.

The disappointment came Saturday and will linger a bit longer as Boston Latin met the Lions in a battle of unbeatens and knocked South from its lofty perch, 10-8.

South was unscored upon entering the Weymouth game but found the opposition's offense tough to handle. Soph Bob Hickey slipped through the Lion defense to roll up 112 yards on only 12 carries and to score two touchdowns one a 57-yarder.

Newton built a 28-14 halftime lead before Weymouth came back to 28-28 behind the brilliant ball-carrying of junior back Dave Lelchook who totaled 108 yards and notched two TDs and a conversion run for 14 points. Lelchook tallied all his points in the first half on three and six yard runs, plus the conversion.

Howie Haimes and quarterback Rick Lerner who were to combine for the key play in the closing seconds, each collected a first-half TD.

Lerner, touted as the teams number one quarterback in preseason had lost his job because of an injury to Ron Izen and was making his first appearance of the season.

The strong-armed senior completed five aerials in a row the last climaxing a beautifully executed 33-yard drive and culminating with a 7-yard desperation pass to speedster Haimes for the game's winning points.

Dreams of the schools first undefeated season came to an end last Saturday when tough Boston Latin nipped South 10-8 in freezing weather.

Both teams tuck mostly to the ground as the low temperatures inhibited the passing attacks.

Haimes went over from the one for South's only lead of the game 6-0 after fullback Bob Staulo ate up the key yardage in the drive en route to his team-leading 70 yards.

Despite the great all-around play of the Lion defense which produced a safety in the fourth quarter South couldn't stop Latin back Gordon Jones from making the big yardage 99 in all.

South had a last-ditch effort carrying the ball to the BL two with 50 seconds on the clock. However, a fourth down play fizzled and although the safety followed time ran out on the Lions and their unbeaten season.

Pivotal Clash . . .

Newton Lions Pop Warner Team Clashes Sunday With Hot Dedham

The Newton Athletic Association Lions Pop Warner football team shutout the Wellesley Tornadoes 36-0 last Sunday at the Newton Highlands Playground. The Victory coupled with Framinghams loss to Dedham sets the stage for the first place clash next Sunday at the Highlands Playground with Dedham.

The Dedham Dynamos are undefeated with a 6-0 slate and have been selected as one of the top ten Pop Warner teams for the last decade nationally. Framingham and Newton are both 5-1.

Halfback Kevin Hoban opened the scoring against Wellesley with an 85 yard touchdown run in the first period. Halfback John Vizakis rushed the conversion and Newton led 8-0. Hoban scored in the second period on a 20 yard dash aided by a Greg Moan block. The points failed.

Despite the 14-0 half time lead, the Newton offense was somewhat disappointing. Wellesley controlled the ball the entire third period limiting the Lions to one offensive play which resulted in a fumble. Up to this point Newton had not thrown a pass.

Quarterback Bob Kinsella, who was slightly ill all week, opened up the Lions offense by moving the team for 22 fourth period points. Kinsella threw eight passes, completing five for 103 yards and one touchdown and scored two himself on runs of two and 16 yards.

Bob's first score on a two yard sneak was setup on key pass receptions by Hoban (35 yards) and Alan Flynn (10 yards). Fullback Matt Sabetti scored his first points of the year by rushing conversion points.

Newton's next score came on a Kinsella to Rick Paglia 32 yard screen pass. Fine blocks by Dave Prince and Dennis Cameron paved the way for Paglias run. Kinsella then threw to Alan Flynn for the consersion.

Newton's final tally was setup by a Matt Sabetti fumble recovery at the Tornadoes 47. After a first down incompleted pass, Kinsella rushed for three yards. Bob then hit halfback Kevin Pichetti for six more. Halfback Brian O'Halloran rushed for eight more and a first down at the 26.

Kinsella passed again on first down intended for end Mark Natale, but the pass was incomplete. Kinsella hit halfback Rick Paglia for a twenty yard gain for a first down at the 16. Bob bootlegged his way into the end zone as time expired. The points failed.

Linebacker Jim Vizakis led all Newton defenders with 16 tackles. Matt Sabetti had 13 from the other linebacker slot.

Newton has a chance to make amends for the Framingham defeat by upsetting Dedham. A Newton victory would create a three way first place tie. A loss would drop the Lions back to third.

The Dynamos have outscored the opposition 152-20 through five games while the Lions have a total of 150-40 through six.

Statistics aside, the "game" next week is Dedham vs. Newton Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Newton Highlands Playground.

Backyard Frontier

By POLLY BRADLEY
(Mass. Audubon Society)

There are two types of people who love New England in the Fall.

There are people from outside New England, who always thought those bright-colored post cards had been touched up by some overly imaginative artist . . .

And natives of New England, who feel lucky to be at home in this annual miracle, to be a part of creation at its height.

All of us open up our eyes in the Fall, and we SEE. And oh, we appreciate the country roads where warm, warm tones of scarlet and gold and orange burst against a cold, cold blue sky . . . and we hate the turnpikes where they chopped down the trees so one wouldn't jump in front of a drunken driver.

And we appreciate the good sense of the Vermonters, who banned the billboards so we could enjoy the unspoiled beauty of Vermont herself . . . and we hate the ugliness of a gaudy sign in some other New England state wrecking the very photo our camera wants to snap.

And we appreciate the long, uncluttered lines of painted mountains where no wires intrude . . . and we hate the high voltage towers marching in a dead brown slash over the hills and down the valleys.

In the Fall, we suddenly get perspective. We suddenly see what is beautiful and sort it out from the ugliness we often take for granted.

If only we'd open our eyes at all seasons, what a beautiful New England we could create, with man's work fitting nobly into God's work, as it did when the early settlers built the farms and the stone fences which still enhance the wonder of New England.

WOULD YOU BE CAUGHT DEAD IN A CHURCH?

For a lot of people these days that's about the only way they will be caught. But these are revolutionary times—and life is changing very fast.

The church, believe it or not, is moving, too. It's learning to live with the future as well as the past. Religion is alive, or it's nowhere.

THE FIRST UNITARIAN SOCIETY OF NEWTON is a moving church. Its education emphasizes ecology as well as tradition. Its services include rock as well as Bach. It stresses social action as well as personal growth.

Speaks Before Newton Coalition

Sheriff Buckley Advocates End of County Government

"The office of the sheriff is an anachronism and should be abolished along with the whole county government system,", Sheriff John J. Buckley stated before a meeting of the Newton Coalition for New Politics.

Sheriff Buckley said the four basic functions of the county sheriff's office could be better administered by the state at a savings to the taxpayer. First, he said, the county prison system is a poor duplication of those on a state level.

Secondly, the county employees would benefit by serving under the state civil service system.

Thirdly, the Sheriff pointed out that the appointment of court officers could be managed more efficiently and with greater professionalism if it was taken over by the state. Finally, the office of deputy sheriffs would be more efficient if it was not administered by the county.

Commenting to the Coalition (which later that evening endorsed Sheriff Buckley) on the invisibilty of the county system, the Sheriff said "The Middlesex County courthouse stands as a 'tombstone' to county government. The controversy surrounding the construction of the courthouse has made the people of Newton aware of the duplications and inefficiencies of the county system".

Sheriff Buckley was appointed to the position of chief law enforcement officer for Massachusetts' largest county by Governor Francis W. Sargent last April.

Since that time Sheriff Buckley has instituted a number of reforms in the Sheriff's department despite the fact that he advocates the phasing out of his office.

"But I intend to actively lead the fight to abolish county government while in office. What we have today is not a government because the government has been taken over by a gang — 'the court house gang.' County government has been invisible, opening it to corruption, mismanagement and duplication which results in a waste of money and lives," Sheriff Buckley said.

Sheriff Buckley, who outlined a workable proposal to close the Charles Street jail, said the duplication of efforts can most clearly be seen in the existing county corrections system.

"The county's correctional system should be under the state's control. You don't treat a man with a broken leg the same way you treat a man with pneumonia. Why do we do this with prisoners? Presently, under the county correctional system, a motor vehicle violator and a drug addict are handled the same way," the Sheriff said.

He continued, "If the state took over the correctional system, you could have smaller institutions specializing in different areas of penal rehabilitation throughout the state. The House of Correction at Billerica could be utihzed as a diagnostic and classification center for the rest of the state. You would have more small state prisons rather than large ones like Walpole and Norfolk. You could work with these smaller numbers more effectively and economically."

County employees would also benefit from a state takeover of county government he said. Under the present system they do not have tenure unless they have served for more than seven years.

"The present devoted county employees are not recognized for their loyal and dedicated service. They have no merit system as the state employees enjoy. Their pay scale is below that of the state, they lack training that is given to state employees, they do not have job security, they owe their jobs to political sponsors and that is a difficult way to start a career in any field," the Sheriff said.

The recommendations for the appointment of court officers for a life - time tenure is also the prerogative of the sheriff. Sheriff Buckley stated he felt these appointments should also be handled by the state.

"We can never professionalize our court system until we take it out of the hands of the politicians. The disgraceful delays of up to 48 months in civil cases is due to poor political administrators," Buckley said.

The Sheriff said he is responsible for appointing and decommissioning the deputy sheriffs in the county, who operate a private business of delivering writs throughout the county. Their positions would also be more efficient and less costly to the taxpayers under state control, the Sheriff stated.

"There was one deputy sheriff, who was operating out of a county building, getting his rent for a dollar a year. He netted over $40,000. This was not fair to the taxpayers of the county," he said.

"In short, the entire structure of the county government system including the sheriff's office is outmoded and a maze of overlapping inefficiences," the Sheriff said.

The Sheriff stated the new Middlesex county court house is a perfect example of this waste and inefficiency. Using the court houses and jails of Boston and Cambridge to clarify his point, the Sheriff said they are within one mile of each other, yet each county wants its own building.

"Yesterday, I proposed a plan with the Boston Finance Commission that would do away with the antiquated Charles Street jail by having both counties use the new court house. This is only one example of how to use existing institutions under new controls to improve the overall system."

He concluded, "The cost of one eight by four foot cell, which is the size of an average bathroom, is going to be $40,000. You can build a very nice house for that kind of money. Yet, all the taxpayers are getting is one jail cell without a bed. The court house is a very expensive tombstone — a tombstone to county government and I am going to lead the fight to abolish the county system."

What hath Alexander Graham Bell wrought?

Please don't hate us. You may be among the many patient people who have so much trouble getting through to us on the telephone. That annoying busy signal comes back at you repeatedly when you dial our Bank. One of our clients reports that he dialed us over 20 separate times before his call went through! If such a condition upsets you . . . IMAGINE HOW WE FEEL!! As a matter of fact, there are many times when we can't even get a dial tone to call you.

We've discussed this condition long and often with the officials of the Telephone Company. They report that rapid growth in the Waltham area has so seriously overloaded telephone facilities that normal, dependable service can't be maintained at the present time.

In the meantime, we hope you will appreciate our position. We have more than enough lines, as well as up-to-date switchboards and efficient operators. Unfortunately they aren't able to give you prompt service because the clogged telephone system doesn't even let your calls reach us. In addition to the frustration it can cause you, it can cost the Newton-Waltham Bank valuable time, delayed negotiations and lost business.

So, please don't blame us. We've done everything we can to provide good telephone service. While we await corrective measures by the Telephone Company, please continue to be patient, and when your call does get through to us, we promise you the prompt and dependable service you deserve.

A new telephone service at the Roslindale social security office can handle "most social security business" without requiring personal visits to the office by the public, according to Gerald Silver, social security manager for Roslindale, West Roxbury, and Hyde Park.

"We call it Teleservice," Silver said. "With it, we can handle a great deal of the paperwork by phone that involves such social security matters as application for benefits, change of address for prompt delivery of monthly checks, and general and specific questions about social security programs, including Medicare."

With Teleservice, the manager said, social security personnel can, in many instances, fill out an application for benefits over the phone, then mail the form to the beneficiary for his or her signature.

"We can also accept change of address information by phone from beneficiaries who are moving, so that delivery of their checks will not be interrupted," he said. "And, of course, we can answer questions affecting workers' retirement, Medicare, disability, and survivors protection."

The social security Teleservice phone number for the Roslindale office is 323-0850.

Social Studies In Orient

International social work drew the attention this past summer of Mrs. Marion Blank of Newton, shown here during her month-long tour of the Orient. The tour leader was Dr. Harvey Specht of the University of California at Berkeley.

Architect Seen As Aid To Social Ills

Architects may soon be collaborating with social workers as educators, lawyers and psychiatrists do now, to alleviate social problems according to Mrs. Marion Blank of Newton, professor of social work at Boston University, who recently returned from an international social work conference.

Making architects part of the social work professional team was one of the ideas presented at the 15th International Congress of Schools of Social Work held in Manila this past summer.

Prof. Blank who is resident of Newton Highlands, attended as a University representative.

"The architect could be very useful in social planning," Prof. Blank says. "The right physical surroundings in social work agencies can help people work together more effectively. Even better traffic patterns in buildings open up communication.

"Architects could make a particularly valid contribution to public housing by getting away from these narrow high rise buildings that seem to isolate people. More thought should be given to utilizing space so that people can meet and interact with one another."

At the conference, which dealt with policies and programs for social welfare training in the '70's, Prof. Blank participated in a discussion group on new patterns of curriculum.

"We were concerned with experimentation in educational planning and with new ways of dealing with big problems in today's society," she says. "Most importantly, we want to help students adjust to constant social work change.

Before attending the four-day conference, which was conducted during the worst typhoon in the Philippines in 20 years, Prof. Blank spent a month with a study tour group of educators and social workers in Japan, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

She says that the health and social problems in the Orient are so massive that the social worker's job there is quite different from what it is in the United States.

"For example, there is no compulsory education in Hong Kong," she explains. "Family planning has made some headway, but there is still a tremendous problem of overpopulation, aggravated by the constant influx of Chinese from the mainland.

"The obvious need for medical help is overwhelming. I could see, just walking along in the crowds, the results of poor nutrition and the medical problems that clearly were not being treated.

Because so many of the problems are related to health, the social worker spends a good deal of his time teaching the value of inoculations, talking to groups about family planning, and in general, making them aware of medical assistant programs.

"Many of them also work closely with legislators to bring about major changes in law and education. By and large, social workers in the Orient deal less with individuals and their problems than we do here.

"Their psychiatric clinics treat relatively small numbers of people, most of whom come from the upper and middle classes rather than from the lower economic groups who are still struggling with the basic problems of poverty."

Prof. Blank suggests that training for foreign students should take into consideration the needs of the country from which an individual comes, and that a course of study should be devised to relate to curriculum to that country's most urgent needs. "Our ways may not necessarily be best for other parts of the world," Prof. Blank concluded.

Break Ground For 5-Story Building At Newton-at-128

One of Massachusetts' fastest growing office and industrial parks, Newton at 128, has broken ground for a new five story, 89,000 Sq. ft. office building.

Attending the groundbreaking ceremonies were Mrs. Francis Sargent, wife of the Governor, and a group of Newton's Board of Aldermen. Both praised the use of the property and the environment being created as assets to the Commonwealth and Newton.

Developer of the new building and Park is Newton at 128 Realty Trust. The exclusive rental agents will be Stephen Hopkins, Inc., of Boston and State Properties of Boston. Architects and Engineers for the Newton at 128 Building will be Alonzo B. Reed, Inc. of Boston.

Discussing the Park with Mrs. Sargent and the Aldermen at the groundbreaking, Newton at 128's Steve Karp indicated the care with which the Park was being developed.

"Our intention is to make this 146 acres the most attractive office and industrial park in the Bay State," said Karp. "We are attracting growth companies both national and local who want the best working conditions for their employees."

"With this in mind, not only do we have convenience in location, but the gross floor area of any lot is restricted to 25 per cent with an open landscaping not less than 40 per cent. We are also taking care to leave enough room around the outside of the Park to give it a good setting for our neighbors," stated Karp.

The groundbreaking ceremony attracted a crowd of almost a hundred people to the site. Permanent financing for the new building has been arranged through the Northeast Regional office of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America. On hand to represent Prudential was Mr. John J. Wilson, Senior Vice President and Mr. Charles Nelson, Manager of the Mortgage Division.

Since the Park was announced less than two years ago, fourteen organizations have plans, or are making plans, to locate in Newton at 128. Among those are: Accounting Forms, Allen Pen Co., American Textile, Cramer Electronics, Crown Clothing, Emerson Swan Co., Fishback & Moore, Mutual Franchise, National Cash Register, Robert Morris Co., and Way Leather.

In addition to this Park, the developers have over a thousand acres under development in the Commonwealth, either jointly or individually.

These projects include: Central New England Industrial Park in Westboro; Woburn at 128 Industrial Park, Woburn; Liberty Tree Shopping Center in Danvers and Park Marion Nursing Home.

The second of the eight sessions of the Combined Adult Education Series will be held on Tuesday, October 27 at Temple Emeth. The program opened this past Tuesday with an attendance of over 500 from the four sponsoring temples and other interested participants. He is also author of "Understanding Genesis" for which he received the Jewish Book Council Award in 1967.

Dr. Sarna was born and educated in England. He did educational work for the Jewish Agency in Israel in 1949 and 1950. He has lived in the United States since 1951 and has taught at the Jewish Theological seminary, Andover - Newton Theological School and at Dropsie College. He is a consultant to the Melton Research Center. He is also currently working on a comprehensive "Commentarry to the Book of Psalms" in Hebrew and English editions.

"Sensations" By Children's Theatre Nov. 6

On Friday Nov. 6, the Boston Children's Theatre's first benefit, "Sensations", will be presented at the Parker Street 470 Gallery at 6:30 p.m.

Invitations in the form of a playbill are in the mail, listing some of the "sensations" which will be offered against a background of the Gallery's exhibit of the works of Andrew Tavarelli, and the music by the State Street Ramblers.

A cocktail buffet, dancing, continuous old movies - Shirley Temple etc., - a play by members of the Theatre's drama classes, scenes from the Theatre's current production, "Heidi" which opens on October 31, all make this a really fun evening, with one of the high points an auction by David Ives.

A hard working committee of the Theatre's board and rporation members has planned this gala event to benefit the Boston Children's Theatre, this year celebrating its 20th anniversary. Under the direction of Adele Thane, the theatre has provided a place for countless children to explore a world of drama — "where children perform for children" — in a program that includes classes in creative dramatics, productions at New England Life Hall, the Stagemobile, and a new Touring Company for the winter season.

For more information on "Sensations" call the Boston Children's Theatre, 536-3324.

We'll replace your furnace with a heating system that will make your house feel like a Florida resort all winter.

And we can guarantee the operating cost in writing.

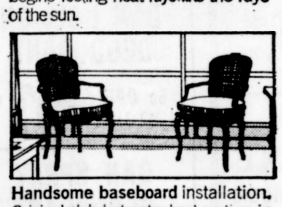

Heat eater. This 24-room house was heated for $15 a week with Radiant Electric Glassheat. It used to cost $24 with oil. No wonder the contractor was glad to guarantee the operating cost.

Thousands of people all over this country and Canada enjoyed Radiant Electric Glassheat in their houses and apartments last winter. Some people have been enjoying this amazingly comfortable, trouble-free heat for over 20 years.

Glassheat is the easiest heating system in the world to install. There are no ducts. No pipes. No tanks.

And Glassheat is direct heat. Unlike other heat systems that only warm the air, Glassheat warms you direct. Glassheat is almost instant heat; seconds after the panel is turned on, your skin begins feeling heat rays like the rays of the sun.

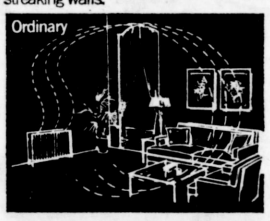

Handsome baseboard installation. Original slab hot-water heat system in this Levitt-built home ruptured. Conversion to Radiant Electric Glassheat was made easily.

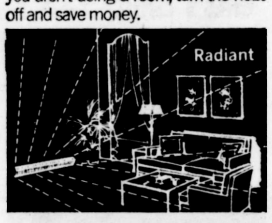

Clean heat. This Radiant Electric Glassheat wall panel never deposits a speck of dirt on these lacy curtains. For the first time in years the curtains haven't needed monthly washings.

Radiant heating with Glassheat. It "broadcasts" heat rays evenly. There's only a 2-degree temperature difference from floor to ceiling. With conventional heating systems, the difference may be as much as 20 degrees.

Since Glassheat is electric heat, there is no burning. So there is no dust or soot. No moving parts either, so there's nothing to break down. And you get a thermostat in each room. If you aren't using a room, turn the heat off and save money.

Why we can afford to guarantee the cost of operating Glassheat.

We expect you to spend less on heating after you install Radiant Electric Glassheat than you're spending right now. For one thing, electric heat is more efficient. No heat goes up the chimney. No heat is wasted in rooms you aren't using. And glass, which is the heart of Glassheat, loses heat more slowly than metal constructions. What's more, if you're in the Boston Edison or Massachusetts Electric area, your power company will give you a special low electric rate and a generous installation allowance. We're glad to tell you how much lower your annual heating bill will be with Glassheat—and guarantee it in writing.

In just a few minutes, without obligation, we can show you how Radiant Electric Glassheat will turn your house into a toasty warm, Florida resort, eliminate heating problems, and cut the cost of heat compared with your present system.

Fill out the coupon or call 237-3994 and ask for Bill Doherty.

Free Tulip Bulbs For Local Planting

With a little help now from its residents, Boston can be abloom with tulips next spring, says the city's Partners in Conservation Program, a cooperative effort of Summerthing and the Boston Parks and Recreation Department.

Partners in Conservation, which will continue its activities during the fall and winter, is now offering free tulip bulbs to any city resident for planting in a public or semi-public place such as a park, square, churchyard, public library or police station.

"The end of summer does not mean the end of our efforts to make Boston a brighter place in which to live," notes Sharon Weinstein of the Parks Department, "and one of the first and very important projects for the autumn season is the planting of bulbs for spring blooming."

Those interested in obtaining for their neighborhood bulbs and planting instructions should send a postcard or letter as soon as possible to Mrs. Sharon Weinstein or Mrs. Judy Wechsler, Boston Parks and Recreation Department, Room 802, City Hall, Boston, Mass. 02201.

This Week's Best Buys

Courtesy Massachusetts Department of Agriculture

An excellent crop of native potatoes has reached the market, says the Mass. Dept. of Agriculture, rating Best Buy status this week. These are matured Fall Katahdins, mostly from our Connecticut Valley farms, where some 5,100 acres are devoted to prime potatoes.

Roadside stands are offering 20 lbs. for as little as 79 cents, and 50-lb. bags at $1.98. They are solid, well - cured potatoes that will keep very well, so it will pay to stock up while prices are right.

A couple of traditional beliefs about the white potato are not so, says Guy Paris, MDA Market Investigator. First, White, or Irish potato is a native of South America, not having been introduced to Ireland until the late sixteenth century.

Second, the white potato is not the fattening food it is commonly thought to be. One medium sized potato contains no more calories than a large apple or a single baking powder biscuit of medium size. What's more important, it packs good food values, providing as much as a quarter of one's daily Vitamin C quota, as well as some of the B vitamins, iron and other important minerals, and starch.

Good quality potatoes are clean, firm and free from cuts, growths, cracks, knobs and other unsightly surface defects. They retain most of their food value when cooked in their jackets . . . and boiling conserves more vitamins than baking. So whether you're serving them mashed, parslied, creamed, hash - browned or in salad, start by boiling them in their jackets. If a scallop or soup recipe calls for raw potatoes, peel just before cooking, and keep the peelings thin. If you must peel them in advance, put them in salted water until time for use.

The MDA offers a free booklet entitled, "Potatoes in Your Reducing Diet." Write to Mass. Dept. of Agriculture, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston 02202.

All our Fall squashes, native cauliflower, cabbage and carrots top the list of other Best Buys this week, followed by cranberries, eggplant and peppers. Native apples are in full supply, of course, as well as fresh - made cider. Stock both for Hallowe'en — apples are great for trick - or - treaters — and if you get enough back from your own kids' collections, bake a mixed-apple pie!

Architecture Course Starts For Students

Al Hurwitz, Coordinator of Arts, Newton Public Schools, announces the opening of an evening course for high school students entitled Architecture — Community and Environment.

The class will meet on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. in the Art Office, Division of Instruction, 88 Chestnut Street, West Newton. There will be sixteen sessions, following the regular school calendar. The first class meeting was on October 21.

In addition to Mr. Belliveau there will be guest lecturers from a group of practicing architects and teachers who have volunteered their time so the course may operate on a level appropriate to this neglected but vital subject.

Anyone may attend. Teachers who feel the need to dig into this subject are welcome and the general public is invited. High school students may earn two credits if they are willing to engage in an individual or a group project as well as attend the evening sessions.

Cerebral Palsy Center Benefits From Charity Ball October 31st

The Activity Center for Cerebral Palsy in Newton will benefit from the proceeds of the Garden City Charity Ball to be held Halloween evening, October 31st at the Marriott Hotel in Auburndale.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Antonellis and Mr. and Mrs. William Lanciloti both of West Newton, are the chairmen and co-chairman.

Featured is Tony Bruno's Orchestra and entertainment is by the Men of Melody, Guy Rotondo, and Lee Daniels. An associated fund raising project, a raffle offering a cash prize of $1,000, will also benefit the Activity Center, and the drawing will be held at the Ball.

The proceeds from the Ball and Raffle will be used to buy special equipment for the Center. It is hoped that cerebral palsied persons can be transported there on a daily basis to learn skills that will enable them eventually to become self-supporting. All cerebral palsied persons, not only those from the Newton area, will be welcomed.

The Activity Center will be a part of a total community building to be built in the spring by Post 440, but the Ball's fund raising is specifically earmarked for Cerebral Palsy Activities in the center.

Newton Teacher Co-authors Text on Basic Engineering

Professor H. Jack Apfelbaum, beginning his second year on the faculty of Lowell Technological Institute department of mechanical engineering, is the co-author of a text in "Basic Engineering Sciences and Structural Engineering for Engineer-In-Training Examinations."

His collaborator on the comprehensive work is patent specialist Walter O. Otteson, a former colleague at Western New England College in Springfield.

The four-year project begun during Professor Apfelbaum's affiliation with the Springfeild college grew from a topical suggestion by its Hayden Book publishers. The result is now one of the company's series in the field of preparatory material for professional engineering registration.

The book is essentially an inclusive review of material that the reader is likely to encounter in engineer-in-training examinations, a requirement of recent graduates and practicing engineers preparing for professional licensure.

The text deals with the broad areas of background material in mathematics, physics, and chemistry, and the basic engineering sciences of statics, dynamics, fluid mechanics, thermodynamics, electricity, and engineering economy. It also contains a seven-chapter treatment of structural engineering.

Before joining the Tech faculty Professor Apfelbaum served as a consultant in technical education for the Indian Ministry and the Federal Agency for International Development.

He holds membership in the National Society of Professional Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the Indian Institute of Engineers.

He mades his home in West Newton at 28 Prince St.

Four Children Among 8 Hurt In Auto Crashes

Four children wer shaken up in a two-car crash in Newton on Friday, one of two separate accidents in which eight persons were injured. The youngsters were not hospitalized.

Mrs. Angelina Caruso, 29, of 16 Sharon avenue, Auburndale, was treated for bruises at Newton-Wellesley Hospital after her car collided with one driven by Bernice Sieronich of Framingham, in front of 1479 Washington Street, West Newton, according to police. Shaken up were the children of Mrs. Caruso, Tony 10, Nick 9, Elizabeth 8 and Sylvia 6.

Two cars collided at Lowell and Highland avenues and police identified the drivers as Mrs. Marjory P. Weiss, 43 of 40 Hampshire street, West Newton and Jacques Shapiro, 59, of 19 Whittier road, Newtonville. Both were treated at the hospital. Riding with Shaprio was his wife, Sara, 50, who was injured slightly.

Medical Team Led By Waban Scientist Treats Rare Disease

Dr. Peter H. Schur of 130 Nehoiden road, Waban, a medical scientist at Robert B. Brigham Hospital in Boston, and colleagues, have discovered and successfully treated a rare disease which exposes its victims to repeated and dangerous infections throughout their lives, and sometimes leads to death.

Working with his colleagues, Dr. Schur found unusual deficiencies in the gamma globulin antibodies of three patients who had been repeatedly hospitalized with serious infections of the skin, ears, and lungs.

Two sensitive research tools — immunoelectrophoresis and radial immunodiffusion — were used to uncover the specific gamma globulin deficiencies in the patient after the usual laboratory tests failed to give the doctors any clues.

Gamma globulin is an antibody made by plasma cells in the blood when the body's protective mechanisms are threatened by infection. Each plasma cell apparently makes a specific antibody designed to combat a specific infection.

Some persons — all men — are born without any plasma cells and make no gamma globulin whatsoever, a condition called agammaglobulinemia, and apparently hereditary in nature.

But Dr. Schur's patients were not all male. They were an eight year old boy, a 11 year old girl, and a 27 year old woman, all of whom had been plagued throughout their lives by a series of infections, and all of whom had what appeared to be normal antibody composition.

When their blood proteins were subjected to immunoelectrophoresis — a method in whch a delicate electric field separates the antibodies with slightly different electrical charges — and to radial immunodiffusion — however, the patients were found to be lacking several of the various types of gamma globulin antibodies.

Dr. Schur and his co-workers gave the patients injections of gamma globulin in the same way they treat male patients with agammaglobulin. None of the patients have had infections since.

The problem, reported in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, is particularly unusual because the patients appear to have plasma cells, unlike the patients with agammaglobulinemia, and no clear hereditary pattern on the disease could be found by studying the families of afflicted members. The cause of the antibody deficiencies remains a mystery.

Dr. Schur's interest in the problem grew out of the Robert B. Brigham's path - finding research into arthritis and related rheumatic diseases, in which antibodies are an important factor.

Newton Girl Is Red Cross Aide In Korea

Miss Patricia E. Schiavone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. M. Schiavone of 51 Baker Place, Newton, has arrived in Korea where she will serve one year as a recreation aide in the Red Cross Supplemental Recreation Activities Overseas (SRAO) program.

Miss Schiavone, a graduate of Newton High School, attended Northeastern University in Boston and received her bachelor's degree in history from Elmira College in Elmira, N.Y.

After completing two weeks of orientation and training at Red Cross National Headquarters in Washington, D.C., she flew directly to Korea.

As an SRAO girl, Miss Schiavone is one of a select group of young Women chosen to conduct informal recreation programs for American servicemen stationed in Korea. The Red Cross also conducts this program in Vietnam.

Working in teams of two, these young women may operate from a fixed center, where garrison type military installations are located, or from mobile units which travel by jeep, helicopter or truck and set up their fast - paced audience participation programs in unit mess tents, motor pools or anywhere they can find adequate space.

The Red Cross recreation programs in the two Asian countries encourage active soldier participation in activities that provide a relaxing break in routine and help keep young Americans in touch with home.

Quizzes, skits, music, informative discussion groups, and general fun programs are the order of the day when the Red Cross girls arrive on the scene.

Project for Elderly at Norumbega Gardens Dedicated by NH Authority

Norumbega Gardens, the latest devlopment of the Newton Housing Authority, recently was dedicated at a reception held at the community room of Norumbega Gardens on Ash street in Auburndale.

Invited guests included Mayor Monte G. Basbas, members of the Board of Aldermen, city department heads, representatives of Auburndale churches and civic associations, and Leon Charkoudian.

Norumbega Gardens is a Federally financed development containing 57 apartments for the elderly. In dedicating the development, Authority Chairman, Anthony J. Medaglia, Jr., stated that the Authority was also dedicating itself to the task of providing more housing for Newton's senior citizens and low income families.

In this connection Chairman Medaglia reviewed the current status of the Authority and reported that as of September 1, 1970 the Housing Authority had 226 units of elderly housing which it owned and 87 units in private dwellings leased to the elderly under the federal rent subsidy program.

In addition, the Authority had 42 units in private dwellings under lease to nonelderly low income families under the federal rent subsidy program. In these 42 units there were a total of 196 individuals.

Chairman Medaglia also stated that as of September 1, 1970 there were 86 eligible elderly applicants on the waiting list and 51 eligible non-elderly low income families.

Following the dedication ceremonies those present were taken on tours of typical apartments in the development.

Transamazon Highway To Be Dirt and Gravel

A road through the almost untracked vastness of Brazil's Amazon Basin has been little more than a dream until this year.

Leaders of the military-backed government of President Emilio Garrastazu Medici say the time for action has come. Not only do they believe the 3,000-mile-long Amazon Basin can be conquered, but they also maintain that much of the job can be done in as little time as a year and a half.

Key to the program is building the 1,200-mile rush-order "Transamazon Highway." This stretch of highway, connecting the small towns of Porto Franco and Humaita, will hook up with another series of jungle roads now in existence.

When this link is completed, a truck driver with enough nerve and enough luck will be able to drive 3,000 miles from the Peruvian border to Brazil's Atlantic coast cities.

In fact, once other links are built with existing Peruvian jungle roads, it will be possible for a driver to travel coast-to-coast right through the middle of the Amazon Basin.

"This opening of the frontier will change the face of the nation," Finance Minister Antonio Delfim Neto said. "The highways will transform into a fact what is today simply potential."

Titled "Plan of National Integration," the highway project would include another 600-mile highway linking the Amazon port of Aantarem with Cuiaba further south.

Three-fold Purpose

The government has a three-fold purpose in building the roads. The main goal is to settle the unpopulated Amazon Basin itself, and in addition exploit deposits of iron ore, manganese, diamonds and other minerals believed in the area, as well as offer new lands to thousands of impoverished farmers in drought - plagued northeastern Brazil.

The first stage of development will take about four years and cost an estimated $445 million. Construction companies will be given a tax discount of 30 per cent. Government officials hope the major road building part of the task can be completed in 18 months.

The government plans to expropriate six mile strips of land on either side of the highways and parcel it out to migrating farmers.

The first version of the Transamazon Highway will be a far cry from American turnpikes. The 1972 version of the completed road will be of dirt and gravel. To cross the wide tributaries of the mighty Amazon River, the highway department plans to use balsa raft ferries.

Navy Airman With 'Deep Freeze' Unit

Navy Airman Apprentice Salvatore J. Puccia, husband of the former Miss Jean M. Blakeney of 36 Green street, Newton, is participating in Operation "Deep Freeze" 1971 with Antarctic Development Squadron Six in Antarctica. The squadron provides logistical support to scientists of the Antarctic Research Program.

Bit Role

French star Alain Delon will play a bit role in Columbia's "Diamond Bikini" after visiting the set in Italy to see his girl friend, Mireille Darc, who plays a leading role.

Carey scion

Tom Carey, grandson of Harry Carey, will play the son-in-law of Walter Matthau in "Plaza Suite."

Your back ache really can't be cured by having someone play on it like a piano. If you're bothered by a persistent, nagging, back ache, see a qualified physician and you'll avoid a discord, advises the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Women From 5 Churches To Hold Meeting

The churchwomen of Auburndale will hold a Womens' Ecumenical Dessert meeting on Wednesday evening, October 28, at 8 p.m., at The Church of the Messiah on Auburn St. and Commonwealth Ave.

Women from the Auburndale Congregational Church, the Centenary Methodist Church, Corpus Christi Roman Catholic Church, Myrtle Baptist Church of West Newton, and the Episcopal Church of the Messiah will be welcome to participate.

Following dessert will be a short program during which the five women's organizations' presidents will present their year's programs. This will be followed by musical entertainment.

On Tuesday evening November 17th the Tuesday Evening Club of the Church of the Messiah in Auburndale will present Edythe Wagman, cosmetician of the Cosmetique in Wellesley, who will discuss beauty and make-up.

She will have samples at no charge and a door prize will be given. Refreshments will follow.

The program will be held at the church on Commonwealth Ave., and Auburn St.

Mexico travel boost

Travel agents in the United States are agreed an increase in their Mexican business will be shown this year, says the Mexican National Tourist Council.

In a poll of 2,000 travel agents, 96 percent said they expected an increase. A 10 to 20 percent boost was forecast by 59 percent of the respondents; 15 percent expected a 25 to 50 percent rise, and 2 percent foresaw a 100 percent increase. The others didn't specify the gain they expected.

Homework

Canning fruits and vegetables has become popular again, says a home economist.

Ethel Diedrichsen, University of Nebraska extension food and nutrition specialist, said there are several factors in the upsurge in home canning. These include the rising cost of living, the preference for canned food over frozen food and the sense of accomplishment felt by the homemaker when she surveys the results.

Ten per cent of American Indians over 14 years old never went to school and 60 percent have less than an eighth grade education.

The Biggest Roast Beef in Boston

You'd better believe it.

And here's what keeps him honest. If he ever once carves you a slice of roast beef that weighs less than a pound and a half, you get a second slice free. And he's in deep trouble.

So he makes sure every juicy, succulent slice completely covers the big, oversize platter it's served on.

Here's what comes with your roast beef: a nice big salad, ice cold and crisp. A nice big baked potato with sour cream. Your choice of vegetables. And a golden Yorkshire popover swimming in butter. It's not so much a dinner as a challenge. A roast beef lover's Everest.

Meet that challenge tonight, why not? Just because it's there.

Call Frederick for reservations.

Guilty Verdict In Police Officer Assault Trial

Judge Francis J. Larkin in Newton District Court returned a verdict of guilty on Monday against Allen Johnson, 26, of 30 Hane street, Allston, on a charge of assault and battery on a Newton police officer.

Johnson also was found guilty on a charge of being a disorderly person. Judge Larkin continued the case until Oct. 29 for sentencing.

Louis J. Liggiero, 26, of 17 Lawrence street, Wilmington, was found guilty of being disorderly, and fined $25. He was found innocent of a charge of assault and battery on a police officer.

Both men were arrested as a result of an incident on Sept. 8 at West Ford, 773 Washington st., Newtonville. According to testimony during two days of trial, Newton police received a call for a disturbance at West Ford and Police Officer Daniel M. Donovan Jr., was the first to respond.

The West Ford service manager, Robert Superior, testified that Johnson struck him in the eye and also struck him with a car Johnson allegedly was attempting to drive from the premises without paying for repairs.

Further it was testified that Johnson struck Officer Donovan when he arrived. Also it was testified that Liggiero jumped on Officer Donovan's back when he subdued Johnson. Order was restored when police reinforcements arrived.

PREPARING CHRISTMAS JOY FOR OVERSEAS — A group of Newton Servicemen's wives and young people are busily engaged packing Christmas Gift Bags for shipment to military personnel in Southeast Asia.

Red Cross Volunteers Prepare Gift Bags For Southeast Asia

For a number of years now the Newton Red Cross has joined with others across the country in a nationwide project to make and fill gift bags to be distributed to U.S. servicemen and servicewomen stationed in Southeast Asia at the Christmas season.

Newton Red Cross once again has been asked to make and fill 500 such bags. They are to be made of sturdy red and green cotton material, so they will be serviceable to their owners after the original contents, are used.

Mrs. Daniel Kagno, Newton Chapter's Chairman of this project, says this is a tangible way for Americans to say we care about our military stationed in Southeast Asia.

"... It was so nice of you all to meet the Rev. Balcom. because I thought everyone had forgot about the American fighting man over here. But I see now that the Red Cross cares about us ..."

Proof of this is in the following excerpts from servicemen who have written Newton Red Cross their appreciation for these gifts.

"... As a career Marine, a husband and father and most of all an American, your gift makes me proud, and thankful to be able to have the privilege of being able to call myself an American ..."

"... Since I have been in Vietnam I have been so lonely because everyone else in the States have forgot abut the men in Vietnam buy you can always depend on the Red Cross to come through because the Red Cross never forgets about us ..."

"It really meant a lot to me that someone cares, and I'm sure that most of the fellows feel the same. If you would have seen the faces of some you would have known the job was well done."

The servicemen's wives who assisted in this project realize only too well how much these Christmas gifts mean to the men far away, and willingly lent their time and effort to this program.

Membership in the servicemen's wives group is open to all wives of servicemen awaiting their return. Those interested should call 527-6000 for information.

Candidates Guests At Ward Meeting of Democrats Here

The Ward 7 Democratic Committe held their monthly meeting at the Grace Episcopal Church on Eldridge St., Newton Corner, on October 13th.

The guest speakers were Irving Fishman, candidate for State Senator; Paul Guzzi and Paul Malloy, candidates for State Representatives; and John Dever, candidate for Sheriff. The candidates spoke about their present campaigns and answered questions about various issues that were brought up by the audience.

William Carmen, Ward 7 Alderman, reported to the Committee some of the highlights from the Board of Aldermen. He cited the fact that there are now no sites available for N.C.D.F. Mr. Carmen, who hopes that N.C.D.F. proposal can be brought to fruition, has suggested a public residence zoning. There will be a public hearing on November 9.

It was also learned that the Drug Committee of the Board of Aldermen met with Dr. Joseph Sabbath, who gave the Board a complete report of his findings so far. Mr. Carmen also pointed out that the Newton Housing Authority will be meeting soon to vote on two appointments. He also mentioned that Democratic Headquarters for local candidates has been opened at 660 Washington St., Newton.

Mr. Joseph Michelson of Park St. again mentioned before the Committee his distress with the traffic situation at certain points on Waverly Ave., in regard to the safety of children going to and from school.

He acknowledged that Mr. Carmen has been most helpful in bringing this to the attention of the proper departments, but nothing has been done. Mr. Michelson stated that numerous parents in that area have requested a policewoman at Cotton and Waverly during school walking hours.

Mr. Douglas Perry of 254 Tremont St. was nominated and elected as a Ward Committee member. Mr. Perry had previously had been an associate member.

Mr. Peter Kilborn of 145 Gibbs St., representing Mayor White and Michael Dukakasis, spoke of their need for campaign help in Ward 7. Girl Scouts To Hold Car Wash This Saturday

A car-wash and bake-sale — dubbed a "Slop and Shop" — will be held on Saturday, October 24, from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon, by Cadette Girl Scout Troop 596, Bay Path Colonial Council, in the parking lot of Warren Junior High School, 1600 Washington St., West Newton. In case of rain, the event will take place November 7.

This drive is being held to bolster the troop treasury, proceeds going toward the cost of the troop's trip to Washington, D.C., during April vacation, 1971.

The troop will travel by bus and stay at the U.S.A. Girl Scout National Program Center — "Rockwood" — in nearby Potomac, Maryland. The girls will be "cabin camping," — cooking their own breakfasts and suppers there, and commuting to Washington for sight-seeing each day.

They will be accompanied by Mrs. David Kendall, Leader; Mrs. Dorothy Robertson, Assistant Leader; and Mrs. Halcombe Laning, Newton Girl Scout Consultant.

The trip to Washington will be the highlight of the year. Other troop plans include a Halloween party, progressive dinner, camping trips, and service projects. They will also hostess a program for all Newton Cadettes and Seniors concerning National and International Opportunities for Girl Scouts.

Mrs. Kendall recently returned from a trip to Brazil with ten Senior Girl Scouts from all over the U.S., under the sponsorship of the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund, to which all U.S. Girl Scouts contribute in honor of their Founder.

Clean Air Group Meets Monday

Newton Citizens for Clean Air will hold a public meeting Monday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. at the First Unitarian Society, 1326 Washington street, West Newton.

Mrs. Lois Pines will speak on air pollution in Newton, with particular reference to the municipal incinerator, and will discuss the new state air pollution regulations.

Another speaker will be Dr. James MacKenzie, Physicist, lecturer at MIT and research associate of the Mass. Audubon Society. As a member of the Union of Concerned Scientists at MIT, he evaluated the Mass. Dept. of Public Health's standards for air quality, and assisted the Metropolitan Boston Citizen's Coalition for Clean Air in their fight for strict air pollution measures last year.

An "ecoskit" demonstration will be performed to highlight environmental problems.

Basbas Charges Opponent, "Spawning Phoney Issues"

Mayor Monte G. Basbas of Newton today charged that his opponent "was spawning phoney issues", and challenged him "to seriously consider the important issues and problems of the new State Senatorial District of Watertown and Newton."

"My opponent," Basbas declared, "neglects dealing with vital matters affecting the taxpayers of the District by creating a smokescreen of frivilous and phoney issues he use instead."

"The issues are obviously phoney", Basbas declared, "since my opponent who is a fulltime practicing attorney and real estate manager is himself of necessity and in fact a part-time legislator".

"Since he was first elected Representative it is a matter of offical record that my opponent missed at least five hundred vital roll calls of the legislature - fifty-five in the recent session alone", Basbas noted.

"Voters want something more from their candidates than immature slogans. They want to know what we will do about the hard facts of present day life - crime, high taxes, pollution, drug abuse, and housing, among others."

Pointing to his record as Chief Executive of the City of Newton, Mayor Basbas said:

"My addition of patrolmen and the newest equipment available to the city's police force has kept Newton's crime rate far below the national average."

"Appointed by two Massachusetts Governors to serve on three state councils dealing with law enforcement and correction, I established the country's first city-wide Crime Prevention Committee and instituted a "Crime Check" program aimed at citizen participation in reducing crime."

"I lead the fight against irresponsible and unchecked spending by County, State, and other agencies which results in high assessments on our communities."

"Under my administration, Newton was the first city in Massachusetts to ban leaf-burning and to order the use low sulphur content fuel by city buildings in our fight against pollution."

"I took positive action long before public awareness of the problem reached its peak. More than one and one half years ago I formed a Drug Study Committee to work with police and school authorities to determine the extent and nature of the problem and to encourage efforts to curtail it."

"Voters are also entitled to know where we stand on the serious problem of housing. Under my leadership, available federal funds have been sought and utilized to provide housing for the elderly on a scattered, low density basis, as well as leased housing for the financially distressed."

"These are some of the vital issues voters want to hear about. It is time that my opponent quit evading them and told the electorate where he stands on these issues and others with which I have had extensive executive experience and about which I have been talking with the voting public."

"After all", Mayor Basbas concluded, "it is in the cities and towns where the day to day action is, and I beleive my nineteen years of practical experience in dealing with problems of the State's eighth largest city fully qualifies me to provide quality representation for our District of Watertown and Newton."

A PERSONAL STATEMENT

It is difficult for an individual citizen to make his voice heard during an election campaign. One way — perhaps the only way — is to place an advertisement in the local newspaper. This I have now done because I am deeply disturbed at the low level of the campaign being waged by Mayor Basbas. His front page advertisement in the Graphic last week was an incredible insult to a man re-elected 4 times to represent several thousand people in Newton. It was an affront to the voters of Newton and Watertown. It was unworthy of the Mayor of Newton. A candidate who would wage this type of campaign should not represent our Senatorial district.
I urge other voters to join me in obtaining dignity and integrity in government by electing Mr. Fishman as our State Senator.

First Meeting Nov. 14 At Sacred Heart

Catholic Parish Councils Plan Social Issues Study

A new force taking shape in the Catholic Church in the City of Newton, and throughout the Archdiocese of Boston, is the formation of Parish Councils.

Each is a body of dedicated laymen elected by the parish as a whole to share in the decision making and implementation of the work of their Parish.

Ordinarily each Parish Council contains a Christian Service Commission chairman whose committee is charged with the responsibility of bringing aid to individuals in need, and to work for social justice, especially for those who are weak and poor.

While these Commissions are fairly new, the majority being only a few months old, already they are facing the fact that most human problems and needs have a scope and a range of causes which exceed the bounds of their individual parishes.

In response to this growing awareness, a unique endeavor is taking place in the City of Newton: beginning with a meeting of Christian Service Commission chairmen from three parishes last April, a monthly conference has evolved which now includes among its participants the Christian Service Commission chairmen and other representatives from all eight Catholic parishes within the City of Newton.

Calling their informal gathering "The Joint Christian Service Commission Conference of Newton," they meet to exchange information on parish programs and human needs, to encourage each other in the difficult pursuit of social justice, and to find ways to cooperate on problems and issues which go beyond their individual parish resources.

Their first cooperative undertaking is being planned for November 14 at Sacred Heart Parish, and will consist of a "Day of study and planning" in order to "redefine the just society." Topics on agenda are: welfare, taxation, housing and racism.

VOTERS OF NEWTON:
YOU HAVE A CHOICE FOR STATE SENATOR!

1. Our opponent — full-time lawyer, real estate owner/manager and part-time Representative (he has missed over 550 vital roll call votes since he was first elected — 55 this session alone).

This is record on some of the vital issues of the day:

- CRIME — he voted for quicker parole for those convicted of crimes against the person — armed robbery, assault with intent to kill, child molesting.
- HIGH COUNTY COSTS — when Mayor Basbas called for legislative support to fight high Middlesex County assessments, the Representative missed the meeting.
- HIGH TAXES — he was absent on the petition to ask the Federal government to take over the welfare system.
- ELDERLY HOUSING — he missed the votes (twice) when bond issues on these vital projects were being voted.

2. MONTE G. BASBAS — Mayor of Newton and President of the Mass. Mayors' Association — 19 years in government service at the city and town level, where over 80% of us live. HE KNOWS OUR PROBLEMS.

This is his record on these issues:

- CRIME — established the country's first city-wide "Crime Check" program; added patrolmen and newest equipment to Newton Police force which has kept that city's crime rate far below the national average; appointed by two Governors to serve on 3 State councils dealing with law enforcement and correction.
- HIGH COUNTY COSTS — Basbas leads the fight against irresponsible and unchecked spending by county governments.
- HIGH TAXES — Basbas initiated the drive for state takeover of education costs; has fought to correct the state's formula for distribution of finances so local governments don't pay out more in assessments than they receive in aid.
- ELDERLY HOUSING — under Basbas leadership, federal funds have been used to provide housing for the elderly on a scattered, low-density basis, as well as leased housing for the financially distressed.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR U.S. SENATE

Peace in the Middle East, the world's trouble spot, is now possible. A new opportunity exists to solve the real problem — the plight of the Palestinian Arab. The United States should seize the initiative at once and exert an even, firm hand.

We cannot continue the destruction of Indo-China under the guise of preserving United States honor. We must get our troops out faster, and completely. The money devoted to the war must be turned over to the solution of domestic problems.

We must create, pass and enforce legislation today which will ensure equal treatment under the law for every segment of our population.

America's challenge is to root out the causes which nourish and produce crime, as well as to bring about reforms in our court and prison systems.

I support President Nixon's work incentive welfare reform bill and his revenue sharing concept.

Population control is the crucial issue of our time. Over-population is the basic cause of pollution, poverty, crime and many of our other social ills.

Politicians and the media tend to exploit people's frustrations and fears. It is not a question of being for or against the young or the black. We are for them. We must practice what we preach and when we do, we can all work together in a better system.

WHITE WOULD LEGALIZE BETTING; SARGENT AGREES TO DEBATE

MAYOR KEVIN WHITE said Wednesday he will legalize off-track betting if elected governor and will use the revenue to alleviate property tax burdens. His Republican opponent, incumbent Governor Francis W. Sargent said he had changed his mind and would debate issues of the campaign with White at any time. Sargent said the reason he changed his mind about debating his Democrat opponent was because White had accused him of cowardice. Mayor White told a news conference his plan to legalize off-track betting would raise $100 million in new state revenue. "All taxes will be paid voluntarily by people who choose to bet," he said. The plan involves a State Betting Corporation which will regulate the placing of bets in offices around the state. The state will keep 15 per cent of the money bet on horse races and 17 per cent of the bets on harness and dog racing. "Property taxes in Massachusetts rose by an average of 16 per cent in 1970 and the tax level in most cities and towns is reaching the crisis stage," White said. "This proposal will not solve all tax problems, but it will provide significant relief quickly at no cost to the average homeowner who does not bet." White contended his proposal would put all the revenue from off-track betting into municipal treasuries. "Each city and town will decide for itself by referendum if it will participate in this plan — and state aid would be given only to those communities that vote to participate," he said. White estimated that $750 million is illegally wagered in Massachusetts each year, giving organized crime a profit of $230 million. "Many police officials place the figure a lot higher," he said. "No taxes are levied on this illegal gambling and the police have been unable to eliminate it."

JUDGE ADLOW ASSAILS REPORT CRITICIZING COURTS

BOSTON Municipal Court Chief Justice Elijah Adlow charged Wednesday a report critical of the city's criminal courts was prepared by "intense partisans in the class struggle" who defend "rioters and demonstrators" at the taxpayers' expense. The report, submittted last week to the Governor's Committee on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice, said "certain lower criminal courts in Greater Boston seriously abuse principles of fairness and due process "by discriminating against the poor in favor of the rich." The report was sponsored by the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, but Adlow said the Massachusetts Law Reform Institute and the Boston Legal Assistance project were acknowledged to have participated in its preparation. "These projects were reportedly set up to help indigent defendants," Adlow said. "The only time I have ever seen its members in court is on occasions when rioters and demonstrators have been brought to justice."

NIXON STUMPS FLORIDA'S GULF COAST FOR GOP CANDIDATES

PRESIDENT NIXON, his pant legs drenched with water from a barrel overturned on him by a surging crowd, stumped Florida's Gulf Coast area Wednesday before moving on to Texas in his bid to seat a friendly U.S. Senate. The President was greeted in Tallahassee, Florida's capital city, by a crowd of about 2,000 including Harrold G. Carswell, the former federal appeals judge who was rejected by the Senate after Nixon appointed him to the U. S. Supreme Court. Carswell introduced Nixon as a man who will "stand up to bombers, radicals . . . and the wild-eyed liberals on the Supreme Court." Carswell also heaped praise on Rep. William C. Cramer, the man who defeated him in a bid for the Republican senatorial nomination. Cramer's candidacy was the main reason for Nixon's visit to Florida, although Republican Gov. Claude Kirk, who is seeking reelection, was also at the President's side throughout the visit.

GOP STRATEGIST DISCOUNTS RUMOR AGNEW TO BE DROPPED

MURRAY CHOTINER, President Nixon's longtime political strategist, Wednesday called speculation that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew might be dropped from the 1972 presidential ticket "wishful thinking on the part of his enemies." He said "I have never heard anyone inside the White House even suggest such a thing," said Clotiner, a White House adviser who has been instrumental in helping plan Nixon strategy ever since his first race for the House. Chotiner discounted claims that Agnew's attacks on GOP Sen. Charles E. Goodell of New York as a "radical liberal" who had deserted his party and produced dissension within the party and unhappiness with Agnew. "I don't know of a single GOP chairman who did not want him (Agnew) to come into their state," Chotiner declared. "I don't think there's any question that his popularity within the party is quite high."

VOLPE ANNOUNCES $11,675,000 AID TO NEW HAVEN LINE

TRANSPORTATION Secretary John A. Volpe announced Wednesday an $11,675,000 grant to improve commuter service on the Penn Central's New Haven line. The grants bring to $40 million the amount allocated to bring about "a massive upgrading of the New Haven service," one of the largest commuter lines in the nation. The grant was made in equal parts to the Connecticut Transportation Authority. The $40 million will provide 50 per cent of the funds the New Haven plans to spend on the purchase of 144 new cars, modernization of 100 old cars, and station improvements.

BIG-FOUR ENVOYS MEET TO DISCUSS MIDDLE EAST CRISIS

THE U.N. AMBASSADORS of the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France met Wednesday in New York for the 46th time to disuss the crisis in the Middle East where the Arab-Israeli cease-fire is scheduled to expire in a little more than a week. There was no report of any progress but the Big Four envoys set their next session for Nov. 9 — four days after the scheduled end of the U.S.-initiated 90-day truce. Observers said it indicated belief that the cease-fire will continue. The Big Four ambassadors met at the Soviet mission in New York only hours before the U.N. General Assembly debate on the Middle East resumed.

B52 BOMBERS TO PRESS SATURATION RAIDS ON SUPPLY TRAIL

B52 STRATOFORTRESSES will press on with saturation raids against the Ho Chi Minh supply trail in Laos throughout the forthcoming dry season, U.S. military sources said Wednesday. The bombers flew above a storm which stopped U.S. air operations in Vietnam. For the past three weeks, the eight-engine B52s have concentrated on the Communist supply line in Laos, dropping upwards of 20,000 tons of bombs in a move to destroy what reconnaisance reports described as the largest flow of weapons and ammunition in months. U.S. commanders want to stop as much of the flow as possible before it leaves the trail complex and moves into South Vietnam and Laos. Military sources in Saigon said that in the past only 18 per cent of the supplies have been halted inside Laos despite bombing.

More Than 40,000 To Cast Ballots Tuesday

More than 40,000 Newton voters are expected to go to their polling places next Tuesday to record their choices in an important state and national election.

Political experts predict that 85 per cent of the city's 48,910 registered voters will turn out as a result of the keen public interest engendered by the various election battles.

The polls will be open from 7 o'clock in the morning until 8 at night.

Everyone in line at 8 p.m. will be allowed to vote.

A police officer will be placed at the end of the line at the 8 p.m. deadline at each of the city's 33 polling places, and all persons in line ahead of him will be permitted to cast their votes.

Automatic voting machines will be used in all the polling booths.

A request that all persons who can do so vote during the middle of the day, was made today by Executive Secretary Alan W. Licarie of the city's election department.

Licarie declared that the voting in Newton will be the heaviest in the early morning and after 5 p.m. at night.

He asserted that the voting in Newton's polling places will be slowed down by thewrite-in voting in the congressional contest and because of the number of questions on the ballot.

Executive Secretary Licarie urged all persons to examine the specimen ballots and digest the various questions before entering the voting machines to record their decisions.

Licarie pointed out that in addition to the election contests, six questions will be listed on the ballot and that the liquor question has four sections.

Accepts Honor As Challenge

400 See Judge Rose Given Chamber Achievement Award

Cited as the "architect of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the Hon. Judge David A. Rose, Newton resident and Mass. Superior Court Judge was honored Tuesday night as the recipient of the 1970 Achievement Award presented by the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

Close to 400 Chambers members, wives and invited guests were on hand for the dinner dance in the main ballroom at the Marriott Motor Hotel to watch Judge Rose become the 12th recipient of the highly coveted award.

Remarking that he considered it a particular honor to receive the honor from his home community he said it serves as an "incentive". "I accept this award not as a terminus to my activities but as a challenge for increasing and continuing them."

The Judge was acclaimed by a host of speakers for his countless contributions both in the courts and through B'nai B'rith and other organizations in promoting the cause of human relations.

The presentation was made by Chamber president Victor A. Nicolazzo.

A native of Boston, Rose is a graduate of Boston University, and both the B.U. and Georgetown University Law Schools. He served first on the bench as an associate Judge of the Dorchester Municipal Court.

He has served on the Jewish Community Council in Boston, the Law Society of Mass, and the Boston Brandeis University Associates.

In Newton he has served on the Community Relations Commission as its vice chairman, is a member of the executive committee of the Newton Mental Health Association and as a Trustee of Temple Emmanuel.

This is the second community award received by Judge Rose as he was the first resident to receive the Mayor's Award for Distinguished Service in the Field of Human Rights in 1968.

Further acknowledging the Chamber's presentation Rose said he regarded the honor as one recognizing more the spectrum of activities in the field of human relations, "which have advanced tremendously in the past 20 years", than one

PTA Cites Health Hazard At School

A representative of the PTA at the Lincoln - Eliot School charged on Monday night that the city of Newton is violating health codes in not providing more adequate facilities and improving conditions at that school.

Mrs. Barbara Mooney, president of the PTA, told the Newton School Committee that parents of children at the Lincoln - Eliot School have been talking to the Committee about needs at that building for two-and-a-half years, and in that time problems of overcrowding and over-utilization of space have grown more acute.

By 1972 each grade will require three classrooms and there is no place to put the additional class revisions, a building report, presented by Mrs. Mooney stated. The PTA requested a recommitment of the necessity of an addition to Lincoln-Eliot.

The newest problem, the report pointed out, is the need for a covered walkway through a presently open courtyard. Two fifth and sixth grades are housed on the basement level and separated by the gym. Due to the team teaching in these grades it is necessary to change classes through the courtyard. One third grade is also housed on the ground floor and has to go through the open courtyard to use the gym. "It is imperative that an enclosed shelter be built in the courtyard to protect the health of these five classes before the further onset of winter," the report declared.

John Gilleland, assistant superintendent for business services, reported that some funds for the project may now be available as the result of the cancellation of a proposed project at the Ward School.

Gilleland was asked by the School Committee to see if this need and some others which might fall in the area of school maintenance be looked into as soon as possible.

The PTA's building report also pointed to the inadequate toilet facilities in the school.

Trick or Treat In Newton for UNICEF

This week, several million American youngsters will be out to remind us of the United Nations Children's Fund, a U.N. agency that works quietly, year in and year out, away from the political spotlight, to further the cause of world peace and understanding.

In many communities across the land they'll ring doorbells on October 31st to "Trick or Treat for UNICEF," a most constructive way to celebrate Halloween.

In Newton, students in the elementary schools will have the opportunity to pick up their small orange UNICEF collection boxes at school and take them home to fill with money they have earned or saved themselves, and to receive donations from family and friends.

The Newton Community Peace Center, 474 Centre Street, Newton Corner, is serving as sponsor and coordinator of this drive, with Mrs. John Webber as chairman.

Assisting her are Mrs. William Kantar, Mrs. Herman

$8,500 Play Area Sought For School

A request for a play area at a cost of about $8,500 for the Claflin School in Newtonville was made to the School Committee on Monday night by Charlotte F. Howard, principal.

Recommendations for the project were drawn up by Jeffry H. Gilbert, a landscape architect and a parent of children at the elementary school.

He said his proposal would provide 30,000 to 40,000 square feet of additional grassed play area, would organize and protect from traffic the paved play areas as well as retain the existing slopes for free play. At the present time in the Claflin area "we have no controlled outdoor public recreation space that elementary school age children can safely use, either during school hours or after school," Gilbert said in a letter to the principal.

The recommendation for a play area was supported by Helene D. Breivogel, supervisor, health and physical education; Barbara Morton, physical education teacher; John B. Penney, recreation commissioner for the city of Newton; and

Police Chief Asks Halloween Caution

Autumn hazards are detrimental to both pedestrians and motor vehicle operators, Chief Quinn said today.

The fall foliage is beautiful but fallen leaves become very dangerous to motorists when they are wet. Drive slowly and avoid skidding.

"Trick or Treators" will also be out in force on Halloween. Extra caution must be exercised to protect them.

With daylight saving time now in effect, darkness will be with us both driving to and from work. Use caution and adjust summer driving habits to Autumn's dusk, Chief Quinn advises.

Sargent and White Nearing Tuesday's Hour of Decision

Governor Francis W. Sargent and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White are coming down to their hour of decision and the moment of truth in their fight to become the next Governor of Massachusetts.

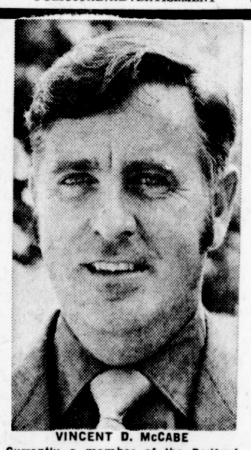

The voters next Tuesday will tap one and reject the other.

Governor Sargent is the favorite and Mayor White the underdog as a result of the illness which felled White, necessitated surgery and hospitalization and interrupted his campaign at a critical time.

But White is a potent and sturdy underdog, and he might just produce an upset when the votes are tabulated next Tuesday night, despite the polls and surveys which point to Sargent's election.

HAD ENOUGH?

Since the County Commissioners appointed our present Register of Deeds last November, the following events have transpired.

The Register of Deeds office was completely remodeled in the old Court house scheduled to be torn down soon.

The 1970 budget was increased by over $400,000 — an unbelievable increase. Any housewife could save money with such a ballooned budget.

The volume of business at the Registry in 1970 is less than 1969. Yet more full time employees were hired. In 1969 there were about fifty summer workers hired. Yet in 1970, with less work, close to one hundred workers were hired.

No magic wand can change Middlesex County Government. It can only be done by you. I believe I can help effect a change.

Good Riddance?

Dr. Timothy Leary is on a new trip.

The author, one-time college-level psychology lecturer of various cults based on mind-expanding drugs like LSD and most recently a drop-out from a California jail, appears to have adopted Algeria as the new home base for his operations.

During his evangelistic days as high priest of the psychedelic faithful in this country, many charges were made against Dr. Leary. Few, if any, of his critics believed he was prone to physical violence.

Now, in a "thank-you" note to radicals who helped him flee this country, he writes, "Warning: I am armed and should be considered dangerous to anyone who threatens my freedom."

Beyond that free ad printed in a New York underground publication, comes word from Algiers that after a brief spell in his new refuge, the 50-year-old fugitive was taking a side trip to a secret guerilla camp in Jordan to study guerilla warfare.

Of course, his stay in Algeria will depend on how he gets along with another American fugitive, Eldridge Cleaver, and other American expatriates. More importantly, American runaway fugitives will have to be careful they give no offence to the Algerian government. It's tough and it has long experience with renegades.

The Algerians didn't invent guerilla warfare, but they were good enough at that art to pin down half the French army while they shook up the economic and political life of France.

Fleeing a jail sentence in this country, Cleaver stopped off in Cuba. His stay was comparatively brief. Apparently, Castro is suspicious of revolutionaries who don't carry his own Made-in-Cuba brand. When Leary set up shop in Mexico, he got himself in wrong with that government. U.S. narcotic agents were on this side of the international boundary when he got booted out.

Like Cuba, Algiers will encourage anti-American propaganda from U.S. exiles. However, Algeria will crack down with vigorous, effective force when the Cleavers, the Leary, the Dohrns and their ilk try to sell their philosophies for local consumption.

Meanwhile, the U.S. will be saving a little money on food and board bills in crowded American prisons.

Puerto Rican Migration

During the first eight months of 1970, 93,230 Puerto Ricans moved from their island homes to the United States mainland.

With only a few exceptions the migrants were fleeing a severe slump which has seen their homeland's economy shrink and its toll of unemployment climb sharply. The economic reversal follows the fiscal period from June, 1968, to June, 1969, when the gross national product went up 10 per cent, employment increased 5 per cent and immigrants to the island exceeded the number leaving it by 7000.

Most of the record-breaking number of islanders coming to the mainland this year are settling in New York, although Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and New Jersey cities are receiving many.

The problems they are leaving behind them are many and complex. The problems they face on the mainland are also many and complex.

It is estimated there are 1.8 million first, second and third-generation natives of Puerto Rico living on the mainland, more than half, close to a million, in New York City.

According to Puerto Rican Labor Department's immigration division in New York, about 1000 men, women and children a week visit its offices. They plead for jobs and basic human assistance. The newcomers not only face the handicaps of strangers. There is the stern barrier of language. Add to that a lack of education, sometimes in its most rudimentary form; a sparsity of jobs and a severe lack of even near-adequate housing.

No large American city today can boast the resources required to meet the cruel situation. If it is not at a crisis level today, it will soon reach that point.

Obviously, it is a very real problem to which the federal government must address itself sooner or later and the sooner the better. Since 1950, migration to the U.S. has pretty closely mirrored the ups and downs of the economy of the island.

The migration answer doesn't lie with the municipal government of New York, Boston, Bridgeport, Chicago, Newark, Philadelphia or the other cities which are attracting the migrants. Washington and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico hold the real keys.

Indications are that Senator Edward M. Kennedy will win reelection by about 600,000 votes and that Attorney General Robert H. Quinn will roll up a plurality in the vicinity of 400,000 votes.

That means something approaching a Democratic tide will be rolling, and it is bound to help White.

Some of our readers are sure to write in and point out that Ted Kennedy won reelection by more than a million votes in 1964 when Republican John A. Volpe defeated Democrat Francis X. Bellotti for the Governorship.

That is true, but the situation was somewhat different then. Bellotti had defeated a sitting Governor in the primary, and it was impossible to pull together the Democratic party and get the disappointed Peabody followers on the line behind Bellotti.

The Sargent-White contest appears to be the only state-wide election fight which is in any doubt. All the other Democratic candidates running state-wide are expected to be elected. Ted Kennedy will pile up the greatest plurality.

If Kevin White can come through with a blazing finish, he might make it a Democratic sweep at the top of the ticket. He is hampered and handicapped as he comes down to the wire, but it would be folly to count him out of the race.

The bread and butter issue in the campaign between Governor Sargent and Mayor White is jobs and the national economy. The rise in unemployment will help White. Whether it will help enough to turn the tide for him is a question the returns will answer next Tuesday night.

Philbin-Drinan-McGlennon Battle Extraordinary One

An extraordinary three-way battle is being waged for the seat on Capitol Hill now held by veteran Congressman Philip J. Philbin.

Father Robert F. Drinan, former dean of the Boston College Law School, is rated a favorite by a majority of the political observers in what is a confused situation.

Congressman Philbin, whose name does not appear on the ballot but who is running on stickers, bristles with vigor and brims with optimism. This fight is drawing nation-wide attention.

Philbin, who was defeated by Father Drinan in the Democratic primary, acknowledges that he has a tough task in standing for election on stickers but insists he and his supporters are equal to it.

The usually affable Philbin has been hitting back hard at his critics and detractors, and the congressional fight in his district has taken on overtones of bitterness.

The Republican candidate in a race with two Democrats is State Representative John McGlennon of Concord.

Ordinarily, it would be expected McGlennon would be the beneficiary, with two Democratic candidates cutting up their party's vote. But most of the political pundits figure that Congressman Philbin is taking more votes from McGlennon than from Father Drinan.

Philbin has an army of loyal supporters in the old section of his district where he is best known. His problems are in Newton, Waltham and Watertown, which were added to his district in the last revision of the congressional sectors in 1968.

He insists that he will wind up the winner and that it's strictly academic whether he takes more votes from Father Drinan or Representative McGlennon.

Backers of both Father Drinan and Representative McGlennon maintain their man will emerge the victor when the votes are counted next Tuesday night.

Margaret Heckler Seen Big Winner in Run for 3rd Term

Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler looms as an almost certain winner over Bertram A. Yaffe of Fall River.

Mrs. Heckler has been regarded as an outstanding member of Congress for the past four years. She is a hard worker, has obviously tried to reflect the views of the people of her district in voting on major issues and has given them excellent service.

One of her accomplishments was in exposing defects in bullet-proof vests being issued to our combat troops in Vietnam. Her action in obtaining speedy correction of those defects is credited with saving the lives of many young Americans serving their country on the other side of the world.

The guessing is that Mrs. Heckler will be the top Republican vote-getter in her 10th congressional district which sprawls from Wellesley down to Fall River and that she will win by a big plurality.

Yaffe Misstatements Ignore Facts On Heckler Record

A certain amount of leeway is allowed any candidate in criticizing his opponent in a political campaign. The standards of accuracy are not the same as in civilian life.

But Bertram Yaffe of Fall River, the far-left candidate who is opposing Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler, seems to have gone beyond reasonable bounds in criticizing and even distorting her voting record.

For example, Mr. Yaffe charges that a vote for Heckler is a vote for Nixon. President Nixon wishes it were. While Mrs. Heckler respects the President, she votes her own convictions and the concerns of her district.

In a letter to the voters Mr. Yaffe charged that Mrs. Heckler is unconcerned about the oil shortage threatened for the coming winter.

The fact is that Mrs. Heckler has been such a leader in seeking a solution to the oil shortage that the New England delegation in Congress picked her to write to President Nixon about New England's fuel oil needs and to request a meeting with him on it.

Mr. Yaffe is using the old political gimmick of demanding a debate. The fact is that Congresswoman Heckler has debated Mr. Yaffe at Candidates' Nights in Attleboro, Sharon and on Tuesday night of this week before the Natick League of Women Voters.

There have been other misstatements by Mr. Yaffe which, in the interests of politeness, might be termed inaccurate. But these should do for openers.

Mr. Yaffe is a professional protester and leads just about every protest in Fall River. His protests against Mrs. Heckler have a hollow ring.

Mrs. Hicks On Her Way To New Career on Capitol Hill

Another young woman from Massachusetts probably will assume a seat in the historic Congressional Chamber next January. Mrs. Louise Day Hicks appears headed for victory over Ex-Congressman Laurence Curtis and Daniel J. Houton in the district now served by Speaker John W. McCormack.

Curtis, a Republican, once represented some sections of that all-Boston district on Capitol Hill and is generally expected to poll more than the normal GOP vote. He would have a better chance of winning if Houton were not in the contest.

Curtis ran for Congress so it would give him a forum from which to preach the doctrine of President Nixon's policies in Indochina.

But he and Daniel J. Houton, the independent candidate, are standing for election in a district that is overwhelmingly Democratic and where victory in the Democratic primary is almost tantamount to election.

Don't Invalidate Your Vote For Governor and Lt. Gov.

For the first time the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor are running as tickets in this election. In the past a voter could mark a cross or pull a voting machine lever for a Governor candidate of one party and then cross party lines and record his choice for the Lieutenant Governor candidate of the other major political party.

Technically that cannot be done next Tuesday. It definitely cannot be done if you vote for the Democratic or Republican candidates.

Sargent and Dwight are listed together on the ballot, as are White and Dukakis.

If you vote for White and Dukakis or for Sargent and Dwight, don't try to vote for the Prohibition or Socialist Labor candidates for Governor or Lieutenant Governor. It will invalidate your earlier vote for the Democratic or Republican candidates if you do.

The manner in which the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor are listed on the ballot is confusing. If you desire to vote for White or Sargent, record that choice and then disregard the listing of the Prohibition and Socialist Labor candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor. Whether the latter could actually be elected is open to legal debate.

Bill Baird Backs Spaulding; No Panic in Kennedy Camp

With supporters like Bill Baird, a candidate for high office really doesn't need any opponents.

So it must have been with mixed emotions that Josiah A. Spaulding read in the newspapers that William R. Baird was abandoning his own write-in campaign for the U.S. Senate and was endorsing Si Spaulding instead.

In truth, we had not realized that Mr. Baird was running as a write-in candidate against Spaulding and Senator Edward M. Kennedy.

We thought Mr. Baird had retired from the senatorial battle when a court ruled that his name could not be placed on the ballot as an independent candidate for the U.S. Senate without his submission of the 61,000-plus signatures required by law.

We hope this will not bring the wrath of Mr. Baird down upon our head once again, but we would most politely venture the opinion that Mr. Spaulding already had enough trials, troubles and tribulations, to say nothing of problems, without having the endorsement of Mr. Baird added to them.

Mr. Baird and Mr. Spaulding agree on the abortion issue. Spaulding supports the New York concept of abortion. Ted Kennedy takes an opposite view. It is somewhat doubtful that Mr. Baird's action in extending a helpful hand to Mr. Spaulding will cause any panic in the Kennedy camp.

Voters Should Understand Questions On The Ballot

At least six questions will appear on the election ballots in all cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth. (There will be additional questions in some communities.)

Four involve proposed amendments to the Massachusetts Constitution. The fifth question seeks an expression of public opinion as to how the war should be ended in Vietnam. Question No. 6 contains four sections on the issuance of liquor licenses.

These are important questions. Every voter should understand what they mean and decide how he will record himself on them before going to the polls. It will be a mistake for anyone to wait until he gets in his polling booth before attempting to digest the significance of these questions.

Question No. 1 involves real property classification. A Yes-vote would allow the Legislature to classify real estate according to the use made of it, such as residence, business and industry and would permit local assessors to tax it at different rates in accordance with its use. A No-vote would maintain the present system of taxing all real estate at the same rate.

Question No. 2 involves the abolition of one-year residence in Massachusetts as a requirement for voting in a state election. A Yes-vote would allow a person to

LETTERS TO THE GRAPHIC

Relates Israel's Aid To Jordan

Editor,
The Graphic:

My family and I are Newton residents who are spending a year in Jerusalem where my husband is teaching at Hebrew University. We find it interesting to compare the approach to the reporting of events in the Middle East in American communications media with the reality of the situation here.

It seems to us that the coverage in the United States is often remiss in two areas: (1) personal safety and security of civilians and (2) Israel's general public image.

Before we came here, for example, we were warned by many "knowing" people that we were taking our lives in our hands, and that we would be in a constant state of terror and crisis.

Nothing we read in the papers reassured us to the contrary. In fact, we find our daily lives to be normal, peaceful and certainly as secure as they were in the United States.

In he second, and perhaps more important area, Israel's image abroad, Israeli's are often wrongly depicted as machine-gun toting, neo-Fascist imperialists. Israel's image in this regard suffers at least as much from errors of omission as of commission.

Was it, for instance, reported by the American and European press, that following Nasser's death, Arabs in the administered territories felt free to mourn openly, to gather in large numbers for funeral processions, and even to send delegations to Cairo?

Or is it common knowledge that during July and August, 4,000 citizens of Arab countries were allowed to visit their friends and relatives on the West Bank as part of the summer visitation program? Lest this sound patronizing, it is important to remember that Israel and her neighbors are in a state of war!

Even more significant was Israeli Aid to Jordan during her recent Civil War, a remarkable event which also received little acclaim in the non-Israeli press.

Was it generally know that, in addition to being the first country to send food and medical supplies to Jordan, Israel opened her hospitals to any women and children (terrorists included) wounded in the Jordanian conflict?

Headstart Cut

Editor of The Graphic:

We are writing on behalf of the Newton Headstart Advisory Committee to enlist the support of the Newton community relative to a proposed Headstart budgeting reduction of approximately 10 percent which would result in a hardship to the city.

Presently, there are 30 youngsters serviced in the Newton Headstart Program and we are operating with an extensive waiting list. Perhaps, the most representative testimony to the value of the program has been expressed by the present and alumni parents involved.

Their comments vary, however the recurrent theme is always the same — "not only has our child benefitted but so has our entire family as a result of the Headstart Program!"

Newton cannot stand a reduction at this time. We urge an increase in funding so that youngsters presently on the waiting list may be included and benefit from this program.

It is our hope, that Newton citizens will join us in this quest by writing their elected state and federal officials and make known their desire to have funds increased rather than decreased on behalf of Headstart.

Yours sincerely, vote in a state election after living for six months in a Bay State city or town. A no-vote would maintain the present one-year residence requirement.

Question No. 3 asks whether the minimum age for voting in a state election in Massachusetts should be lowered from 21 to 19.

Question No. 4 asks whether 240 single member House districts should be established in Massachusetts. If approved, this would break up all districts which have two or three State Representatives. It also provides that after the next state census in 1975 the senatorial and representatives districts must be approximately equal in the matter of population instead of registered voters as at present.

Question No. 5 which asks your preference on the future course of action in Vietnam has three sections. You make the choice which conforms with your views. But you can only MAKE ONE. The alternatives are:

A. Win a military victory.

B. Withdraw our forces in accordance with a planned schedule.

C. Withdraw all our armed forces immediately.

The vote on that three-pronged question will have no official effect. But it should and undoubtedly will make an impact on U.S. Senators and Congressmen from Massachusetts.

Finally, Question No. 6 is the four-section liquor license question which appears on the ballot every four years. In order, the four sections involve the sale of hard liquor by the glass, the sale of beer and wine, the sale of bottled liquor and the issuance of licenses to hotels.

In scattered communities there are questions on the ballot asking whether the State Representative from that district should be directed to vote to reduce the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 240 to 160 members.

Issue Warning Of 'Flim-Flam' Operation Here

Newton police urged residents of the city, especially the elderly, to call police at once if anyone telephones to say he is a bank examiner and needs help to straighten out a savings account.

This was a warning that such fast - talking thieves, or "flim-flam" artists, may be returning to operate in the city.

In the past the scheme has bilked people out of their savings. If they draw money from their account to "help" the self-styled bank examiner, a "policeman" appears and explains that the money is needed for evidence in a court case.

Of course, as soon as the money is handed over the men disappear — and so do the savings.

He's not looking for ways to spend your money.

Politicians are smart, but they're dumb about one thing: Money.

They seem to think that if you throw enough money at a problem it'll go away.

Frank Sargent doesn't think that way.

Maybe because he didn't grow up with politicians.

He worked in the outdoors, ran a store, and still has a storekeeper's respect for a hard-earned buck.

He knows how to say No.

He said No to the legislators' pay raise, No to an extra pay hike for state employees,

No to extra welfare payments, No to the big insurance companies when they demanded higher auto insurance premiums.

The man who wants to be Governor can't seem to say it.

The man who is Governor can.

With him in there, there's hope.

Hair Anatomy

Do you know the main parts of hair? They are the hair shaft which is the part outside the skin. And the root, which is the portion under the skin. It is there where growth takes place.

Let us examine the hair shaft. It has three sections or layers of cells. First, the cuticle. It consists of an outer layer of protective scales. These scales are arranged similar to shingles on a roof. Second, the cortex. This is the major part of the hair shaft. It is the area where coloring and permanent wave action takes place.

Third, the medulla. This is the innermost layer, also called pith.

Women Voters Back Move To Lower Age of Voters

Announcement has been made that the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts have reached consensus favoring the amendment to lower the voting age to 19 years. Across the state members are hard at work publicizing their support of this amendment change by a "Yes" vote on referendum question 3 in the forthcoming elections.

In Newton, League of Women Voters members are actively at working making fliers available throughout the city explaining their support; requesting speaking time at local organization meetings; and planning an all-out effort to reach all voters at the polls on Election Day with a poll card reminder to vote "Yes" on referendum question 3.

Last spring at the League of Women Voters National Convention the representatives voted to lower the minimum age for League members to eighteen years. During the summer members throughout the state were informed of the pro's and con's on the issue and then voted.

The vote of the Newton members reflected the overwhelming support across the state for a League position in support of extending the right to vote to all citizens eighteen years of age and older.

There is at this time a Federal Law passed by both the House of Representatives and the Senate and signed by the President of the United States lowering the voting age in all states to eighteen years. However, its constitutionality is being questioned and a ruling by the Supreme Court is now necessary.

Should the Supreme Court rule that changing the voting age by statute is unconstitutional, the voting age in Massachusetts will be determined by the results of this referendum. The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts believes that the young adults of Massachusetts should have a peaceful means within the political system and structure itself to express their views.

Members of the League of Women Voters believe that this would encourage the participation of these young people at an age when they are enthusiastic, interested, and knowledgeable about government and politics.

They feel that many of today's nineteen and twenty year olds pay taxes and are judged in many cases s adults in courts of law. They state that our youth are involved in carrying out our foreign policy, therefore they ought to have a voice in choosing the people who determine what that policy will be.

There would be approximately 251,000 new voters in 1971 if the voting age is lowered to nineteen years (assuming 80 percent of those eligible register, which is the norm in Massachusetts). This represents 7.8 percent of the total number of voters.

Polls measuring the pattern of voting by young voters in terms of party affiliation or conservative versus liberal policies show that there is no appreciable departure from the voting pattern of the general voting population.

This special group will cater to people who have ten pounds or less to lose and who also wish to learn the art of maintaining a weight loss. Emphasis will be placed on teaching the members how to incorporate "forbidden foods" into a regular eating plan while still keeping the calories down andd the nutritional factor up. (Incidentally, the flavor stays up too!)

Those who wish to register may do so that evening or the following week. Classes will be every Thursday thereafter at 7:30 p.m. for six weeks and attendance is very important as vital new information is given out each week.

Anyone who may find the evening inconvenient may feel free to attend another Mini-Loser group in Brookline which will offer Open House nn Wednesday, Nov. 4th at 9:30 a.m. at Temple Kehillath Israel on Harvard street.

Anyone who has a "weightier" problem may still join a regular Diet Workshop class at any meeting. More information is obtainable through the main office in Newton.

He's the man whose professional background in the area of law enforcement and corrections makes him the one man qualified for the job.

When the job calls for compassion, he's got it. That's why he's separated children from hardened criminals throughout Massachusetts jails. When the job calls for courage, he's got that too. That's why he's fighting for prison reform and against a political machine... and winning.

And that's why a lot of Democrats, Independents and Republicans, regardless of party ties, have endorsed him for Sheriff.

Now it's up to you.

You've got a good man in there. Hang on to him.

"Our goal," states Mr. Henry Beaudet of Saint Bernard's CSC, "is not simply to learn more about these areas of deep human concern, but to devise practical programs which can be brought to bear on the grave problems which burden and divide the people of our Community, our State and our Nation."

Furthermore, the Catholic representatives are making a special effort to invite the social concerns chairmen, or their equivalents, from the many Protestant Churches and Jewish Temples of Newton.

As Dr. Frank Drinan, CSC Chairman of Sacred Heart Parish notes, "Often the members of the Jewish and Protestant congregations are already deeply involved in the areas which we are investigating. They have long established and experienced social action committees, whereas ours are just entering on the scene. What we are doing is in a sense trying to catch up, to add the missing link to what could be a truly interfaith effort within our Community."

"The next step," adds Mr. Thomas Fitzgibbon, CSC Chairman from Saint Philip Neri Parish, "may well be to evolve a joint Catholic-Protestant-Jewish conference. In fact, the most important result of this Study Planning Day could be that it will pave the way for such a fully interfaith cooperation."

Because the November 14 event will involve planning workshops, the number who can effectively participate is necessarily limited.

Admission will be by ticket, and only those who preregister will be assured of admission. The registration fee of two dollars will cover the cost of arrangements and lunch. The Day will go from 9:30 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.

Tickets can be obtained from the Invitation Committee which includes: Miss Mary Iacono and Miss Peggie Cutler of Our Lady's CSC; Mrs. Helen Drinan of Sacred Heart's CSC; Sr. Maureen Joyce and Mr. James McGourty of Saint Bernard's Parish; Mrs. Nora Howley of Corpus Christi CSC; Mr. Thomas Fitzgibbon of Saint Philip Neri CSC; and Mr. and Mrs. Guerard H. Howkins of Saint Ignatius Parish.

Other members of the Joint Conference which is sponsoring this Day are: Dr. Thomas J. Ryan, CSC Chairman of Corpus Christi Parish Council, with Commission member Mr. Wallace V. DeCourcey, and Council member Mr. J.L. Connelly; Dr. Stuart B. Martin, CSC Chairman, and Mr. Mark V. Dooling, CSC Vice Chairman of Our Lady's CSC, with Commission member Mr. Leo Gilligan; Mrs. Mary Jo Alexander, Mr. Robert P. Carey, Prof. Edward L. recognizing his own personal achievements.

He is presently the chairman of the national executive committee for B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League activities.

Guest speaker Arnold Forster, the General Counsel and National Civil Rights Director for the Anti-Defamation League referred to Rose as a "little giant" in terms of his contributions to the causes of human rights through ADL for more than a quarter of a century.

Other speakers who cited the achievements of the 1970 award winner were Cong. Phillip Philbin, Howard Whitmore Jr. Director, Bureau of Solid Waste Disposal who extended the greetings of Governor Francis Sargent and Monte G. Basbas, Mayor of Newton.

The program was opened with the Welcome by Lewis B. Songer, executive vice-president of the chamber, followed by the Invocation delivered by Rev. Newell H. Curtis Jr., First Church in Newton, United Church of Christ.

Richard M. Salamone, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Needham extended his community's greetings and Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Temple Emanuel gave the benediction.

In his address outlining the past year's activities of the two-town chamber, a combined venture slightly over one year old, Mr. Nicolazzo noted, "Since our merger we how have over 520 members, highest in 55 years, -- and we find more and more that we increasingly work with many aspects of the community other than business."

As part of the "Action 70" program of the chamber Nicolazzi pointed to the activities in both communities involving work on the drug problem, efforts to back low and moderate income housing, working on new zoning ordinances, setting up a personnel council to help ease the unemployment situations, and working with the schools to help high school youngsters find employment.

Mayor Basbas called the accomplishments of the combined chamber over the past year "Fantastic! - Your report of activities shows a program of community involvement which entends far beyond the business field."

We need this man.

Let's face it. John McGlennon is the best-qualified man we can send to Congress.

That may underwhelm you for modesty.

But it's overwhelmingly true.

At 35, John McGlennon has the energy, the enthusiasm, the vigor and vision of youth. But he has the maturity that comes of raising a family, of intense involvement in community life, of service in the Army.

So do a lot of other people, you say?

What a lot of other people don't have is a record of legislative experience. John McGlennon is a veteran of over 1500 roll calls in the Massachusetts House. His career is distinguished for the more than 100 bills he has authored.

John McGlennon is a full-time, professional legislator. Do you know what he's doing while others are getting things said?

He's getting things done.

He will support our government at the Paris Peace Talks. And in a sane withdrawal from Indo-China. He will continue his fight for the broader enforcement of pollution laws. And for greater respect for our system of law.

Those are just a few of the reasons why we need John McGlennon.

And he will win. Not just because he has the support of Democrats, Republicans and Independents. Not just because he's a regular guy that people can talk to.

He will win because he's right. And that's the best reason of all.

Vote John McGlennon
The choice is clear.

South Soccer Club Makes It 2-1 For Win

Newton South's soccer team halted a two - game losing streak with a tie - breaking goal in the fourth period to edge Weston, 2-1, last week.

Dave Smith booted the winning tally at the 12-minute mark of the final stanza after an unusual play had knotted the contest for the Wildcats.

Andy Savitz, the Weston goaltender, scored his team's only point when a charging penalty against South gave him an opportunity to shoot. His shot beat Lion netminder Dave Cohen.

Newton South notched its first goal of the game at the 10:20 mark of the second period on a penalty kick by Rick Izen, which stood up until Savitz's goal.

Cohen, with excellent defensive support, had to turn aside only nine Weston shots. Savitz, superb in a losing cause blocked 15 South attempts.

The Lions are 4-2-1 in the Dual County League and 4-3-1 overall as they chase their first ever winning soccer season.

Gymnast Show November 13th

Newton residents are invited to the exhibition by the Springfield College gymnastic team to be held at the Needham High School on Friday (Nov. 13) at 8 p.m.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Exchange Club of Needham, will include some of the finest gymnasts in the country. They combine athletic ability and showmanship into a two hour show that guarantees to make fans of at least 90 percent of the viewers. This team, which is booked three to four years in advance, rarely repeat shows in one locale because of their heavy schedule. The women's team, under the captainship of Mary Ni will also perform the Olympic events.

South Lions Run Into Hot Wayland To Lose By 38-8

By LEWIS FREEDMAN

There's very little to the good that can be said about the Newton South football team's performance, last Saturday.

Wayland, perennial Dual County League champ, spoiled the Lions league debut with a devastating 325-yard ground game, 38-8.

South was sky - high for their league opener, but fell flat on its face. The gridsters coming off a tough 10-8 loss to Boston Latin were hoping to avenge that defeat and make their league presence felt from the very beginning.

It didn't work out as planned.

The Warriors, totally unintimidated by the Lion's previously well - publicized defense, rolled up a quick 14-0 first period lead, added another seven in the second and put 17 more up on the board in the second half.

South managed its lone score in the fourth quarter to avert a shut - out when quarterback Ron Izen fired an 18-yard touchdown strike to halfback Howie Haimes and then followed with the two - yard conversion pass to end Larry Feldman.

Wayland back Bob Peck was the games offensive star with 120 yards rushing in only eight carries and touchdown jaunts of 22 and 43 yards.

The Lions, aftera quick start have dropped two consective games and are now 3-2.

While the big boys were faltering to their second straight loss, the Newton South jv was reeling off its third straight victory after an opening - day loss.

The Lions pulverized previously unbeaten Weston 30-8 as Steve Bucavales ripped through the Wildcat line for two - six - pointers on runs of six and 22 yards — the second game in a row that he has accomplished the feat. He also added two two - point extra - point plays.

Halfback Paul Nissen tallied one of the other TDs on a 35-yard scoring burst and added a conversion. However, the most exciting play of the game was executed by Ned Moan who went 95 yards on a quarterback sneak.

2 Record-Breaking Races Are Highlights Of Harrier Event

By Lewis Freedman

Two of the fastest races in Newton South cross - country history highlighted this week's action at Mt. Ida Junior College's grassy 2.6 mile course.

However, South star Chuck Pottey won neither of them, although he did turn in the second and fourth fastest times of his career.

League - leading undefeated Acton - Boxboro paid a visit to Newton, last Tuesday, and waltzed off with its ninth straight victory, 18-43.

Howie Scribner, who beat Pottey earlier this season, but had to set a course record to do it, came very close to adding another mark to his collection with a blistering 13:10. Two weeks ago Wayland's Lloyd Keyes set the route standard of 13:08.

Pottey placed second in 13:26, his second best effort, but once again Dave Whitneys three - year - old school mark of 13:22.4 just eluded him.

Captain Mike Leblanc was the Lion's only other top ten placer at 14:50 in eighth.

Newton South put its best team effort of the year together, last Thursday, but unfortunately found itself embroiled with second-place Lincoln - Sudbury, which sports a 9-1 mark. So South went down to its tenth consecutive loss.

Unbeaten LS ace Ernie Taylor blasted a 13:26 clocking pulling away from Potteys 13:36 in the last 600 yards. The two ran head to head the whole race and together passed the first lap mark in 6:30.

One and a half miles out Pottey moved out and opened a five-yard lead, but Taylor moved right back and started to slowly build his lead until his final margin of ten seconds.

LeBlanc captured seventh in 14:33, only five seconds above his previous best, but again he was the last Lion in the top ten in the 19-42 defeat.

Despite their relatively low finish South's next four finishers all bettered their lifetime bests. Junior Matt Williams chipped 10 seconds from his personal record to 14:56, while sophomores John Mason, 15:12 and Steve Burgess, 15:31 chopped large blocks from their times. Junior Howie Frutkoff, who started the season on the jv has progressed to 15:20.

Th Lion jv, also winless was also toppled by Lincoln. Newton's top finishers were Jim Thorne, third in 16:18 and Dave Ress, fourth in 16:19.

Pottey has now won five of the nine races he has run.

The long - legged senior has recorded more sub - 14:00 timings at Mt. Ida than any other Lion harrier in history with a total of five and two home meets remaming.

His first sub - 14:00 clocking came in his junior year versus Newton at 13:59. He has improved to a best of 13:24 against Wayland this year and has notched the times of 13:26, 13:31, and 13:35 in-between.

Newton Holds Arlington High To Scoreless Tie

By BOB WORDEN

Arlington High came up with the big defensive plays in Saturdays confrontation with Newton, as the Trojans battled the Tigers to a thrilling scoreless tie at Arlington's Warren A. Pierce Field.

Newton seeking revenge from last years 20-14 reversal by Arlington, had several offensive drives thwarted by a pesky Trojan defense. Both teams now maintain identical 3-1-1 records. The game marked the fourth whitewash the Tigers have posted in five outings.

The Black and Orange threatened early in the first quarter, as they put their running attack into first gear at 8:17, driving from their own 38 yard line to the Arlington 13. In a third and five situation, Junior QB Paul Grillo went to the air, once to Chuck Pendergast and on fourth down, he threw to tight end Mark Herendine, both passes were reputed by a tough Trojan defense.

In the second quarter fleet footed back Pendergast returned an Arlington punt 57 yards to the seven yard line. The Tigers inched their way to the three yard line in three plays. And with fourth and three yards to go to pay dirrt, Grillo missed connections with Paul Johnson, and another Tiger scoring bid went by the boards.

Middle guard and Co Captain George Gardner made the defensive gem of the afternoon, picking off a bullet pass at the line of scrimmage and scrambling 15 yards to the Arlington 25. But, once again the Red and Grey defense rose to the occasion as they stopped Newton last threat cold.

The Tigers got the ball back late in the fourth period; but the clock ran out before they could get another drive going. The final score - Newton 0 and Arlington 0.

SIDELINE COMMENTS: Brockton boosted their record to five wins and no losses with their victory Saturday and it doesn't look like anyone is going to stop them. The Shoe City with four games remaining plays B.C. High, Waltham, Arlington and Weymouth No.

Waltham high is in trouble, they dropped their third contest in a row and relief is not in sight. Lowell, Brockton, Newton and Somerville fill the remaining four games on their schedule, and when they finish, they'll look like an army coming home from war.

It looks like Newton Coach Jim Ronayne will have to shelve their passing attack, as once again it was under par. Maybe I'm just a spoiled Tiger football fan, the last two years Newton has been blessed with Colin Clapton and Brian Keefe, both whom were outstanding passers.

Next Saturday Medford travels to Dickinson Stadium for a 1:30 encounter with the Black and Orange.

Newton Pop Warner Hold Tough Dedham Club to 16 - 8 Score

The Newton Athletic Association Lions lost to the Dedham Dynamos by a score of 16-8 in an action packed thriller which was greatly appreciated by one of the largest crowds to ever witness a Pop Warner Game in Newtoon.

Dedham halfback Mike O'Hurley scored all his teams' points as did Kevin Hoban for Newton. It appeared that Newton's defensive unit was tight for the first series of downs as the Dynamos moved to a quick score. Mike O'Hurley went 25 yards around left end for his teams first score. O'Hurley was shaken up on the opening kickoff when jarred by a tackle by Mike Smith.

Newton picked up two first downs on the ensuing kickoff but were forced to punt. The Newton defense got over its tenseness and halted Dedham's next series. Newton then proceeded to march down to the Dedham 25 yard line where with a second and four, Quarterback Bob Kinsella handed off to halfback Kevin Hoban who burst through the Dedham line untouched behind the blocks of Greg Moan and Ron Collins.

It appeared Kevin was going all the way with one defender to beat and the desperate lunge by the defender jarred the ball loose and Dedham recovered at the ten.

From there the battle was a sea saw affair until the waning moments of the half when Dedham scored their second touchdown. With a second and ten from the Dedham 48 and Newton expecting a pass, O'Hurley broke through the line and raced 52 yards with just 24 seconds left in the period for the second Dedham score. O'Hurley rushed the points and Dedham led 14-0.

Newton fumbled on their first offensive play in the second half but held Dedham's offense in check for the rest of the game. Midway through the third period Newton Quarterback Kinsella hit halfback Kevin Hoban with a slant in pass and Kevin put two fine moves on the Dedham secondary and ran 53 yards for the touchdown. Kevin rushed the point and Newton trailed by six 14-8.

Newton had an excellent opportunity in the fourth period but could not capitalize. Dedham at their own thirty had a fourth and one and elected to try and pick it up rather than punt. The Newton defense stacked up O'Hurley and took over on downs. However, the Dedham defense proved too much. Quarterback Kinsella was nailed in the endzone for a safety to cap the scoring.

The Dedham coaches feel that this year's edition of the Dynamos is one of their best in the last eight years. They also added that the Newton game was one of the most exciting and evenly matched teams that they have seen during this same period.

Newton will host the Needham Rockets this Sunday at the Newton Highlands Playground at 1:30 p.m. A victory will insure a third place finish for the Lions.

"There is a definite violation of the Health Code in this area and we feel the City of Newton is remiss in not remedying this situation," the report charged.

In addition, the PTA said that the use of the auditorium for two fifth grade classrooms "is an unacceptable environment for learning; there are too many children for this room." According to the building report the ventilation in the auditorium is poor and there is limited storage for classroom materials.

Other needs pointed to were for more storage space and a health room.

In addition, the report said, in the school year 1971 Lincoln-Eliot will again have a classroom crisis as five grades will require three classrooms each for an overall total classroom need of 19 rooms. "By school year 1972 we will need 20 classrooms," the report added.

As stop - gap measures to solve the classroom problem the report recommended reclaiming the area adjoining the back wall of the gym for up to four classrooms and the area over the one story portion of the original building next to the parking lot as a possible place for classrooms.

Committeewoman Eleanor Rosenblum, chairman of a Buildings Committee currently studying needs of all the school buildings in the city, said her group felt it wise to study the total needs of all school facilities and come in with a package of recommendations and a statement of priorities. Such a report should be forthcoming around the first of the year, she said.

Committeeman Richard Douglas, also a member of the buildings committee, said he had strong sympathy for the grievances expressed and it was not a matter of being "insensitive or unresponsive" but more a need to set up criteria within a limited budget.

Committeeman Alvin Mandell suggested that some problems might be alleviated by transfering temporarily some students to Stearns School, possibly Carr School and Bigelow Junior High.

Committeeman Francis Frazier replied that moving children to other schools would not meet with the approval of parents in the Lincoln-Eliot district. "They are a close knit group," he said and "I have been told that they would go to almost any lengths to keep their children in the Lincoln-Eliot School."

Newton Organization Gives Vital Assistance To Folks

A young mother was forced to bed with no one to care for her children. She called NEWTON FISH (244-2021) and was provided with temporary child care until she could manage again.

A retired woman suffering temporary blindness tried in vain to get help. A neighbor called NEWTON FISH at 244-2021 and volunteers provided meals and care until prmanent help could be obtained.

These illustrate just wo of the two hundred and nine services which NEWTON FISH has provided since it was organized nearly a year ago. Having read of other existing FISH services a group of sixteen Newtonville residents put their heads together and decided to try FISH in their area. These people felt Newton would benefit and their personal beliefs could be acted upon.

The Central Congregational Church, Newtonville Methodist Church and St. John's Episcopal Church, along with anonymous donors contributed generously to an operating fund and on December 1, 1969 NEWTON FISH was providing twenty-four hour contact with FISH volunteers ready to assist any neighbors in need.

Membership in NEWTON FISH has grown to one hundred and two with volunteers answering phone inquiries, providing meals, transportation, companionship to shutins, emergency child care, housework and information on community services.

A steering committee loosely guides the organization. Mrs. James Ferner, Mrs. Elaine Mezoff and Mrs. Karen Corning are co-chairmen. Mr. and Mrs. Jay Henke, Mrs. Connie Coschetto and Mrs. Irene Buck handle publicity. Mrs. Karol Downey, Mrs. Becty Sabeth, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fitzgibbon and Mrs. Clare Gleason are area contacts for various parts of the city.

NEWTON FISH membership requires no special talents or money - just a desire to help and a concern for your feloow man. Volunteers include men and women of all ages and backgrounds. FISH volunteers are busy working people who serve according to their own ability and available time. It is not necessary to be affiliated with any denomination or church in order to be a FISH volunteer.

Volunteers are needed from throughout Newton. Anyone interested in offering his services or learning more about FISH can do so by calling the FISH at 244-2021 or any of the steering committee listed above.

No charge is ever made for help from FISH. Financial contributions are gladly accepted from groups or individuals to help our expenses. Contributions can be mailed to NEWTON FISH, 449 Newtonville Ave., Newtonville, Mass.

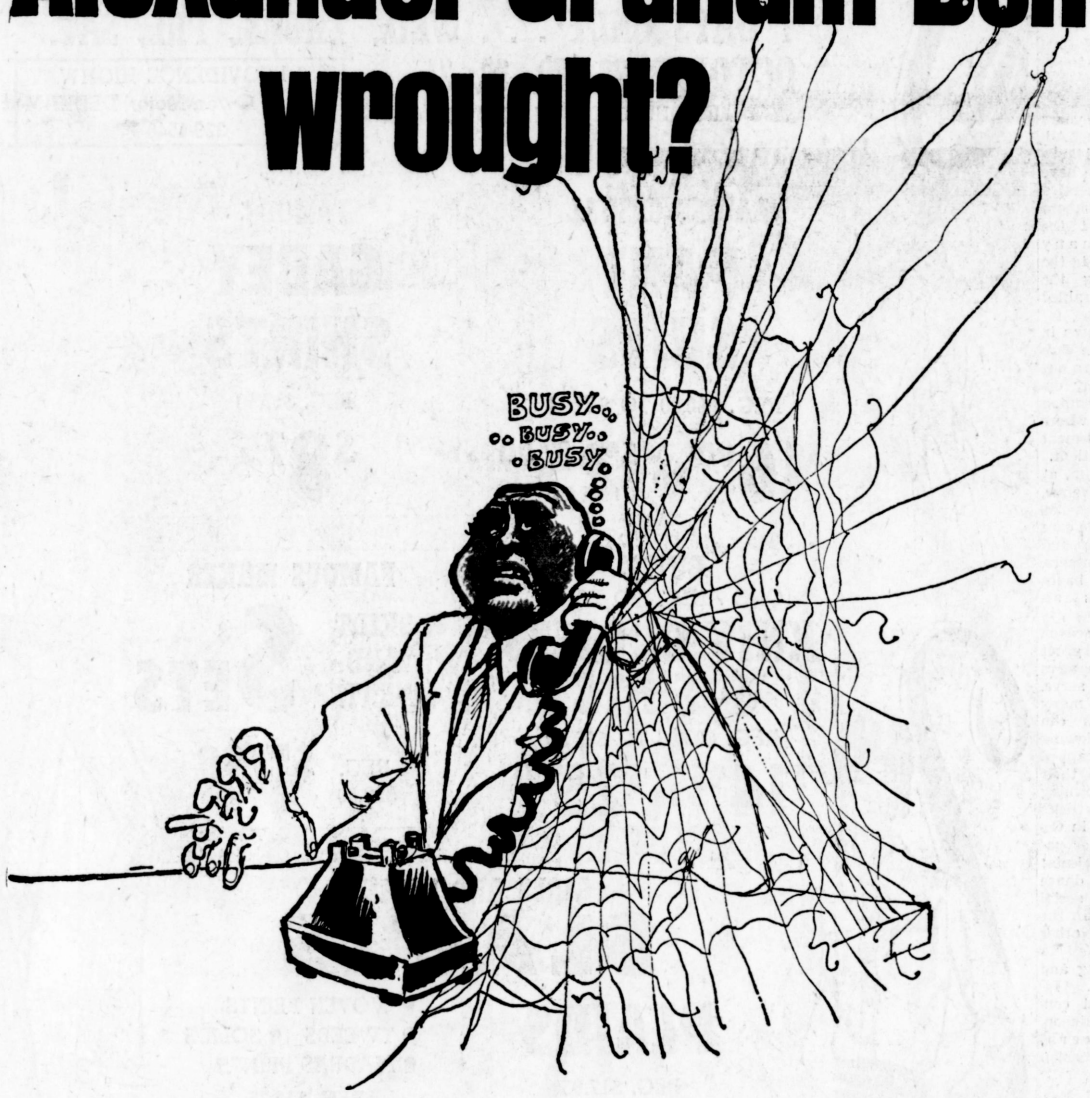

Any person who needs help in an emergency situation is urged to call NEWTON FISH twenty-four hours a day. Put this number near your phone - 244-2021.

Officers Greet Commissioner

What hath Alexander Graham Bell wrought?

Please don't hate us. You may be among the many patient people who have so much trouble getting through to us on the telephone. That annoying busy signal comes back at you repeatedly when you dial our Bank. One of our clients reports that he dialed us over 20 separate times before his call went through! If such a condition upsets you ... IMAGINE HOW WE FEEL!! As a matter of fact, there are many times when we can't even get a dial tone to call you.

We've discussed this condition long and often with the officials of the Telephone Company. They report that rapid growth in the Waltham area has so seriously overloaded telephone facilities that normal, dependable service can't be maintained at the present time.

In the meantime, we hope you will appreciate our position. We have more than enough lines, as well as up-to-date switchboards and efficient operators. Unfortunately they aren't able to give you prompt service because the clogged telephone system doesn't even let your calls reach us. In addition to the frustration it can cause you, it can cost the Newton-Waltham Bank valuable time, delayed negotiations and lost business.

So, please don't blame us. We've done everything we can to provide good telephone service. While we await corrective measures by the Telephone Company, please continue to be patient, and when your call does get through to us, we promise you the prompt and dependable service you deserve.

Minter Speaks In Newton

Medicaid Here Is Complete Program

The Commonwealth's new Commissioner of Public Welfare spoke frankly about the status of Medicaid and listed four immediate goals to bring greater cohesion and organization within his department to the health care financing program, during remarks delivered recently before the 725-member Charles River District Medical Society meeting in Newton.

"Few people understand the volume and complex scope of Medicaid in Massachusetts. It is a $237 million program, averaging out to a cost of roughly $84.12 per recipient. It also is a very complete coverage program," said Steven Minter of Needham, appointed Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Welfare on August 11, 1970.

In the hope of shaping Medicaid into an improved system of health care financing, he cited four immediate objectives of the Department of Welfare.

They are: a refinement of program goals, in order to define program needs; improving working relationships and working action plans with other state agencies; action to resolve a vendor payment snarl that has hampered the program; and activities to bring about more effective development and evaluation of the Medicaid program.

Mr. Minter explained that Medicaid had been enacted in the hope it would represent a health care solution for poor and low income families. In practice, it served to create a demand for care that outstripped the supply, causing complications such as rising costs, administrative complexity, late payment, and extensive paperwork.

He characterized the Massachusetts Medicaid program as "a very complete package," with coverage ranging from inpatient hospital services through skilled nursing home care, dental care and a wide range of physician and other health services. In terms of expenditures, the Massachusetts program ranks third, after New York and California.

In terms of volume, it has required the Department of Welfare to processs an average of 234,000 medical care bills monthly for recipients, and 15 million vendor payments annually. Half, he indicated, involve care furnished to persons 21 years of age and under.

He also indicated Medicaid provides a window through which politicians and appointed officials can see the complexity of medical care, gaining greater understanding and appreciation of health care costs, services, delivery and development.

Alluding to a report of a federal task force on Medicare and Medicaid, he reminded that health care increasingly becomes a matter of public policy, with a need for better management that overcomes duplication and fragmentation, and leads to greater coordination of services and agencies.

He indicated Medicaid was one change in an era of change, in which people began to regard food, clothing, shelter and adequate medical care as basic essentials. He felt the program has altered many traditional patterns of care and represents a positive force toward further, necessary alterations.

Mr. Minter listed five solid accomplishments of Medicaid during the initial years of its existence.

They include: placing an economic floor below which medical expenses have no claim for Medicaid participants, access to health services for individuals who had never received health care services or had received them sporadically, free choice of health care provider by individuals covered under Medicaid, financing that has helped attract physician and dental service to low income areas, and enrollment procedures that have uncovered many families who hitherto attempted to exist with inadequate resources.

More than 93,000 pinball and slot machines installed in Belgian pubs and amusement centers netted the state 831 million francs ($16,630,000) in taxes in 1969, the Ministry of Finance reports.

Dear Marshall:

The past twenty months of my term as Governor have shown me the need of a stronger and more effective legislature, not merely in support of my own programs, but in the over-all handling of the public's business.

I'm pleased that you have made the decision to commit yourself to seeking legislative office because I believe you can bring to public service the background and training that can enrich the legislature and, therefore, improve the performance of the state's lawmaking body.

Girl Scout Leader Tells Of Scout Trip To Brazil

Recently, Mrs. David Kendall, Leader of Cadette Girl Scout Troop 596 visited Junior Scout Troop 614 of Auburndale (Burr School) to tell them about the Juliette Low Expedition in Brazil, 1970.

Mrs. Kendall took ten Senior Scouts from all parts of the United States, including Alaska, Florida, California, Maine, Missouri, Illinois, Maryland, and Alabama, on tiis journey to promote international friendship.

This was the first group of American Girl Scouts to go to Brazil, which is a full-member country of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts.

Mrs. Kendall told Troop 614 that the Scouts in Brazil are called "Bandeirantes," which means "Pioneers."

Mirs. Kendall, who took a crash course in Portuguese, met the Senior Scouts in New York City, where they spent a four-day orientation period before they took off on a ten-hour jet flight to Rio de Janero.

The expedition was sponsored by the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund, to which Girl Scouts on all levels contribute every year, usually during National Girl Scout Week.

Mrs. Harold Mahon, Lezder of Troop 614, thought it would be particularly exciting and appropriate for her Junior Scouts to hear Mrs. Kendall, because last March they won the honor of keeping Westdale Neighborhood's World Association Flag for six months because they contributed the highest percentage to the Fund per Junior Scout in the Neighborhood, a section of Bay Path Colonial Girl Scout Council. Also, Troop 614 is currently working too earn the World Neighbor Badge and the Sign of the Star.

Mrs. Kendall told how each of the ten Senior Scouts, in addition to studying Portuguese, also prepared a project about the U.S.A. too show the "Bandeirantes."

Projects such as: teenage fashion, famous Black people (past and present), and the Girl Scout story. After spending 30 days in Brazil visiting Rio de Janero, San Paulo, San Salvador, and Brazilia, they returned to New York City, where they spent a three-day evaluation period.

After showing her interesting slides and Brazilian souvenirs, Mrs. Kendall told the Junior Scouts about the National and International opportunities that are available for Scouts from ninth grade upwards.

She stressed that every girl is special, and should follow her interests, which may lead her to one of these expeditions, such as: Mountaineer '71, World of Arts - NYC, Wyoming Trek, Michigan Arts Workshop and Saddle-Straddle in the new Girl Scout Center-West in Wyoming.

Three-Way Congressional Fight Boils in Newton

Election-

A number of factors are expected to combine to produce a whopping 85 per cent turnout of the voters in Newton next Tuesday. They are:

The fight between Governor Francis W. Sargent and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White to carry the Garden City in their struggle for election as the state's next Governor.

White was extremely strong in Newton in the Democratic primary. Sargent has extensive support in the city. Their battle to capture Newton is expected to be a tight one.

The contest between Mayor Monte G. Basbas and Representative Irving Fishman for election as State Senator from the new senatorial district which takes in Newton and Watertown has drawn the spotlight of public attention.

Originally, this was created as a Democratic district. It is unlikely any Republican candidate other than Mayor Basbas would have a real chance of winning in it, but Basbas is considered to be making a strong bid, and the race is regarded as close.

Basbas and Fishman were the opponents in Newton's mayoralty election a year ago. Mayor Basbas won by a narrow margin. In effect, this has been a rematch between the two, and it has been a rugged, two-fisted clash in which each candidate has lashed out at the other.

Tests of public sentiment indicate that the fight between Basbas and Fishman, both Newton residents, will be close in their home city. Uncertainty exists as to how they will fare in Watertown which is normally Democratic but on occasion has gone Republican.

Great public interest is focused on the three-way contest for the seat now held on Capitol Hill by Congressman Philip J. Philbin.

The embattled contenders are Father Robert F. Drinan, former dean of the Boston College Law School and the Democratic nominee; Representative John McGlennon of Concord, the Republican candidate, and Congressman Philbin who is running on stickers.

Father Drinan defeated Congressman Philbin in the Democratic primary and made an outstanding showing in Newton in doing so. Representative McGlennon captured the Republican nomination in the Sept. 15 voting.

Congressman Philbin's name will not appear on the ballots or voting machines next Tuesday. In order to vote for him, his supporters must place a sticker on the ballot or, in the case of Newton, on the roll of paper behind the slide on the voting machine in a line directly - but not immediately - above the listing of the candidates for Congress.

If anyone prints Congressman Philbin's name onto that roll of paper, he also must include Mr. Philbin's address or the vote will not be counted.

Two interesting contests are being waged for election as State Representative as a result of openings in the legislative district on each side of the city.

In the 12th Middlesex district, comprising Wards 1, 2, 3 and 7 of Newton, where a vacancy exists as a result of the death of the late Representative H. James Shea, Jr., the contestants are Representative Paul F. Malloy of 66 Wildwood avenue and Paul H. Guzzi of 9 Joseph road, the two Democratic candidates; Robert Gaynor of 109 Cabot street and Marshall D. Glen of 133 Temple street, the two Republican candidates; and Alan G. MacNeil of 168 Walnut street, an independent.

An opening also was created in the 13th Middlesex House district, which includes Wards 4, 5, 6 and 8 of Newton, when Representative Irving Fishman sought promotion to the State Senate.

Republican candidates in that district are Representative Theodore D. Mann of 21 Littlefield road who is standing for reelection and popular Police Safety Officer Charles E. Feeley of 102 Floral street.

A hard-fought contest for election as Sheriff of Middlesex County is being waged by Republican Sheriff John J. Buckley of Belmont and Democratic County Commissioner John F. Dever, Jr., of Woburn.

Middlesex ordinarily is a Democratic county. But Buckley, who was appointed by Governor Sargent to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late Sheriff Howard Fitzpatrick, is an exceptional Republican vote-getter.

No less a Republican political powerhouse than Senator Edward W. Brooke accompanied Buckley on his campaign swings through the county earlier this week.

Six questions will be listed on the voting machines in Newton. These are outlined and explained in James G. Colbert's political column in this edition.

The interest in Tuesay's election is reflected by the fact that Executive Secretary Licarie of the city election department already has received approximately 500 absentee ballots.

These ballots will be removed from their outer covering on Friday, and the inner envelopes will be examined to determine if the envelope has been notarized and signed by the voters as required by law.

If that requirement has been met, the absentee ballots will be delivered to the 33 polling places on Tuesday to be deposited in ballot boxes there. If the envelopes containing the ballots are not notarized and signed, the ballots will be rejected. Persons who will be out of the city next Tuesday can still get absentee ballots, Licarie declared.

Basbas Points To His Record

Mayor Monte G. Basbas today urged that the voters of Watertown and Newton make their decision on the basis of who is "the Senatorial candidate best equipped to deal at the state level with the vital issues affecting the present and future of the new district."

"From the beginning of my campaign," Mayor Basbas said today, I have consistently dealt with the important issues facing the average citizen - crime in the streets, high taxes, pollution, drug abuse, among others."

"As I have commented previously,'" the Mayor continued, "voters want to know what we will do about the hard facts of present day life and what our record shows we have done."

"Voters," I am sure, "Mayor Basbas observed," retain their intelligent, cool, judgement even when a campaign heats up."

"Voters are giving my candidacy broad support because they feel we need representation in the Senate that is experienced and responsive. They realize that it is in the cities and towns where the day to day action is, and believe my nineteen years' record and experience in dealing with problems of the state's eighth largest city makes me better qualified to give them the kind of representation they need."

"The issues I have emphasized are only some of the areas that need experienced, down-to-earth attention - if we are to relieve the tension of our time."

"I believe," Mayor Basbas declared, "We need action now to solve the problems of today's average citizen - which have been too long ignored at the state level."

"The fundamental decision facing the voters of Watertown and Newton," Mayor Basbas concluded", is who is better equipped to recognize the day to day problems and whose record indicates the capacity to deal with them. This is the decision that every responsible voter must make on Nov. 3."

Fishman Against Part-Time Mayor

Rep. Irving Fishman, candidate for State Senator in the new Newton-Watertown district, today supported the final report of the Newton Charter Commission in recommending that the position of Mayor be explicitly described in the Charter as a full-time job.

Fishman declared that "it was generally recognized that the Mayor of Newton is a full-time job when the salary was raised to $27,500 last February. The present Mayor himself has stated on more than one occasion that he considers his job as Mayor to be full-time. Mayor Monte Basbas is also a candidate for State Senator and has said he will hold both public offices if elected Senator on November 3rd."

Rep. Fishman charged that if Mayor Basbas is elected State Senator "Newton would not be getting full value for its Mayor's salary". Fishman said that "if Basbas is Mayor and Senator, he will be part-time in both jobs. Newton is paying for and needs a full-time Senator; one man cannot do both jobs," Fishman concluded.

Rep. Fishman accused Basbas of "gross misrepresentation" in attacking his voting record in the House of Representatives: "First of all," Fishman said, "roll calls do not reflect attendance at House sessions or committee hearings". I have been recorded on 2,364 roll calls in my legislative service, and these include all the controversial issues that have come before the Legislature during that time."

As for Elderly Housing, the State Constitution requires that such bond issues be formally approved on a roll call vote. But these votes are merely a technicality, they are always passed by an overwhelming vote; and I have voted for literally hundreds of them during my service in the House," Fishman stated. "The real question is, was I ever absent when my vote was needed for Elderly Housing; and the Mayor knows that I was not."

"Though I have never been invited to a meeting by the Mayor 'to fight high Middlesex County assessments,' I have consistently supported a revaluation formula to reduce Newton's share of Middlesex County assessments (these roll call votes are on record)."

"Furthermore", said Fishman, "I have consistently voted to cut the appropriations in the Middlesex County budget," Rep. Fishman voted to abolish county government as "archaic and unresponsive to the needs of our community."

Dwight Calls For Trade Expansion

One method of improving the economic climate of Massachusetts is to expand the state's international trade, according to Don Dwight, Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Dwight, speaking at "Go Global Day" activities at Hanscom Field recently, pointed out that Massachusetts has a large stake in the international market.

"Local industries export close to one billion dollars' worth of manufactured goods a year, a large portion of which is in the electronic data processing field, one of the most rapidly expanding industries in Massachusetts.

Dwight noted that expanding and broadening international trade particularly in the electronic data processing (EDP) field is both an economic necessity and a challenge to industry and government.

The Lieutenant Gubernatorial candidate announced that Massachusetts will, in 1971, launch its first overseas trade mission.

"In addition, our Department of Commerce and Development, working with the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Commerce, will establish an International Trade Visitors' Bureau to assist international trade oriented companies and individuals who are promoting Massachusetts exports.

"We will also develop and implement a major advertising International Trade Program to assist Massachusetts industries in expanding local exports," Dwight continued.

This "Go Global Day" concept marks the beginning of a major Massachusetts global marketing program designed to stimulate the economic growth of the Commonwealth through the increased expansion of exports of selected product categories.

"Massachusetts can and will meet the challenge of other rapidly growing industrialized nations in the international markets," Dwight concluded.

White Endorsed By Medical Men

Nineteen Newton area health professionals were among the physicians, dentists, psychologists, social workers and nurses throughout Massachusetts who have officially endorsed Boston Mayor Kevin White for Governor.

Joining with health professionals throughout the state in support of the candidacies of Mayor Kevin White and Rep. Michael Dukakis were Sidney Alexander, M.D.; Jack Bloom, D.D.S.; Ernest Davidow, M.D.; James Harrison, M.D.; Howard T. Herman, M.D.; Mark Hirsh, D.D.S.; Herbert J. Hoffman, Ph.D.; Charles Ladoulis, M.D.; and Charles Lipson, M.D.

The group, known as Health Professionals for White and Dukakis, praised mayor White's record in the field of health care.

They noted the following achievements of the White administration in improving health services in Boston. Mayor White has:

—Initiated Operation Turnoff, a program of drug treatment and control

—Worked successfully to restore the accreditation of Boston City Hospital

—Begun a $27 million first phase of rebuilding Boston City Hospital

—Initiated a comprehensive health program under which hospitals assume responsibility for neighborhood-oriented primary care. Over 80 percent of the City is now covered by the commitments of nine major Boston hospitals.

—Established four new neibhborhood health clinics and a neighborhood well-baby clinic, and —Created a new day care unit in the City's Department of Health and Hospitals.

Sen. McCarthy Is Drinan Endorser

Senator Eugene J. McCarthy (D-Minnesota), who won the Massachusetts Democratic Presidential primary in 1968, spoke at the meeting to lend his support to Fr. Drinan.

"You've done a great thing here," the Senator said. "In no district in the country have the issues been drawn quite so clearly, and drawn within the Democratic Party. The effort to make the Democratic Party stand for something—that was an all-out effort."

Discussing the current administration, McCarthy said, "I'm at a loss to credit them. For the first time in our history we have a military establishment without a military action which is adequate to it. The policy seems to be to try to catch up. What can happen under those circumstances, all of us must fear."

The Senator proposed two remedies for this problem. First, through the presidential election, and second, by limitation and restraint on defense spending.

Fr. Drinan and McCarthy first met in 1949, when the Senator was a Congressman and Fr. Drinan a student at Georgetown University Law School. Fr. Drinan was one of McCarthy's earliest supporters in his bid for the 1969 Democratic nomination for President.

Before introducing McCarthy to the Drinan workers, Fr. Drinan declared, "President Nixon has achieved the impossible . . . he has achieved what all the economists have said was impossible . . . massive unemployment and spiraling inflation together."

Fr. Drinan received the support of Senator George McGovern of South Dakota by way of a special telephone broadcast from the Senate cloakroom. Mr. and Mrs. Alan Korman hosted the fundraising event for Fr. Drinan at their West Newton home, with Mrs. George McGovern as a special guest.

Richardson Here With McGlennon

Representative John McGlennon, candidate for Congress in the Third District, announced today that the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Eliot Richardson, will be campaigning with him next Saturday, October 21. Secretary Richardson will speak at an 8:00 a.m. breakfast at the Newton Marriott Motor Inn. McGlennon and Richardson will then participate in a motorcade through Newton, Waltham, and Watertown.

When questoined about Secretary Richardson's stand on Health Care, McGlennon said that he considered it as a "responsible approach to the health care needs of the American people." McGlennon continued, "I have not seen any concrete Health Care proposals from Father Drinan. I believe he supports a national health insurance plan. But I agree with Secretary Richardson that his is not a workable solution at this time. Just one reason is the price tag on a national health insurance plan, which would be $40 billion annually."

McGlennon said that "a variety of methods for financing health care would be superior to a single national plan. Thus individuals could choose the plan which most closely suited their needs. Prepaid group practice programs, such as the Kaiser plan on the West Coast, and the Harvard HCHP, have met with success. Private insurance plans may also exist side by side with such government programs as Medicare and Medicaid."

John McGlennon concluded by referring once again to Secretary Richardson, saying that he (McGlennon) had a "great deal of respect and admiration for Eliot. Eliot Richardson served the Commonwealth admirably as Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General. We in Massachusetts are proud to be able to share one of the great leaders with the rest of the nation in Washington.

The schedule for the McGlennon - Richardson motorcade is set to begin at 9:00 a.m., following the breakfast. They will travel through Waltham, Watertown, and Newton. In Waltham, the motorcade will travel along Main street and Moody street, from 9:15 a.m. to 10 a.m. Richardson and McGlennon will leave their cars to shake hands. The motorcade will then continue to Watertown Square, where the two legislators will spend ½ hour greeting people. Their final stops in the Eastern part of the District will be in Newton, along Washington street, between 10:30 and 11:00 a.m.

Philbin Pledges To Continue Job

U. S. Rep. Philip J. Philbin of the Third Massachusetts District, formally launched his sticker campaign for re-election with a pledge to continue his work in Washington "to keep this country strong, prosperous and healthy in every respect so that it can face every contingency that may arise."

"I do not need to tell you that we have the issues, and a record of service, of which we may well be proud, and a record of devotion and loyalty to the people of this great District, our state and our country, that time and again has been endorsed and overwhelmingly approved by the people and will be approved again in this election.

"I intend to continue my work to keep this country strong, prosperous and healthy in every respect so that it can face every contingency that may arise.

"I need not tell you that I have worked to end the Vietnam war and bring our boys home as soon as that can be done. I have always worked for a peaceful nation and a peaceful world, where all people can live in peace and understanding.

"It has taken me 28 years to achieve the seniority I now hold in the Congress, and for this district to lose the benefits of this experience, and all that it means, would be a disaster, not only to this district, but to our state and to the nation itself.

"Let us unite in this fight, which is the fight of our country, our people and ourselves. Let us work together to insure continued representation from this district in Washington by one who believes in the greatness and future of this country, and who will continue to work for its ideals and its interests, oppose its enemies, foreign and domestic, so that under God, it can and will go on to greater heights of glory, freedom, prosperity and peace for the American people and the world."

Basic Needs Are Cited By Mann

Representative Theodore D. Mann today cited the "unfinished business awaiting legislative action at the next session of the House and which must be dealt with if basic needs of the state are to be properly met". Rep. Mann declared:

"These are matters which call for programs that will effectively serve the economy, health, and welfare of our community, and early legislative action is certain to have a high priority."

"Of immediate concern," Mann noted, "is the pressing need to eliminate the present uncertainty and difficulty in securing adequate and reasonably priced insurance protection by automobile owners, businessmen, and homeowners. The present situation is hobbling our economy and causing anxiety."

"Mass transportation continues to be a major challenge," Rep. Mann declared, "and solutions can longer be delayed without serious hurt to the metropolitan area and the component communities.".

"There is urgent need to provide adequate interurban and intra/community public transportation especially as these relate to areas of Newton (such as Upper Falls, Highlands, Oak Hill, West Newton, and Waban), among other sections of the city. At present residents of these areas have difficulty gaining access to existing public mass transportation because feeder-lines are inadequate.

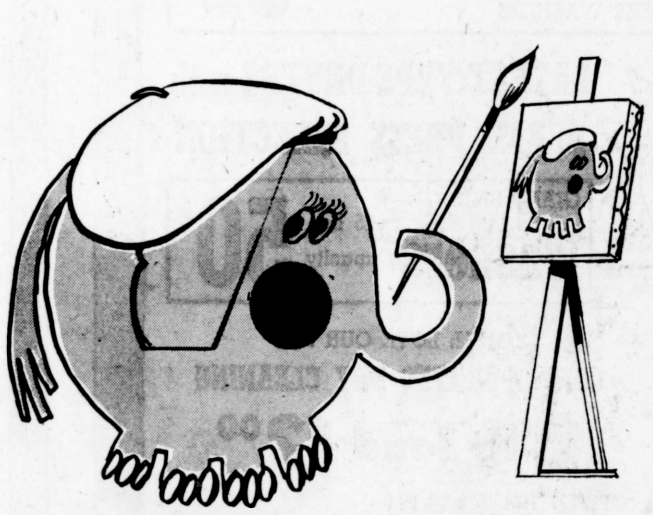

"During my three terms as State Representative and as Newton Alderman for four terms, my continuing concern has been with legislation and programs related to education, health, and youth. I hope that as a result of my broad experience through the years I will be able to help provide solutions for some of the difficult problems facing us in today's complex society," Mann concluded.

Mann Headquarters on election day, it was noted, will be at the Charter House Motel on Boylston street, in Newton where a volunteer staff will furnish voter information and transportation to the polling places. Those needing transportation are invited to call Mann Headquarters at 969-0530, 969-0531, and 969-0532.

Expect Landlord Case Decision On Nov. 4th

Judge Franklin N. Flaschner in Newton District Court announced he will give his verdict on Wednesday, Nov. 4 in the case of landlord Abraham Ginsberg who was on trial on a series of charges of alleged sanitary code violations at property he owns in the Upper Falls section.

The charges against Mr. Ginsberg were brought by the City which at the outset of the case sought some 70 complaints of code violations. Several of the complaints were dismissed by Judge Flaschner because city inspections showed that the necessary work had been completed.

Trial of Mr. Ginsburg opened on Wednesday afternoon, following Judge Flaschner's visit to the Ginsburg property in the morning.

In a brief closing argument Deputy City Solicitor Charles H. Morang declared "this defendant has been given more leniency than he should have. There is no excuse whatever for what he has not done."

Morang recommended that if Ginsburg is found guilty he be fined $20 per day per violation, and that he be given an additional two weeks to rectify all violations before he be required to pay a fine.

Judge Flaschner said Morang could file an argument to sustain why Ginsberg could be fined on a continuing, day-to-day basis.

Defense Attorney Lewis Barr contended that "the complaints are invalid because they are based on invalid orders." He said the idea "that Mr. Ginsberg has not been co-operating over the years has not been substantiated. There has been no wilful flaunting of the law."

Barr continued "something is innately wrong in requiring a man to pour a fortune of money into properties from which he doesn't get much return."

Ullman, Mrs. Victor Penzer, Mrs. Matthew Kessler, and Mrs. Marvin Krims. The Peace Center is happy for the cooperation of the School Committee and the administration of the individual schools and P.T.A. organizations.

Special appreciation goes to the P.T.A. UNICEF Mothers in each school who will be collecting the filled boxes at the end of UNICEF week.

The junior and senior high students of Newton, also under Peace Center sponsorship, are developing their own student led UNICEF programs.

Miss Laura Greene, a student at Newton South, is Peace Center coordinator, and also serves on the Peace Center Advisory Council.

Andrea Applebaum is heading the Warren Jr. High School Halloween UNICEF collection, and at Newton South activities are being planned by Michael Forman, Rebecca Snider, Jon Levin, and Patti Madfis. Mark Gilbert and Bill Gadon head the UNICEF Committee at Cambridge School of Weston.

Last year's Halloween collection of pennies, nickels and dimes added up to $3¼ million here in the United States. And this year young Trick or Treaters hope to increase this to celebrate thie 21st anniversary of that first small collection of $17 by a group in Philadelphia.

Even $3¼ million may seem insignificant to meet the needs of 900 million children of the developing countries, where per capita incomes of as little as $50 a year make proper food and medical care impossible. But it's a start - and UNICEF has learned to make the Halloween coins go a long way.

For example, a single penny can provide the vaccine to protect a Moroccan child against tuberculosis. For a nickel, UNICEF can buy a ball point pen for a school child in Guatemala. And $2 from a Trick or Treater's collection box can buy tools for a community vegetable garden in the Philippines.

Moreover, UNICEF operates on a self-help basis. Its aid is offered in the form of equipment, supplies, and training grants - never in cash - and the assisted countries contribute from their own scant resources an average of $2.50 in locally available supplies and personnel for every dollar's worth of UNICEF materials.

Although two-thirds of UNICEF's income comes from the governments of UN member nations, it depends heavily on public contributions to support its programs.

Last year, the United Nations Children's Fund budgeted $47 million to the fight against disease, malnutrition, and ignorance in 114 countries. For 1970, it has approved $54.5 million to assist over 250 projects in 112 countries.

Health services demand the largest proportion of UNICEF's resources, ranging from midwife training to environmental sanitation and water supply systems.

Increased awareness of the damaging effects of malnutrition on young children has led UNICEF to aid in the development of high-protein, low cost food supplements, milk conservation plants and school nutrition programs.

Another expanding area of UNICEF assistance is the education of increasing numbers of children to higher achievement standards.

An important aspect is developing educational programs relevant to community needs, including training of vocational teachers. In many developing countries, particularly in Latin America, urban problems have intensified with the migration of young people to the cities. UNICEF helps there with family counselling and youth activity programs.

For its many quiet accomplishments in the developing world, UNICEF was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1965. More recently, a Presidential proclamation designated Halloween as National UNICEF Day.

UNICEF's Executive Director, Henry Labouisse, challenged us all when he said recently, "In an era when the words 'reaching the moon' no longer mean striving for the impossible, but simply describe a practical accomplishment, there is no longer any excuse for the world to permit its children to go hungry in body or in mind."

Last year's contribution to UNICEF from Newton school children and friends of UNICEF amounted to $4,316.99, and the UNICEF Committee hopes it will exceed $5,000.00 this year. The Peace Center welcomes inquiries about the Halloween UNICEF Collection from anyone who would like to help or may need additional UNICEF boxes.

Information can be obtained by calling Mrs. Elizabeth Merrill, 969-7900, at the Peace Center Office in the Eliot Church of Newton. Donations to UNICEF may also be made through the Newton Community Peace Center at any time.

Fern Marx, Claflin PTA safety chairman.

In making her request of the School Committee, Miss Howard, noted that "Claflin School is endowed with the loveliest school setting in the city - aesthetically speaking. Conversely Claflin is subjected to the poorest site in the city - recreationally speaking."

Miss Howard was referring to the fact that Claflin School is located on the top of a hill on Lowell Ave.

Miss Howard also told the School Committee that if Claflin's recreation needs are not given a high priority by a committee now studying the overall building needs of Newton's schools, she would like to know. The PTA at Claflin School has indicated that if the city would not take care of the playground needs in the near future perhaps the parent group might attempt to raise the funds and make it a private project, Miss Howard said.

1."The drop-off and pick-up drive and related parking spaces along Lowell Ave. should be eliminated. The existing asphalt paving should be removed and the area loamed and seeded and the street frontage along Lowell Ave. should be planted with a dense line of evergreen trees.

The dropping-off and picking-up of children would occur along Lowell Ave. and utilize the existing sidewalk.

This change would provide a turf area that could be used for modified softball games as well as running and related play activities.

2. the entrance drive leading to the upper parking lot should be widened to 22 feet. This would require some blasting oof ledge, however I would consider the present condition very hazardous.

3. The upper parking lot should be redesigned to provide 30 parking spaces, a well defined circulation route for truck deliveries and a fenced plan area for court games."

We need this man.

Let's face it. John McGlennon is the best-qualified man we can send to Congress.

That may underwhelm you for modesty.

But it's overwhelmingly true.

At 35, John McGlennon has the energy, the enthusiasm, the vigor and vision of youth. But he has the maturity that comes of raising a family, of Intense involvement in community life, of service in the Army.

So do a lot of other people, you say?

What a lot of other people don't have is a record of legislative experience. John McGlennon is a veteran of over 1500 roll calls in the Massachusetts House. His career is distinguished for the more than 100 bills he has authored.

John McGlennon is a full-time, professional legislator. Do you know what he's doing while others are getting things said?

He's getting things done.

He will support our government at the Paris Peace Talks. And in a sane withdrawal from Indo-China. He will continue his fight for the broader enforcement of pollution laws. And for greater respect for our system of law.

Those are just a few of the reasons why we need John McGlennon.

And he will win. Not just because he has the support of Democrats, Republicans and Independents. Not just because he's a regular guy that people can talk to.

He will win because he's right. And that's the best reason of all.

Vote John McGlennon
The choice is clear.

Noted Violinist To Be Local Symphony Guest

Denes Zsigmondy, violinist, whose concert career has extended all over the world will make an appearance with the Newton Symphony at its concert Sunday evening, November 15, at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Zsigmondy will play two Beethoven romances for violin and orchestra, and the very demanding Ravel Tzigane. Performances of the well known Romances often have been limited to violin solo with the accompaniment of piano, although Beethoven wrote them for solo violin with orchestra.

The Romance in G will be receiving its premiere performance in its original form at this concert. Music critic, Michael Steinberg, has said of Mr. Zsigmondy that he did "not know who now gives more beautiful performances of the violin and piano repertory from Beethoven to Bartok."

It has also been said that his playing "could not be imagined more poetic and filled with purer tenderness", a most needed quality in the execution of the delicate Romances.

Upon Mr. Zsigmondy's recital here several years ago, Boston critics were loud in their acclaim saying never had they "heard a perfomance of such power and intensity". Michael Steinberg added that "he creates a most amazing illusion of being the inventor and only player of his instrument and the composer of all the music, no matter how diverse." , at the concert Mr. Zsigmondy will have the opportunity of exhibiting his extraordinary technical proficiency in the execution of the intense Ravel Tzigane. The work opens with an introduction for violin alone, requiring great authority in interpretation and a strong intense flow of sound. After the orchestral entrance the violinist must have sovereign command of fiendish technical difficulties in his part. Mr. Zsigmondy's previous critiques lead one to expect he will measure up to all of these demands superbly.

At the age of four, Denes Zsigmondy was first drawn to the violin. Self-taught, he played folk-songs, opera arias, and themes from the classical literature. Then after several years of private lessons, he studied at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, completing his baccalaureate as well as more advanced studies in pedagogy and art history.

The great teacher, Carl Flesch, who heard Mr. Zsigmondy for the first time in the master class of Geza de Kresz, encouraged his individualistic interpretations. Awarded a scholarship for study abroad, Mr. Zsigmondy received further inspiration from Zino Francescatti.

He has given several master classes, most recently while participating as soloist and concert-master at Dartmouth College's Seventh Congregation of the Arts in the summer of 1969.

At this concert the orchestra will also play Beethovens' "Battle" Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A major.

For ticket informaton call 244-0011 or 449-0164. Good reserved seats are still available. Those interested in attending are urged to order tickets this week, if possible. Tickets will be mailed promptly. Three concert subscriptions are available for the concerts of November 15, February 28, and May 16. Mail orders to Newton Symphony, Box 64, Newton Highlands, Mass, 02161.

Recent Deaths

Services Held Yesterday For Jacob W. Shoul

Jacob W. Shoul of Brookline, one of the nation's most outstanding life insurance agents, died Monday, October 26, after a brief illness.

Born in Lithuania, he emigrated alone to the United States at the age of 12. Self-educated through correspondence and night schools, he entered the life insurance business with The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York at the age of 21, following his U.S. military service in World War I.

From then on, his records and achievements in the life insurance business, as well as his role in developing and counselling the New England shoe and leather industry, are legend.

After 54 years with MONY, he achieved every honor and goal of the life insurance industry, and has been titled MONY's "Man Of All Years." One of the original 32 founders of the coveted Million Dollar Round Table in 1927, he is the only member in the world to have qualified for this elite group for all 43 consecutive years.

Known throughout the country as "Mr. Life Insurance," his many writings, speeches, and achievements have appeared in "FORTUNE," "INSURANCE" and countless other national magazines.

His zeal and success in promoting the use of life insurance for sound family and business planning has been recognized as a significant contribution to the growth of life insurance to one of the strongest and soundest financial industries of the world.

Ageless in determination, optimism, and continuing self-education, after a lifetime of accomplishments when most men seek to slow down, Jacob Shoul continued to practice, write, lecture, and counsel to the very day of his death.

In addition to his long associaton with MONY, he also enjoyed a close and noteworthy business association with his son-in-law, Irving Backman, also a leading MONY agent.

Earlier this year he was honored by the Town of Newburyport during their annual "Yankee Homecoming Week." For the first time in their history, this old New England community chose to honor an emigrant as its "native son."

In their selection they stated that Jacob Shoul was an inspiration and a legend who had come to this country in search for a better way of life and through his devotion to family, community, and ideals, had made the entire community a better place to live. The boy who adopted Newburyport at the age of 12, was adopted by his first home as a "Native Son" at the age of 75.

In a book published in 1966, "If I Had My Life to Live Over," the life story of Jacob W. Shoul, there is described his early years in Newburyport, and especially a most significant friendship that evolved between this emigrant boy called "Jake" and a minister of the Congregational faith, whose ancestry was traced back to the Mayflower.

This minister of another faith described "Jake" as a symbol of something very precious, containing all the essentials of worthy living and the essence of the American Story.

"Jake" Shoul was asked on many occasions to speak from the pulpit of his minister friend who compared "Jake's" faith in God and dedication to righteous causes to his own service as a minister of God.

No wonder Jake Shoul summed up his own life with, "If I had my life to live over, I would do exactly as I did in the past. Nothing would be different . . ."

Mr. Shoul was an honorary Trustee of Temple Emanuel in Newton, a founder and honorary life member and leading benefactor of he Two/Ten Associates, the philanthropic arm of the shoe and leather industry of the nation, and one of the original, as well as a continuing benefactor of Brandeis University.

He was a life member of the Brandeis Associates, the Hebrew Home for the Aged, the National Association of Life Underwriters, as well as countless other civic and philanthropic organizations throughout the country.

Services were held at Temple Emanuel, Newton, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

He leaves his wife, Ida, his son, Doctor Melvin I. Shoul, and his daughters, Doctor Bernice Shoul and Charlotte Backman, as well as six grandchildren.

One of every four cars will be involved in a traffic accident this year. Seat belts won't stop accidents, but they will reduce deaths and injuries. The Massachusetts Medical Society asks, which of the four drivers will you be?

Don't waste money on diet fads to reduce your waist. Americans reduce their savings by $100 million annually on phony reducing products. If you're overweight go on an MD prescribed diet and stick to it. You'll be pleased with the end result, advises the Massachusetts Medical Society.

If at first you don't succeed, you're running about average, or maybe even above.

The Biggest Roast Beef in Boston
You'd better believe it.
We've hired us a carver with strong wrists, a sharp knife, and an honest eye.
And here's what keeps him honest. If he ever once carves you a slice of roast beef that weighs less than a pound and a half, you get a second slice free. And he's in deep trouble.
So he makes sure every juicy, succulent slice completely covers the big, oversize platter it's served on.
Here's what comes with your roast beef: a nice big salad, ice cold and crisp. A nice big baked potato with sour cream. Your choice of vegetables. And a golden Yorkshire popover swimming in butter. It's not so much a dinner as a challenge. A roast beef lover's Everest.
Meet that challenge tonight, why not? Just because it's there.
Call Frederick for reservations.

Headlights and Highlights From Newton South High

By JANICE E. KAPLAN

A rock concert to raise money for the sophomore class is currently being planned. The concert will be held November 10 in the Newton South cafeteria.

Russ Lyons, senior advisor to the sophomore class, suggested the concert as a fund raising affair which will also serve as a school-wide activity. The Fogge, formerly known as The London Fogge, will be the main group at the concert. Another "mystery" group will also play.

Current plans call for a light show to accompany the concert.

The concert will be open to the public and a crowd of about five hundred is expected.

Three Newton South students are named as National Merit Semi Finalists. George Berman, Mark Ziering, and Andy Cohen received the honor and will be eligible to become Finalists, and compete for a Merit Scholarship to be awarded later in the year.

Nine South students received Letters of Commendation for scoring well on the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Examination. They include: Andrea Berly, Martha Howard, Roberta Humphrey, Andrea Husher, Robert Levine, Michael Niederman, Russell Phillips, Nancy Ratner, and Linda Tufts.

A drama workshop was recently held at Newton South. Miss Hilda Simms, a well known actress, led the workshop.

Miss Simms brought with her three young professional actors from New York. They helped to create an innovative workshop working on everything from pantomine to dance routines.

Interested students were part of the four groups which met two periods daily for one week. Much time was spent on the straight dramatic and musical aspects of acting.

Open Campus remains an issue at Newton South. A committee is currently exploring the proposition. An open campus would be a college type schedule where students must only attend classes, and need not be in school during free periods and other times of the day.

Club Notes

Numerous clubs are once again underway at Newton South. This year, if one wishes to organize a new club it must merely be entered as a project in the Newton South Union. This allows great flexibility and diversity in club activities.

The debating team is off to an exciting start. The first debate of the season will be against Brookline High on the national topic: "Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Establish, Finance, and Administer Programs to Control Air and Water Pollution in the United States."

The team will debate the topic all year as part of the Suburban Debating League.

Mark Ziering is president of the debating team. Other officers are Robert Levine, Janice Kaplan, and Mike Niederman. Mr. Atkinson is the faculty advisor. The large membership promises a successful year.

The Math Lab has once again started this year to aid students in math. The tutors are students who are interested and successful in math, and wish to help others better understand the subject. Students, who need help may arrange a time or come to the math lab. The lab was organized by Mrs. Savides.

The junior class committee organized a bake sale on Saturday, October 24. The sale was to raise money for the junior class and enable them to be active this year. Class members supported the sale as PSAT's were held on Saturday.

QUESTION NO. 4

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held July 15, 1968, received 181 votes in the affirmative and 66 in the negative, and in a joint session of the two branches held May 15, 1969, received 208 votes in the affirmative and 54 in the negative?

YES NO

SUMMARY

The proposed amendment to the Constitution amends the existing constitutional provisions which direct the division of the Commonwealth into 240 representative districts and 40 senatorial districts, it provides for a census of the inhabitants of each city and town in the Commonwealth in the year 1971 and in every tenth year thereafter. The census in 1971 is to be the basis for determining the representative and senatorial districts for the ten-year period beginning January 1, 1975. Each subsequent census shall be the basis for determining the districts for each ten-year period beginning the fourth January following each census, so that the census in 1981 will determine the districts as of January, 1985, etc.

The amendment provides that the house of representatives shall consist of two hundred and forty members, and the senate of forty members. In its first regular session following each census, the Legislature shall divide the Commonwealth into two hundred and forty representative districts of contiguous territory and forty senatorial districts also of contiguous territory. Each representative district shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants according to the census. A representative district shall not unite two or more counties, towns, or cities, or parts thereof, or a city and a town or parts thereof in one district unless the same is unavoidable. Further, no town of less than six thousand inhabitants shall be divided in forming representative districts. It is also provided that the County of Dukes County and Nantucket County shall each be a representative district, notwithstanding the foregoing. The senatorial districts, each of which shall elect one Senator, shall be formed without uniting two counties or parts of two or more counties, unless the same is unavoidable.

Each representative shall be an inhabitant of the district for which he is chosen at least one year immediately preceding his election, and each senator shall be an inhabitant of the district for which he is chosen at the time of his election and shall have been an inhabitant of the Commonwealth for at least five years immediately preceding his election. Any representative or senator who ceases to be an inhabitant of the Commonwealth shall cease to represent his district.

The amendment also provides that the Legislature (1) may by law limit the time within which judicial proceedings may be instituted calling in question any such division and (2) shall prescribe by law the manner of calling and conducting elections for the choice of representatives and of ascertaining their election.

Finally, the amendment annuls the existing constitutional provisions with respect to apportionment of representative and senatorial districts, although those provisions will remain in effect until January 1, 1975.

Hails Proposed State Take-over Or Jr. College

The Newton Taxpayers' Association applauds the decision of the School Committee to approve steps leading to ultimate take - over by the state of the Newton Junior College, the Associaton's executive Lorenz F. Muther Jr., said yesterday in a statement.

He estimated the resulting savings to Newton taxpayers at $300,000 to $800,000 per year progressively 1972-75, even taking into account a possible assumption by the City of the cost of furnishing a site within or near Newton.

Noting that the Taxpayers Association and Newton legislators had urged and filed legislation for years to close out municipal operation of the college, Muther warned that much more remains to be done before actual state financing is assured.

"While we are not at the end of the long trail yet," Mr. Muther said, "another critical corner has been turned finally, and Newton youngsters can look forward to having available a better educational facility at a lower cost to their parents in tuition, and to their fellow citizens in taxes."

Lois Pines Hits Incinerator Use

To help reduce air pollution in the city of Newton, a private citizens suit will be filed by Newton attorney and Chairman of Newton Citizens for Clean Air Lois G. Pines.

Mrs. Pines will bring action against the city of Newton in an effort to force the city to improve the efficiency of the operation of the incineratoor and to ascertain why an existing gas burner does not seem to be used.

Attorney Pines, Independent candidate for State representative from wards 4, 5, 6 and 8 stated that the Massachusetts Department of Public Health informed her that the incinerator was cited by them just last week for emitting fly-ash. Frank Reinhardt Director of Metropolitan Boston Air Pollution Control District told Mrs. Pines that all his records and numerous citations against the Newton incinerator have been sent to the Attorney General's office, which has taken no action to date.

"The incinerator is turned off during the weekend and must be started again Monday morning," Mrs. Pines continues, "and unfortunately the fly ash emmissions reaches peak level pollution for the Auburndale residents." Some time ago the city purchased a gas burner to eliminate some of the pollution. The gas burner has the purpose of heating up the settling chamber to provide sufficient draft to improve combustion.

For some unexplained reason it appears that this gas burner is not used. There are two burners, but only one ever seems to be operating -- even though it is commonly acknowledged that both burners should be in operation at the same time to fight pollution."

Mrs. Pines has been working with the Newton High Schoool Ecology Club to interest young Newtonites in the problems of their community. National Clean Air Week commences on Sunday, October 25.

Mofenson. His intelligence, commitment, ability, and integrity will serve Newton well. I urge Newton citizens to join Mrs. Fishman and me in voting for Dave Mofenson on November 3."

The Newton Coalition for New Politics has endorsed the following candidates for the 1970 General Election on November 3

Conservators Open-Space Walk Set For November 1

The Cold Spring complex of Park and Recreation land has a diversity of terrain to interest those planning to join Newwton Conservatoors, Inc. for the third in a series of open-space walks on Sunday, November 1st.

One can head for the hills or the swamps, and participants are urged to dress for a rugged trip if they plan to encompass both.

Cold Spring has a large playfield of more than 21 acres, and the younger children who have accompanied the Conservators on earlier walks may enjoy some good hard running and ball playing, and kite flying if the wind is up.

A climb up one of the hills will afford a taxpayers view of the informal dumping. A slosh into the swamp will provoke wonder at the ingenuity of those who brave thorns and mud too deposit their used tires.

There were sufficient beer cans at last view to give a healthy profit for an enterprising recycler. These insults to the natural beauty of the park are high on the list of things to show the walkers on Sunday, for they are among the negative uses of Cold Spring by a minority which deprive the majority of the park's many attractions.

The Edmands Park walk on October 18 was attended by about 85 people. Edmands Park is Recreation Department land, as is part of Cold Spring, and Recreation Director John B. Penney told of many proposals for Edmands which have been rejected over the years, some proposals which are still current, and facilities which had existed in the Park in earlier years.

Maps of the Park were distributed with the cooperation of the Planning Department.

Mrs. Worthing West, chairrman of the Recreation Commission, was on the walk, as was geologist Mrs. Kathy Barton from Boston College. Mrs. Barton described the formation of the esker, which is Edmands' most prominent geological feature. The view of Newton and points north as seen from the top of the esker, particularly against a background of fall foliage, is quite a treat.

The Cold Spring walk will begin Sunday at 2 p.m. from the playfield. The Park can be reached off Walnut Street in Newton Highlands via Duncklee street (about midway between Beacon and Forest streets). Continue on the dirt road extension of Duncklee over the Cochituate aqueduct directly into the park.

Boots are recommended for those who want to traverse the swamp areas. For further information, please call Newton Conservators Information chairman Mrs. Leon Barron (527-5214).

School Board Treatment Of Lipof Is Criticized

The Newton School Committee on Monday night was chastised by a local resident for "acting in haste in dealing with Alderman Michael Lipof", when he presented a resolution to the Board of Aldermen asking that the School Department's drug education program be made public.

Peter Dwyer, a candidate for Alderman at large from Ward 5 who said on Monday night that he is withdrawing from that race because he plans to move from the city, was also a member of Mayor Monte G. Basbas's Advisory Committee on Drug Abuse and a member of a state commission investigating the same matter.

Dwyer told the School Committee that, in his opinion, they "greatly offended the citizens of Newton in the handling of a representative of the people."

Dwyer referred to the fact that Lipof was criticized at a recent meeting of the School Committee for "shooting from the hip" because he did not formally request information about the drug education programs from anyone in the School Department before he presented the resolution to the Board of Aldermen.

Lipof had responded saying that he had spoken informally with several members of the School Department, including the Superintendent of Schools, and was not satisfied that there was an overall plan or "direction from above" in the drug education program though he was aware of many scattered and varied efforts.

Dwyer, in addressing the School Committee on Monday night, said he did not feel the School Committee was "meeting its responsibilities" in carrying out a 49 year old state law which requires instruction in the public schools on alcohol and tobacco.

Committee Chairman Manuel Beckwith said he was sure the School Department was complying with this law. "We have confidence in the Superintendent and other school administrators," he added.

Superintendent Aaron Fink said that the School Department is working and has worked with the Mayor's Committee and a Drug Committee of the Board of Aldermen. "Our efforts are extensive though not perfect, but we are working to improve our programs," Fink said. He also noted that he would accept any suggestions Dwyer had to offer.

'Cleaner Air Week' Marks Battle Against Pollutants

This is "Cleaner Air Week", as Newton joins millions of people in populated centers all over the country in acquiring more knowledge about their air intake.

The Newton Tuberculosis and Health Association said this annual campaign specializes in factual, objective information about each community's peculiar air pollution control problem and its purpose is to enable people concerned to move effectively in safeguarding the air they breathe.

"The complexity of our air pollution problems, the additional complications of population growth and new pollutants created by new products and processes are part of the story of Cleaner Air Week," (Oct. 25-31) the Association stated.

"One of the most popular recent additions of the Cleaner Air Week Campaign is the segment dealing with economics of air pollution control. It is based on the hard fact that people pay the air pollution bills -- in taxes or prices of products and services -- and they are entitled to know how much they are spending and how much control they are getting."

Encouraging and guiding a good deal of the voluntary work in this vital field is the National Air Conservation Commission, organized in 1966 by the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. Most of the 1,700 state and local associations affiliated with the letter group are conducting or supporting air pollution control programs.

For the citizen who wants to enlist in the fight for cleaner air the Norfolk-Newton Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association is a good place to make inquiries.

The Association says there are six ways each person can help clean the air:

1. Have periodic adjustments, as required, of air pollution devices on your car;
2. Have your home heating unit checked annually;
3. Report air pollution nuisances observed as soon as you discover them:
4. Keep your car engine tuned up properly at all times;
5. Discourage open air burning of leaves and other debris; discourage use of back-yard incinerators and poorly designed domestic and commercial incinerators.
6. Support air pollution control programs in your community.

Newton Youth Foundation Holds Open House For the Beginnings

The Newton Youth Foundation is planning an open house celebration for The Beginnings on Saturday, Nov. 7 from noon to midnight, at their new home the Eliot Church, 474 Centre street, Newton Corner.

That day, Nov, 7, marks one year of involvement with Newton youth by the Beginnings staff and the third different location in that period.

The first location (a store front) in West Newton was soon outgrown and the Beginnings moved to the basement of Second Church on Washington street, for the summer. Some 75 to 100 people of all ages participated in the program.

The Beginnings is an unstructed environment where young people can come to find different and more meaningful relationships and experience.

Rev. David Parachini, executive director of the Newton Youth Foundation, explained:

"There is - within the City of Newton - a number of young people who neither participate in nor contribute to the ongoing activities of our community. . . For these individuals, adolescence is not a time of growth through meaningful experience and learning. . . Rather it is a period of excessive pain, anxiety and confusion about our society."

The Beginnings attempts programs that meet young people's needs by providing a place to talk and an opportunity to rediscovering the excitement of the world they live in.

Some 5,000 invitations have been mailed to individuals and organizations involved in Newton's youth activities to share in the open house of the world of The Beginnings.

Following is the schedule of events for open house:

12 noon - Open house begins, crafts and demonstrations.

1 o'clock - Official opening of Beginnings by Mayor Monte G. Basbas.

1:15 - Presentation of People Growing Free poster to the Mayor and the United Parish of Newton.

1:30 - Activities and craft demonstrations continue.

3 - Folk dance.

5 - Informal meal served.

8 - Midnight coffee house and informal entertainment.

Activities and craft demonstrations: pottery wheels, basket weaving, jewelry, leather, woodworking, photography, silk screening, block printing, tie dying, beads, macrame, film, painting, folk dancing.

What is ahead for the Newton Youth Foundation:

1. A mobile information center designed to educate and inform the community about critical issues involving young people. The center will be staffed by young people.

2. Family education in decision-making, pill, potion and powders.

3. Listening seminar and encounter groups for adults led by young people.

4. A bicycle repair shop to provide a needed service for the ecologically aware community.

5. Development of programs to help ease the tension being experienced in many families between parents and children.

Tighten Security At City Police Headquarters

Allocation of $5,000 requested by Police Chief William F. Quinn to improve security at police headquarters in West Newton Square, has been approved by Mayor Monte G. Basbas. It involves the transfer of money originally earmarked for a new communication center at police headquarters.

The changes planned include bullet - proof glass on top of the reception desk at the station, wire mesh around windows surrounding the communication center and additional lighting of the area.

"Vietnam has gone off the front page," commented Mayor Basbas, "and has been replaced by stories of violence." He pointed out that 11 articles about bomb threats, murders and other acts of violence appeared in the Oct. 22 edition of one Boston newspaper.

Chief Quinn said his request was prompted by bomb threats, the threat of fire and the fact that persons have been observed taking both still and motion pictures of the police station.

Youngsters Rake Leaves; --Raise $116 For UNICEF

Eighty - three bags of leaves that lined the sidewalk of Dr. and Mrs. Morris Simon of 269 Franklin Street, Newton, were the visible evidence of a project undertaken this past weekend by a group of students that raised $116 for UNICEF.

Stressing that "they did it on their own" — without the suggestion or help of teachers or adults — the organizers of the project, Owen Kupferschmid, Danny Simon and Michael Lewitt, stated that they just wanted to do something constructive in support of UNICEF, as it seeks to help children around the world.

Being the fall season, they recruited a group of their fellow students at the Bigelow Junior High School, along with younger brothers and sisters, and decided to offer their services to people in the neighborhood on Saturday and Sunday, October 24-25, to rake leaves in return for a donation for UNICEF.

They exceeded their own expectations when they discovered that their efforts were quickly supported by understanding adults and their two-day effort yielded over $100.
